BULLETIN.

JUAREZ, Mex., April 6.—(AP)—Gen. Jose Gonzalo Escobar, commander in chief of the Mexican revolutionists, arrived here tonight from Chihuahua City. The train was guarded by rebel soldiers, who preceded the coaches into the city, ordering every one from the vicinity of the tracks.

NACO, Sonora, Mexico, April 6.—(AP)—A hail of bullets and a bomb fell on American soil today during an attack on this Mexican federal stronghold by forces of rebel troops, who failed to oust the defending forces. The rebels were driven back with apparently considerable losses. Although casualties on neither side could be definitely determined, the federals were reported to have suffered the least.

During the opening of the battle early in the day an American trooper, Private John Finezee, Negro, 10th cavalry, was shot in the chest in a brief encounter between a United States patrol and Mexicans believed to have been rebels at the border eight miles east of here. Other casualties on the American side of the line during the battle were listed as two Mexicans, a girl and a woman, who were slightly wounded by rifle bullets.

Drop Bomb on U. S. Soil.

A rebel plane attacking the federal position dropped a bomb on the American side of the line. It exploded fifty feet from the Western Union Telegraph office, where newspaper correspondents and telegraphers were working, shattering windows and starting a fire in a trash pile. Charles Newton was slightly wounded in the leg by a fragment of the bomb which fell in the back yard of his home.

Airplanes, tanks, infantry and cavalry of the revolutionary forces launched the long threatened attack upon Naco. The city was defended by 900 federal troops, augmented to nearly 1,500 during the progress of the battle by arrival of a train of Mexican soldiers who had been interned at Fort Bliss, Tex. The rebel attackers numbered upwards of 1,500.

Two airplanes, two tanks, about 500 cavalrymen and columns of infantry joined in the rebel onslaught shortly after dawn. These forces by noon succeeded in penetrating a cemetery east of town and drove the federals from the front line trenches, despite a withering fire. Rifle and machine gun fire from the federal trenches was supported by a single piece of artillery, a one pounder.

Use Farm Tractor Tanks.

Steel tanks, converted from farm tractors, pushed their armor plated noses up to the federal entanglements, pouring out streams of bullets from concealed machine guns while federal bullets beat a ringing metallic tattoo on their sides.

The battle raged savagely with bullets singing and whining about the adobe walls of this little Mexican town. For three hours Naco, Ariz., across the international line from here, was under fire, bullets passing directly through the town from a vicious enfilade fire directed at both flanks of the federal trenches.

The clash with the Americans came after the United States troopers had found a cache of 75 grenades near the border. While the squad was guarding the explosives, a Mexican patrol approached from the Mexican side. It was challenged as it reached the border and opened fire. Finezee went down as his companions returned the fire and dispersed the Mexicans.

The wounded trooper was brought to the cavalry camp field hospital on the American side of the line. The army surgeon said he would recover.

Shell Wrecks Locomotive.

The first hint of brewing battle came at three o'clock this morning, when a terrific blast of dynamite wrecked a locomotive inside the federal trenches here. An electric circuit supplying both Naco, Sonora, and Naco, Ariz., with lighting current had been cut four blocks from the line in the American town.

At daybreak Gen. Topete started intensive bombing operations over Naco with three planes working in relays, and marched his cavalry and infantry

16 Tugs Fail to Free Liner; Drys Kept Off

New York, April 6.—[Special.]—The French liner Paris, bound for Havre with more than 1,000 passengers, ran aground in a heavy fog early today on the mud flats off the shores of Bay Ridge, Brooklyn. So firmly imbedded was the bow of the 34,569 ton vessel that a fleet of sixteen tugboats was unable to pull her off at high tide this evening after the Paris had been lightened of 2,000 tons of fuel oil, pumped all day into lighters lying alongside.

Capt. Yves Thomas announced that he would further lighten his ship by pumping more oil, and make another attempt to get off the mud flats at high tide tomorrow morning with the aid of tugs.

Many Remain on Ship.

When it became apparent to officials of the line that the Paris might not get off the flats at high tide tonight, it was announced that tugs would be provided to land all wishing to spend the night ashore. A goodly number of passengers took advantage of the offer. Others were content to remain aboard the ship.

Reports of merriment aboard the grounded liner caused prohibition enforcement authorities to go down the bay to investigate. They boarded craft alongside from which they tried unsuccessfully to board the Paris. Officers of the Paris reported that the ship's bar was sealed tight and refused to permit customs inspectors to get aboard.

Made Left Turn Wrong.

Capt. Thomas in an interview asserted that Pilot George Oldmixon had run off his course in the fog.

"He thought he had passed the buoy," said Capt. Thomas, "but he had not. He turned to the left too soon. He was judging his distance by the speed of the vessel and the buoy was hidden by fog and another vessel."

BOY, 15, FATALLY SHOT BY OWN GUN IN HANDS OF PAL

Ernest Reynolds, 15 years old, 13771 Leyden avenue, was shot and fatally wounded last night with his own .22 caliber rifle when it was accidentally discharged in the hands of another boy. He and Peter Bell, 16 years old, 120 East 136th street, and Shields Odom, 14 years old, 13744 Leyden avenue, set out on a hunting trip and when they reached 136th street and the Calumet river they decided to load the gun. Bell and Odom assisted in the placing of the bullet while Reynolds stood by and watched. When Bell was about to shoulder the gun it discharged, the bullet striking Reynolds in the stomach. The boys ran a mile and a half to a telephone, but Reynolds died before aid arrived.

RAIN WILL BANISH HOT SPELL TODAY, FORECASTER SAYS

Thunder showers will occur today, restoring normal temperatures to Chicago after a day of record breaking heat, according to last night's government forecast.

The thermometer registered 84 degrees between 2 and 3 p. m. yesterday. It was the highest mark ever attained on any April day in Chicago, the warmest previous day having been on April 5, 1873, when the mercury climbed to 83.

While thousands of Chicagoans took to the beaches and parks for comfort, unseasonably low temperatures prevailed in California and the Rocky mountain states. Fruit growers feared for the safety of their crops, according to a dispatch from San Francisco.

At Joliet, with the temperature equaling the Chicago mark, 13 year old Werner Swain, son of Earl Swain, was seized with a cramp and drowned in Hickory creek. A boy was drowned in Chicago also. John Richard, colored, 12 years old, 2036 South State street, fell into the lake while playing with two companions on the breakwater at 39th street.

The first mosquito larvae of the season were discovered in stagnant water at 22d street and the Indiana Harbor railroad tracks, according to J. Lyell Clarke, sanitary engineer for the Des Plaines valley mosquito abatement district.

Shanks Insane, Escapes Death, Juror Reveals

David Shanks, colored slayer of Miss Jennie Meta Constance, Northwestern university summer student, will escape hanging and instead will be confined in the Chester State Hospital for Criminal Insane under the terms of a verdict to be read in Judge Robert E. Gentzel's court tomorrow morning, one of the jurors who has been listening to Shanks' insanity plea revealed last night.

The Negro, who twice escaped the electric chair when attorneys obtained stays of execution, was found insane and the verdict sealed, the juror said. Under the last stay Shanks was to die shortly after midnight next Tuesday.

Traced Through Watch.

Miss Constance, a Peoria school teacher, was beaten to death last summer in Evanston. The slayer was traced through a wrist watch which he took from the girl after he had clubbed her into unconsciousness.

The first stay, granted by Judge Denis J. Normoyle, on the eve of Shanks' execution, was issued to allow time for an appeal to the Supreme court. When the high court refused to entertain the appeal another stay was obtained and an insanity petition was filed. Hearings were begun before Judge Gentzel.

Alienists on Stand.

Three alienists, placed on the witness stand by the state, testified that they believed Shanks was sane and responsible for his actions. They were Doctors Charles Read, Francis Gerty, and H. Douglas Singer. Read, however, qualified his testimony by saying he believed the defendant was of childish mentality. Dr. William Hickson of the psychopathic hospital held that Shanks had the mentality of a child of 3½ years.

Though Shanks has cheated the death chair again, he is still in danger of electrocution, lawyers said. The jury found that Shanks became insane after Dec. 14, the date of his conviction. In the event that he is found to be sane following treatment at the asylum, he may be returned to the jurisdiction of the trial court and then ordered to be electrocuted.

MITCHELL LAYS NEW POLICY AS HE TAKES OFFICE

No Lawbreaking to Enforce Law.

Washington, D. C., April 6.—[Special.]—Law enforcement by strictly lawful methods was announced as a policy of the department of justice by Attorney General William DeWitt Mitchell tonight in a radio address broadcast over a nation-wide hookup of Columbia system.

In his first public utterance since he became attorney general a month ago, Mr. Mitchell took a strong stand against fanaticism in the enforcement of prohibition or any other law. It was a warning to federal agents that the invasion of constitutional or statutory rights of citizens by federal agents will not be tolerated.

"Drive" Is Flash in Pan.

"In the first place," said Mr. Mitchell, "do not get the impression that the matter is to be or can be properly dealt with by a so called 'drive' or a dramatic marshaling of the agencies of justice. Such a method is like a flash in the pan. The results would be only temporary. The improvements we seek must be gained by steady, earnest, and persistent effort over weeks, months and even years, so that the improvement may be fundamental and lasting.

"Detection and punishment of crime must be effected by strictly lawful methods. Nothing has a greater tendency to beget lawlessness than lawless methods of law enforcement. The greater the difficulties of detecting and punishing crime, the greater the temptation to place a strained construction on statutes to supply what may be thought to be more efficient means of enforcement of law.

Rights Must Be Regarded.

"The statutory and constitutional rights of all persons must be regarded and their violation, inadvertent or otherwise, is to be avoided."

Mr. Mitchell explained that plan to be followed when responsibility for Volstead enforcement has been transferred from the treasury department to the justice department. Instead of merging the bureau of prohibition with the justice department's bureau of investigation, a new prohibition enforcement division in the justice department is to be created.

It is generally believed here that Assistant Attorney General Mabel Willebrandt, favored for the place by dry organizations and leaders of the church lobby, will be named to head it.

"What I have said relates to all laws," declared Mr. Mitchell, "and to all offenses against our federal statutes, and is not limited to the national prohibition act.

Why Dry Cases Are Difficult.

"As to the national prohibition act, I have some comments to make. Most crimes are committed to obtain money. In respect to some crimes money is gained from victims by fraud or force. The great difficulty in law enforcement is not with these. It is with those crimes where gain comes to the lawbreaker by the voluntary act of those who buy from him illicit goods. This is a distinguishing feature of offenses against the national prohibition act. The bootlegger is in business for gain, and the gain results because there are those who are willing to buy.

"Let me quote from the President's inaugural address. He said: 'But a large responsibility rests directly upon our citizens. There would be little traffic in illegal liquor if only criminals patronized it. We must awake to the fact that this patronage from large numbers of law abiding citizens is supplying the rewards and stimulating crime. If citizens do not like a law their duty as honest men and women is to discourage its violation.'"

Capper Raps Chicago.

Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas preceded Mr. Mitchell in the broadcast.

He singled Chicago out as one of the "few notoriously misgoverned cities," whose gang wars, bombings, and racketeering cause the United States to "stand out as the most lawless nation the world has ever known."

He scored the wet cities which he said have never made a genuine effort to enforce Volsteadism and placed responsibility for prevailing conditions upon "law abiding citizens" whose disrespect for prohibition, he said, encourages the bootlegger and the gangster.

Bar Asks Suit for Return of Canal Funds

The Chicago Bar association yesterday recommended that court proceedings be started to recover public funds diverted to the padded pay rolls of the sanitary district law department between 1925 and 1928. The defendants proposed for the suit are the district trustees during those four years and those lawyers who the association charges knowingly participated in the graft.

The recommendation is included in a preliminary report by a special committee of the bar association and the report was approved by the association's board of governors. The report, following a comprehensive survey, finds that there was a wholesale debauch of the public treasury under the recent sanitary district administration. It concludes by pressing proposals for new legislation and new board rules to prevent a recurrence of the disgrace.

Go After Individuals.

The bar committee will continue its investigations, taking up the cases against individual lawyers who received pay checks as political rewards and did little or no service. Disbarment is faced by these legal pay rollers. No names are mentioned in the preliminary report.

Legislators on the district pay rolls were condemned in the report. The committee would enact a law prohibiting members of the general assembly from accepting fees from any governmental body.

Some Figures Cited.

A table of employés on the district's law department roll in the years from 1925 to 1929 is cited by the investigators as eloquent testimony of the conditions during these years. The committee found that the present number, following the drastic post-election pruning of last November, is sufficient to meet legitimate needs and that the excess in former years represents patronage. The table:

Year.	Lawyers.	Non-lawyers.	Total.
1926	54	170	224
1927	96	142	238
1928	96	265	361
1929	185	499	684
1929	23	22	45

Some of Them Worked.

Not all the lawyers receiving checks from the sanitary district during the reign of Timothy J. Crowe as president were being rewarded for political favors, the report points out. Many of them are innocent of any breach of ethics, it is emphasized, and these include ten special counsel working at per diems of $100 and $150 on the lake level controversy.

The rate of pay received by the special lake level counsel is not excessive, according to the committee, although the total expense [$499,130] to the district seems large.

"Still," the report reads, "in view of the importance of the controversy, your committee is unable to say that the number of special counsel or the aggregate amount paid was excessive."

Asks for Civil Service.

In addition to the proposed suit to recover, the bar recommended that the law department of the sanitary district be placed under civil service by an act of the legislature. Pending the passage of this law, it is urged that the head of the department be given full authority and responsibility, rather than as in the past acting as a figurhead, subject to the demands from trustees for more patronage. There are also recommendations calling for a general reorganization of the canal board's law office.

Some of the lawyer pay rollers, according to the report, did not receive the checks that were made out in their names, although the checks were returned to the board as canceled. The committee publishes evidence in several such cases but does not report its conclusions. There is an inference, however, that the checks were forged by political grafters.

The evidence was turned over to the state's attorney to determine

PHYSICIANS TRY DR. SCHMIDT ON ETHICS CHARGE

Case Involves Cost of Medical Care.

The Chicago Medical society, in what promises to become a celebrated case testing new ethical problems confronting the medical profession, has preferred charges of unethical conduct against Dr. Louis E. Schmidt, for many years a prominent physician and surgeon in Chicago and associated with many philanthropic movements.

Rumors of the action against Dr. Schmidt were verified yesterday by Dr. Frank R. Morton, president of the society. Dr. Morton said that the general council of the Chicago Medical society will decide on Tuesday night whether the physician is to be expelled from the society or exonerated of the charges.

Free Clinics an Issue.

Involved in the proceedings, it became known, are questions which have been bitterly disputed in the medical profession. They have to do with costs of medical and hospital care to people of small means and the attitude of the medical society in curbing the activities of free clinics in Chicago. The latter policy has brought a charge from some quarters that the medical society is employing trade union tactics to obtain more business and higher fees for its members. This charge has been denied by officers of the society.

Medical, hospital and laboratory care of the sick, now costing Chicagoans from $20 a day upwards, could be furnished to citizens whose incomes range from $2,000 to $5,000 a year at a cost of less than $5 a day, including all costs, some medical leaders assert. Present plans for such a project are being opposed by the society, but Dr. Morton said the general council on Tuesday night will also have before it a plan for lowering medical costs.

The Case of Dr. Schmidt.

He said the trial of Dr. Schmidt is associated with the broad questions dealing with the society's policy on free clinics. The sole charge against the physician, Dr. Morton declared, is that he is associated indirectly with the Public Health institute, which has been branded as unethical and denied recognition by the society.

Dr. Morton said the complaint against the institute was that it advertised, thereby entering into unfair competition against physicians generally who are prohibited under the ethical code from advertising. He emphasized that Dr. Schmidt's reputation and ability were in no way under suspicion or attack.

Dr. Schmidt yesterday declared he would not comment on the matter while the charges are pending. He is 60 years old and has lived in Chicago all his life. He is the son of a well known Chicago physician, the late Dr. Ernst Schmidt.

Career Told in "Who's Who."

The attainments of Dr. Schmidt, as listed in "Who's Who in America," are as follows:

Educated at the Chicago College of Pharmacy, the University of Michigan and Northwestern university, where he received a master of science as well as a medical degree. Dr. Schmidt then went abroad and studied at the universities of Berlin and Vienna, and at Paris, Breslau and London.

He is professor of genito-urinary surgery at Northwestern university and Chicago Policlinic; senior attending urologist at St. Luke's hospital; consultant and in charge of department of social hygiene, Chicago health department; chief of staff and president of the Illinois Social Hygiene league; a charter member of the American College of Surgeons; member of the staffs of Oak Forest infirmary, Grant hospital, Passavant hospital, and Michael Reese hospital; member of the American, German, French and International Urological associations, of the Chicago, Illinois and American Medical associations, and many other societies and clubs.

Leads War on Social Diseases.

Dr. Schmidt served as a "dollar-a-year" man under Dr. Herman N. Bundesen when the latter was city health commissioner, having direction of venereal disease work. He is recognized as the founder of the organized effort to make the treatment of venereal diseases a community problem, and led the way to concentrated attacks on social afflictions.

The charges against Dr. Schmidt have been tried before the ethical relations committee of the medical society, of which Dr. Fred Hollenbeck is chairman. The committee will deliver a report, with recommendations for action, to the general council Tuesday night, according to President Morton. The latter said Dr. Schmidt had been summoned before the committee and had refused to withdraw from the indirect connection with the Public Health institute.

The Public Health Institute.

This institute, which treats men, women and children, sufferers from venereal diseases, is operated as a corporation not for profit, and managed by a board of trustees composed of the following members:

Joseph H. King, president of the institute, president of the National Regulator company; Thomas R. Gowenlock, vice president, advertising man; Jacob M. Dickinson Jr., vice president, a lawyer; Robert A. Gardner, treasurer, member of Mitchell, Hutchins & Co.; Marshall Field III.; Col. A. A. Sprague, Harold F. McCormick, Gen. James A. Ryan, A. A. Carpenter and Nathan William MacChesney.

Dr. Joseph G. Berkowitz is medical director of the institute, which, according to a recent report, has given over 2,500,000 treatments to more than 141,000 individuals in the eight years of its operation and during 1928 gave as many as 2,000 treatments in a single day. The institute claims to provide treatment at one-third the customary fees charged by physicians.

League Linked to Institute.

A year ago the Illinois Social Hygiene league, of which Dr. Schmidt is president and chief medical officer, underwent a reorganization. Since then, under a contract with the Public Health institute, all patients applying at the institute who cannot pay the costs of treatment are sent for treatment to the free clinic maintained by the league. In return for this service the institute, from its surplus, pays $12,000 a year to the league and provides all laboratory and other services possible for the league.

It is this connection between Dr. Schmidt and the institute, according to President Morton, which forms the basis of the charges before the Chicago Medical society. The Illinois Social Hygiene league is known as a philanthropic institution, and among its trustees are many noted Chicagoans, including Jane Addams, Dr. Bundesen, Joel D. Hunter, Mrs. Harold Ickes, Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, Rabbi Louis L. Mann, Dr. Joseph L. Miller, David A. Noyes, Wilfred S. Reynolds, Paul Schultz, Judge Daniel P. Trude, Charles H. Wacker, and Dr. Rachelle S. Yarros.

Other Physicians Involved?

Since the charge against Dr. Schmidt is based on his connection with the league, it was considered possible that the medical society would have to proceed also against Dr. Bundesen, Dr. Miller, Dr. Yarros, and also against the members of the league's regular staff of physicians.

It was reported also that other physicians of leading rank in Chicago receive paying patients from the Public Health institute, and these, too, might face the same charges as Dr. Schmidt.

St. Luke's hospital accepts $12,000 a year from the surplus of the institute for the maintenance of six free beds in the hospital. A similar sum is paid annually to the University of Chicago for research work in venereal diseases, it was learned. The institute also contributes $6,000 annually to the Chicago Social Hygiene council, formed to educate the public generally to the dangers of venereal diseases and the need for prompt, adequate treatment.

Whether all these organizations shall be criticized by the medical society for their connections with the Public Health institute and their medical officers made to face expulsion from the society seems to depend, it was said, on the outcome of the Schmidt case.

Offer Institute to Doctors.

Some time ago, Dr. Morton said, the trustees of the Public Health institute offered to turn the entire organization over to the Chicago Medical society, to be operated by physicians. Profits might be distributed among the physicians, or given to charitable and scientific purposes, as at present, with the surplus held for building and extension purposes, it was proposed.

It was also suggested at that time, it is recalled, that the scope of the institute be widened to permit the treatment, under the same low priced system, of all ailments. It was suggested that by having all the functions of medical attention concentrated under one group of physicians, instead of spreading them among laymen owners of hospitals and laboratories, the cost of medical services would be greatly reduced. Hospital and medical care would be brought within the means of nearly all citizens, probably as low as $4 or $5 a day for all expenses, including the doctor's fees, it was proposed.

This proposal, made by the trustees of the Public Health institute, who offered to withdraw entirely from its control, was allowed to drop. But recently, according to Dr. Morton, it has been revived and will be brought up for discussion at Tuesday's meeting, he said.

Activities of the Chicago Medical society in opposing the establishment of free clinics have resulted in a number of active disputes in which physicians took opposite sides. Officials of the Chicago Lying-In hospital said yesterday that their plans for establishing a clinic in South Chicago, where needy mothers might receive at little or no cost advice concerning prenatal care and infant welfare, had been frustrated by the opposition of the society. The society acted on the ground that establishment of the clinic would take cases and fees away from regular practitioners in South Chicago.

The medical society also entered into a controversy with the University of Chicago, charging that patients admitted for clinical purposes to Albert Billings hospital could afford to pay fees, and that the university was competing unfairly with regular physicians in Chicago.

Hospital Gives Up Project.

The St. Elizabeth's hospital at 1433 North Claremont avenue planned to establish a small clinic and dispensary in connection with Loyola university, but dropped the project, according to Sister M. Baptist, director of the hospital, when the Chicago Medical society protested it would damage the practices of doctors in the vicinity.

The attitude of the society, as expressed in a resolution adopted some time ago, in this:

"The Chicago Medical society is eager and willing to serve without recompense all those in need of free service, but in justice to the public who do not desire medical pauperization we do not believe service should be given indiscriminately."

LONDON TO HAVE 25 CENT AIR TAXI SERVICE IN JUNE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 7.—London will have air taxis in June when the new air park opens at Hanworth, twelve miles from Hyde Park, heart of the fashionable west end. Two aerodromes are being laid down amidst the 230 acres where Queen Elizabeth once lived as a child under the guardianship of Catherine Parr.

One of the aerodromes will be for air taxis, which will carry passengers to any part of the country for twenty-five cents a mile, and for test and demonstration flying. The other will be an aviation club with a ballroom, residential accommodation, and a dozen courts for tennis, squash, and racquets.

Sixteen airplanes will be stationed at the park and six instructors will be available for the use of members. Each member learning to fly comes under the personal supervision of an experienced instructor. The club will be the last thing in modern aviation, popularizing light airplanes.

'LITZINGER GANG' THREATENED LIFE, WITNESS CLAIMS

Contradicts Defense Story of Glynn Killing.

Arthur G. Gausselin, 1120 North Elmwood avenue, Oak Park, who was a vital witness for the state in the trial of Virgil Litzinger, well known police character and alleged mail robber, was taken into custody late Friday night at Powers Lake, Wis., and yesterday he confessed to Assistant State's Attorneys Clarence Piggott and Duane Reed that he had been chased out of town by "Virgil Litzinger's gang."

Litzinger was acquitted several weeks ago by a jury before Judge McGoorty. Three of the five witnesses to the killing of Clarence Glynn, part owner of a soft drink parlor at 2801 West 38th street, were missing at the time of the trial. Gausselin was one of them. The defense produced three witnesses, for whom perjury warrants were subsequently issued by Judge McGoorty, and who testified that a mysterious stranger and not Litzinger had committed the crime.

Insists Litzinger Is Killer.

Gausselin was taken into custody by Deputy Commissioner John Stege when he, a former soft drink parlor owner, tried to communicate with his wife. The wife was followed and Gausselin, who had returned to Chicago Tuesday, was found.

Gausselin said that Litzinger was the man who shot Glynn and that the story he told the police at the time of the killing was the correct version of what occured in the soft drink parlor in which he and the dead man were partners. He contradicted the testimony given by the defense witnesses, two of whom cannot now be found. The third defense witness is under arrest and is to be arraigned before Judge McGoorty on April 10.

Witnesses Not There, He Says.

Homer Provencal, who made his home in a city fire station, near the scene of the shooting, is the man under arrest. Edward J. McDonough, 6306 South Artesian avenue, and Alfred Boyt, who worked for the Edward R. Litsinger Motor company, of which Fred Litsinger, a brother of the defendant is secretary, are the two men who apparently have fled the city.

"I was at my summer home at Powers Lake last August when I was first threatened," said Gausselin. "At that time a man came to my door and said 'If you testify against Litzinger we will get you and your family. We found you here and we will be able to get you anywhere.'

Gets Second Threat.

"I recognized some of the men in the group in front of my house as members of the Litzinger gang, but I do not know their names. The second threat was made just a short time before the trial, when a group of men came to my saloon and asked my bartender if I had left town yet. I decided that for my own safety and that of my family it was better to leave the city."

Gausselin also told of receiving several threatening letters.

21 VICTIMS IDENTIFY BANDITS.

Earle Davis, 17 years old, 934 South Wood street, and Bernard Turner, 18 years old, 829 South Des Plaines street, both colored, arrested several days ago, were identified by thirty-one victims of street robberies last night.

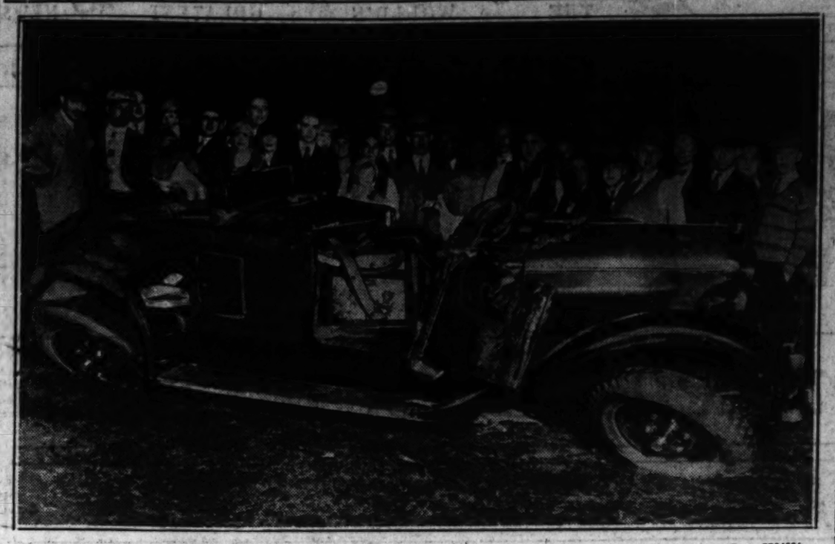
One Killed, One Hurt in Auto Crash on Drive



Wreckage of automobile at 16th street and the outer drive last evening after crash in which William Green was killed and Charles Simms injured. The driver attempted to make turn at a high rate of speed.

SIDESWIPED AUTO DIVES INTO DITCH; WOMAN IS KILLED

One Dies as Car Tips Over on Outer Drive.

A woman and a man were killed in two automobile wrecks last night. In one of the accidents, on the outer drive at 16th street, a speeding car overturned, flinging the driver to the pavement and crushing his passenger to death under the wreckage.

Mrs. Dora Denbesten, 50 years old, 11309 Stewart avenue, was fatally injured and her husband and son were injured in the other accident, which occurred at 95th street and Crawford avenue in Oak Lawn. The husband, Cornelius Denbensten, 63 years old, was driving east in 95th street when his car was sideswiped by a westbound machine. The Denbensten automobile, out of control, ran off the road and plunged into a seven foot ditch.

Woman Dies at Hospital.

Mrs. Denbensten was taken to Burnside hospital by a passing motorist and died a short time later of a fractured skull. Her husband and their son, John, 21 years old, were carried to the same hospital where it was said their injuries were not critical. The second car did not stop after the accident.

William Green, 45 years old, residing at the Morrison hotel, was killed, and his companion, Charles T. Simms, 42 years old, 335 East 55th street, was seriously injured in the accident on the outer drive. According to the police, Simms, the driver, was traveling north at high speed and attempted to turn west at 16th street. He lost control of the wheel and the heavy car skidded off the boulevard and turned over. The driver was flung to the pavement and Green was pinned beneath the wreckage. Both were taken to St. Luke's hospital, where Green was pronounced dead.

Simms, an automobile salesman, told the police that Green was registered at the Morrison, but at one time lived at 4033 Lexington street.

Automobile accidents took the lives of three other persons yesterday. The deaths increased the 1929 Cook county motor toll to 175. The other victims:

Charles N. March, 17 years old, 1820 Asbury avenue, Evanston. Injured on Friday night when he was struck by an automobile in front of 6433 Sheridan road.

Harry Weiss, 42 years old, 5202 Wentworth avenue. Crushed between his truck and an automobile he was towing at Wabash avenue and 51st street on Monday.

Burton Leyrer, 6 years old, 1551 North Austin boulevard. Struck by an automobile on Friday as he was playing in front of 1638 North Austin boulevard.

Judge William E. Helander in the Boys' court yesterday continued until April 16, charges against three companions of Joseph Gubbins, a law student at the University of Chicago, who was seriously injured in a collision at 46th street and Drexel boulevard. John Hines Jr., 710 Junior terrace, pleaded not guilty to a charge of driving while intoxicated. His companions, Virgil Gist, captain of the university basketball team, and James Cussack, pleaded not guilty to disorderly conduct charges.

Germany's Champion Stunt Aviator Hurt in Crash

KASSEL, Germany, April 6.—(AP)—Gerhard Fiesseler, Germany's champion stunt flyer, came to grief today. While flying low on a sharp curve, the under carriage of his plane touched the ground and the machine crashed. Fieseler was injured and had to be taken to a hospital. In 1927 Fieseler established a record, flying upside down for fifteen minutes.

POLICE SEIZE 360 IN TWO WEST SIDE GAMBLING RAIDS

Dissolution of Mangano Writ Expected.

Four police squads under Capt. George O'Connor of the gambling detail, yesterday raided two west side resorts hitherto protected by court injunctions. The raiders arrested 360 inmates and confiscated racing sheets, roulet wheels, and other paraphernalia.

The Nor-Crow club at 3945 North avenue, described as Marty Guilfoyle's place, was the first entered. Three hundred men were marched into patrol wagons and taken to the Austin police station. Sixty men were seized in the second place at 3871 Ogden avenue. All were booked at the Des Plaines street station as inmates of a gambling house and John M. Bates was booked as keeper.

Raid on Search Warrants.

Both raids were made by authority of search warrants issued by Judge Daniel P. Trude after plain clothes policemen had testified in Racket court concerning alleged gambling in the resorts.

The dissolution of another injunction restraining police raiders was foreseen when Master in Chancery Adolph Easter recommended that action be taken with reference to the Minerva Athletic club, a resort operated by Lawrence Mangano at 622 South Halsted street. Following a raid there last October by Des Plaines street police under Capt. Luke Garrick the captain's home was bombed. His wife, Mrs. Emma Garrick, died a few days later of the shock, but Mangano, arraigned before Judge Frank M. Padden on a charge of malicious mischief, was dismissed.

Paves Way for Others.

The chancery recommendation was received with rejoicing by Assistant Corporation Counsels James M. Kearns and William V. Daly who prosecuted the case for the city. They hope that the decision will establish a precedent for rulings in similar cases where the city is seeking to obtain free entry for the police. Evidence of gambling at Mangano's place was secured by police in plain clothes.

The temporary injunction restraining the police from raiding was issued Aug. 18, 1928, and the city in September filed a suit to dissolve the order.

ANOTHER STORM HITS WISCONSIN; REPORT 10 DEAD

Claws Its Way Across La Fayette County.

Monroe, Wis., April 6.—(AP)—A near tornado which swept over Lafayette county in southwestern Wisconsin wrecked farm buildings, caused thousands of dollars damage and seriously injured at least one man. Unverified reports were current here tonight that between 5 and 10 persons had been killed but a visit to the eastern section of the county revealed no fatalities.

Whether there were any in the western section could not be determined.

There was a report that one man had been killed at Blanchardville, Wis., but communication with that city could not be obtained as lines were down.

Earlier Storm Killed Twenty.

Minneapolis, Minn., April 6.—(AP)—Fearful spring storms that blew up from nowhere and skipped through Minnesota and Wisconsin late yesterday, tonight had built up a total of 19 dead and more than 100 injured besides destroying property valued at millions of dollars.

Wisconsin was the chief sufferer. Thirteen persons were killed and many injured. Five of the dead were reported in Minnesota, two near Minneapolis and one each near Forest Lake, Lindstrom, and Taylors Falls.

In Wisconsin four were killed near Rudolf. Three children were killed near Reeve, on a farm; two were killed near Rice Lake, Wis., and one each at Clayton, Glenwood City and Waukau, and two at Barron.

MOORE BLAMES UNION ROW FOR PAY ROLL CHARGE

Edward F. Moore, deputy commissioner of public works, yesterday denied charges that he is endeavoring to put his friends on city hall pay rolls despite the action of Commissioner Richard W. Wolfe by which he was shorn of all political patronage seven weeks ago. The charge was made by Jason B. Evans, president of the Amalgamated Union of Operating Engineers, local No. 464, whose members have been employed as paying engineers in the bureaus of streets for more than thirty years.

Evans declared that Moore is trying to replace men in 60 jobs with men from Moore's union, the International Union of Operating Engineers, local No. 569.

Moore explained that is a matter of union differences. He declared that men employed in the bureau of streets were affiliated with the international union, but seceded eighteen months ago. Their charter was revoked and they were disowned by all labor organizations, he said. After this a notice was sent to local 569, hoisting and portable engineers, that an attempt should be made to take in all members of the disowned local. Attempts have been made to settle the controversy to avert possible strikes, he said.

STEAMER FIRED ON; BOARDED; NO RUM FOUND

Baltimore, Md., April 6.—[Special.]—Two of six shots fired by a coast guard cutter narrowly missed the steamship Juan, Norwegian fruit ship, an hour after it passed through the capes into the Chesapeake bay yesterday morning. Capt. Karl Andersen, master of the vessel, reported the attack to the Norwegian vice counsel today.

The Juan, bound for Baltimore with bananas from Spanish Honduras, hove to and allowed two dungaree clad sailors, with pistols strapped around their waists, to ask for the ship's papers and make a perfunctory search for liquor. None was found.

Indignant at what he termed the "high handed" conduct of coast guards, Paul E. Kesterson, a pilot, who had boarded the Juan outside of the capes, filed a deposition of protest with Charles C. Schroeder, secretary to the Norwegian vice counsel here. Mr. Kesterson asserted that the last shot fired by the coast guard patrol would have struck the Juan had he not hove the vessel to and swung to the starboard.

EXPERT PRAISES CHICAGO SYSTEM FOR FIGHTING T.B.

New Yorker Says His City Is Surpassed.

Chicago's municipal system for battling tuberculosis, with the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium as its hub, yesterday was pronounced by an authority on the subject as the most extensive, efficient and effective within his knowledge.

Gaston J. Drolet, formerly statistician of the Rockefeller Foundation's commission for the prevention of tuberculosis in France, and now consulting statistician for the Tuberculosis Sanitarium conference in New York, voiced this opinion. He was brought to Chicago by the board of directors of the sanitarium to prepare a report based on records of the institution.

Chicago Surpasses New York.

In several fields of this work, Mr. Drolet admitted, the Chicago system has surpassed the New York standard. Especially is this true, he said, in the segregation of children from open cases of the disease, required by law here, to prevent the spread of the white plague.

"We not only do not have such a law in New York," he declared, "but it would be practically impossible to enforce it there because the facilities are not available. In New York we handle a larger volume of cases, but there is no centralized, unified system.

Attendance Is Larger.

"New York has thirty-one dispensaries, open but part time. Chicago, with only eight, but open full time, has an attendance about twice as large."

Mr. Drolet's survey reveals that, despite an increase of half a million in population since 1919, the white race mortality from the disease has dropped from 110.4 in 1919 to 60.3 in 1928, or by 45 per cent. Deaths of whites in 1919 totaled 2,835, and in 1928 only 1,893. But in the same period Negro mortality has practically doubled.

EXPECT RESULTS IN SLOT MACHINE QUIZ THIS WEEK

Assistant State's Attorney Henry Ayers spent yesterday afternoon questioning more witnesses in the slot machine investigation. He continued to veil his actions in secrecy and refused to make public the names of the witnesses questioned or the nature of the testimony they are to give before the grand jury next week.

State's Attorney John A. Swanson promised to lift the secrecy veil tomorrow or Tuesday and to announce then the result of his first big investigation since he assumed office last December. He has intimated several times that wholesale indictments might be expected, from the evidence uncovered through W. E. Keeney, who is reported to have talked freely to the state's aids, and Alex Levine, owner of the Mid-West Novelty company. Keeney, known as one of the biggest slot machine operators, is reported to have been promised an immunity bath.

The police department is expected to be hit the hardest by the investigations made by Capt. William Schoemaker, according to the reports. It is intimated that many captains will be charged at least with malfeasance in office. Two former well known politicians are also reported in the syndicate operations, but the failure to apprehend James [High Pockets] O'Brien is said to have stopped the inquiry short of its ultimate goal.

POLICEMEN SAVE SUSPECT FROM PURSUING CROWD

Thomas Goublick, 36 years old, 6537 Dorchester avenue, an electrician, was saved from rough handling at the hands of an angry crowd last night following his arrest near a building at Blackstone avenue and 61st street, when it was reported that he had lured a 4 year old girl into the building and attempted to attack her.

Policeman James Sullivan of the Woodlawn station took Goublick into custody as he was running down the street pursued by a score of persons. Seizing Goublick, Sullivan held the crowd back with drawn revolver until the arrival of reinforcements from the Woodlawn station. Later Goublick was identified by a 6 year old girl as the man who several days ago accosted her on the street and tried to persuade her to accompany him.

GOOD TO IGNORE WHISPERERS IN FUQUA CASE

Washington, D. C., April 6.—[Special.]—Secretary of War James W. Good, it was stated at the war department today, does not intend to dignify attacks on the appointment of Col. Stephen O. Fuqua as chief of infantry by ordering an investigation of the anonymous charge which attributes the appointment to "favoritism" shown by Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff.

If any official attention is paid to the charge at all it will probably be when Col. Fuqua's appointment comes up before the senate military affairs committee for confirmation early in the coming special session and it is unlikely, it was argued in the war department, that the senators will withhold confirmation because of a "whispering campaign" inspired, according to high army officials, by malcontents.

FIND MAN'S BODY ON N. U. CAMPUS, MYSTERY SUICIDE

Farewell Note Written on Pine Board.

The elements of a mystery tale were provided yesterday by an unidentified man from 30 to 35 years old who wrote his own epitaph, drank a poison potion, and lay down to die on the lake shore where it skirts the Northwestern university campus at Foster street, Evanston.

Thirteen year old Frances Dills, coming from her home at 816 Foster street to play at the spot, discovered the body at 3:30 p. m.

Find Farewell Message.

Stuck in the sand at the head of the body, as if for a grave marker, was a piece of pine board on which was scrawled a farewell message. This, the police surmised, might have been addressed to one of the university co-eds.

"Be happy and may I rest in peace," read the penciled message.

In one of the pockets of the coat was the stub of a ticket issued for a university dance given in Patten gymnasium on April 18, 1928. Glittering on the vest of the worn blue suit was the emblem of Chi Sigma Gamma sorority, a group not listed among the student organizations at Northwestern.

In the man's right hand was a pill containing an unidentified poison, three capsules holding another poison, and a small vial half filled with nicotine sulphate, a chemical ordinarily used by insect exterminators.

Call French Professor.

A New York tailor's label in the suit had the name of T. Coston. No family of that name in the Chicago or Evanston telephone directories knew any one answering the dead man's description, but Prof. Daniel Delattre of the French department of the university, who viewed the body, recalled having seen the man among those at an Armistice day banquet.

The police drew Prof. Delattre into the case when they found three pages of closely written French in the man's inside pocket. To the message was appended a sentence in English, informing the police that the man committed suicide and stating he had no relatives here. Following are passages translated by the professor:

"Yes, one can be insane with sorrow, if a great, invincible suffering can be considered insanity," the message began. "In the sincerity of my love and the depth of my sorrow I have vowed to you a noble and everlasting devotion.

"She wanted to see me today, and I saw her. We have conversed and spent the afternoon together. You, Chi Sigma Gamma, be happy, and may I rest in peace."

George Sirven, French vice consul, 1419 North Dearborn street, viewed the body, but could not identify it.

LONG IMPEACHED TO YELLS, FAINTS AND FIST FIGHTS

Wild Scene as House Arraigns Governor.

Baton Rouge, La., April 6.—(AP)—Huey P. Long, youthful governor, was impeached today by the Louisiana house of representatives amid scenes of disorder.

The senate was notified formally and late today the upper body resolved itself into a court of impeachment to bring the governor to trial.

The governor was indicted by the house on one of the charges of the nineteen in a new impeachment resolution and the house planned to continue its consideration of the other charges next week.

By a vote of 58 to 40 the house handed down an indictment charging the governor with attempting to suppress the freedom of the press, specifically by threatening Charles P. Manship, Baton Rouge publisher, with public exposure of the fact that the publisher's brother was an inmate in the insane asylum unless he stopped an editorial attack upon the governor's proposed tax on oil.

Session a Wild One.

While the vote was being taken the governor's supporters yelled and pushed about and resorted to all forms of legislative maneuvers to prevent the roll call.

During the riotous session Gov. Long sat with a few close friends in his office directly under the house chamber and to an inquiry sent back the message:

"I have nothing to say."

He had directed the battle from the office and his cohorts went down to defeat fighting to the very last. After the vote, one of the floor leaders, Representative McClanahan of Caldwell, sought to do his fighting with his fists, and turned on Representative Woods of New Orleans. Members rushed in between them.

One Member Collapses.

A few moments before the vote was ordered, Representative Delesdernier of Placquemines ran to the loud speaker microphone in front of the chamber and began an address in which he sought to compare the drive against Gov. Long with that of the crucifixion. He collapsed at the foot of the microphone.

Henry, 22 years old, 2159 Adams street, and Louis Whitmarsh, 21 years old, of the same address were kidnaped by six men as they were returning home last night and held prisoner in a barn while two of their captors, after taking Henry's keys, went to Mangel's Apparel shop, where both men worked, and robbed keys, went to Mangel's apparel shop in the Palmer house arcade, where both men worked, and robbed a safe of $5,200.

Two west park policemen came upon Henry and Whitmarsh as they emerged from an alley near Damen avenue and Washington boulevard with their hands tied behind them.

MEXICAN REBELS LOSE FIRST TILT FOR BORDER CITY

American Soldier Shot; U. S. Rushes Planes.

A heavy fire began to pour into the trench from the east, west and south at eight o'clock. Rifles and machine guns behind the entrenchments beat out a vicious drum fire in answer.

Firing broke out again briskly after the reinforcements had come in from Fort Bliss, where they had been interned for weeks. The rebels rallied and essayed again to storm the breastworks. They were beaten off with less difficulty the second time and had drawn off out of range for the most part by 11 o'clock. Sporadic firing, involving isolated parties of would-be attackers continued long after the main battle had ended.

Cavalry Surges into U. S.

As the rebel troops advanced to the attack on the east flank, Gen. Ramon Yucupicio's Indian cavalry surged over the international line into the United States for several yards. A reinforced United States cavalry patrol under command of Lieut. R. W. Curtis pushed them back into Mexican territory and warned Gen. Yucupicio to remain on his own side of the fence.

Rebel planes, after Gen. Topete's troops had withdrawn, dropped a parting octette of bombs on the victorious federal troops and, under stinging machine gun fire, one of the rebel aviators maneuvered his plane in a defiantly reckless exhibition of stunting directly over the Naco trenches.

Rebels to Quit Bombing.

Naco, Arizona, April 6.—(AP)—Capt. T. M. Rundel, courier for Brig. Gen. Frank S. Cocheu, commanding United States troops along the border, returned to the American army camp here this afternoon with assurances from rebel Gen. Fausto Topete that no more bombs would be dropped on the Mexican federal garrison at Naco, Sonora. Gen. Topete sent word back that he would instruct his pilots to attack the federal town hereafter only with machine guns.

18 U. S. Planes on Way.

San Antonio, Tex., April 6.—[Special.]—Eighteen United States army airplanes armed with machine guns and equipped for bombing were en route to the Mexico-Arizona border from Dodd field here and Fort Crockett, Galveston, today under conditions referred to at the eighth corps area headquarters as "war time activities." Four Dodd field officers and 20 men followed the planes on a Southern Pacific train for Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Orders for the movement were issued by Maj. Gen. William Lassiter, commander of the corps area. The Dodd field party was under command of Maj. E. A. Lohman.

Washington Aroused.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 6.—War department officials have been directed by President Hoover to take whatever steps are necessary to protect American lives and property along the international border.

This order was passed on by Secretary of War James W. Good to Maj. Gen. William Lassiter, commanding the 8th corps with headquarters at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. The question of what is to be done to make the border secure now rests in the general's hands. The President acted on the recommendation of Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson.

State department officials described the situation today as serious. It was asserted that repeated refusal of the Mexican rebels to heed the warnings against firing on American soil and in other ways endangering American life and property has turned the situation into a purely military one. They assert Gen. Lassiter will be backed to the limit in whatever action he takes to make his orders effective.

May Send Troops Over Border.

As a first step, Gen. Lassiter was directed to again warn the Mexican revolutionary leaders that no more bombings or shootings across the border would be tolerated.

War department officials in touch with the situation believe that if necessary Gen. Lassiter will send American troops across the border to drive the Mexican rebels far enough back from American soil to establish a safety zone which would render improbable further bombings by rebel aircraft on the American side or firing across the border.

Washington, aroused by the shooting of an American soldier in a skirmish with Mexican rebels and the wounding of three people on the American side of the border during the battle yesterday, has ordered eighteen war planes to Naco, Arizona, to protect American lives.

REBEL GENERALS SPLIT; ESCOBAR CALLED COWARD

Almazan Takes 2 Towns on Pursuit North.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MEXICO CITY, April 6.—The Mexican forces under Gen. Juan A. Almazan today occupied Santa Rosalia de Camargo to the north, and Parral to the west of Jimenez, Chihuahua, preparatory to a march upon Chihuahua City, against Gen. Gonzalo Escobar, commander in chief of the rebel forces.

Gen. Almazan reported to Chapultepec castle that before the federals entered Santa Rosalia, a careful exploration was made, resulting in information that Gen. Escobar has been there lately and while there held a conference with Gen. Miguelle Valle, who is said to have accused him of cowardice in deserting the rebel army at La Reforma. There was a break between the two rebel leaders.

Escobar Reorganizes Army.

Gen. Escobar, it is reported, is attempting to reorganize the rebel forces in the state of Chihuahua in the face of complete lack of confidence on the part of the rebels as to his ability as a leader.

Gen. Lazora Cardenas in his report to Chapultepec castle today said that federal cavalry under Gen. Jaime Carrillo entered Culiacan, capital of the state of Sinaloa.

Gen. Cardenas' drive through the state of Sinaloa will be directed at Port Guaymas, Sonora, on the Gulf of California.

Tell Story of Slaughter.

Survivors of the battle of La Reforma, who are arriving at Chihuahua City, tell a dramatic story of that rebel slaughter.

Just after the battle had opened a bombing plane dropped several bombs in rapid succession, one of which lit on the rear of a long line of freight cars. There was a terrific explosion, followed by the shaking of the ground for several hundred yards in all directions and wiping out scores of the rebel infantry. The bomb had struck one of Gen. Escobar's ammunition cars.

About 500 rebels were severely defeated in an all night battle at Cocula, Jalisco, when they were surprised by a federal cavalry force and a force of Indian volunteers.

Court Martial Spares Life of Captured Rebel General

BY ORVILLE DWYER.

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

JIMENEZ, Chihuahua, April 6.—Gen. Federico Barrera, former commandant of the garrison at Saltillo and one of the leading rebel figures in the Mexican revolution, who was taken prisoner in the battle at La Reforma on Wednesday, has come through a military court martial with his life.

The trial lasted all night and almost to the end everybody was certain that the austere kindly looking man would be looking into the rifles of a firing squad at dawn. But just as the sun rose over the purple mountains this morning the extraordinary jury of six federal generals decided it had no jurisdiction and the prisoner with a satisfied smile was led back to the town jail.

The action of the jury is most unusual. It is very uncommon for a Mexican military court to extend mercy. Military leaders said it marks a new epoch in Mexican military affairs and sets a precedent for possible future action in cases where some mitigation may be shown.

Makes Impassioned Plea.

Gen. Barrera made an impassioned plea to his jury and it was that, coupled with a deposition from Gen. Benigno Serratos, who captured him, that was believed to have saved his life. His case now will be heard by what is known as an ordinary military jury, and he faces from five to ten years' imprisonment for his treasonable action in the revolution.

The general in his plea said he had marched on Monterey at the beginning of the revolt, believing he was going there to put down rebels whom he was told by Gen. J. G. Escobar, his superior, had possession of that city. He said it was after the action in Monterey and the capture of that city that he learned he was on the rebel side and that he remained with the rebels since, simply because he could not get back out alive.

The prisoner at first made a long, calm statement, never raising his voice beyond ordinary talking tone. Then he grew eloquent and very earnest, gesticulating vehemently. The defense attorney pleaded the right of every man to question his government in a republic and the right to fight for freedom. He said the rebels are heroes when they win, but only traitors when they lose. The jury of generals listened with great attention.

Prosecutor Demands Death.

The prosecutor said the captured general must die under the law and that the jury could find only that verdict.

The prisoner, toward the end of the afternoon, sat silent, seemingly uninterested and apparently expecting death. When the prosecutor's plea ended the jury retired briefly to one side of the stage and held a whispered consultation and then returned. The decision was read and then, almost abruptly, the prisoner bowed, shrugged and smiled a "Thank you, gentlemen," and the guard took him away.

NACO CITIZENS DEMAND U. S. PROTECT THEM

Naco, Ariz., April 6.—[U.P.]—Business men of this American city today wired protests to Senators Carl Hayden and Henry F. Ashurst and Congressman L. D. Douglas of Arizona, at Washington. The telegram read:

"We, citizens of Naco, Ariz., request that at least two combat planes and a battery of anti-aircraft guns be sent to Naco at once, with full authority for military authorities to use whenever rebel planes fly over American territory. We consider this situation extremely serious, and demand, as American citizens, full protection from our government."

BABY ACCIDENTALLY HANGS SELF.

East St. Louis, Ill., April 6.—[U.P.]—Bonnie Lee Anderson, 9 months' old, hanged herself by accident here yesterday when she slipped down to the foot of her crib and fell through the rungs, hanging by her head. The child's mother was shopping at the time.

Free Accuser and Accused in Row Over Horse's Fall

Max Steinborn, 43 years old, 1626 South Ridgeway avenue, was discharged yesterday by Judge John J. Lupe on a charge of cruelty to animals. Mrs. Anna Michaels of Hinsdale accused Steinborn of beating his horse, which had slipped and fallen on an icy street on Jan. 23. Judge Lupe also freed Mrs. Michaels of a charge of assault made by Steinborn, who said she beat him with his own horsewhip.

3 BOMBS FOLLOW KILLING AS GANG WAR IS RESUMED

Cop Extinguishes One; Quinlans Targets.

Gang warfare in Chicago was resumed yesterday. The skirmishes of twenty-four hours totaled one man shot and killed and three bomb attacks, only two of which were successful. The bombs were directed against strongholds of Michael (Bubs) Quinlan, leader of a south side gang of racketeers and beer runners.

The slain man was Frank (Red) Krueger, 45 years old, said by police to have been a former partner of Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, and of late affiliated with Red Bolton, west side gangster and beer hustler. Krueger was shot twice in the head by two men Friday night as he sat in his automobile in front of his father-in-law's restaurant at 734 West 22d street. The killers escaped. William Eddy, Krueger's father-in-law, could give police no clew to the identity of the slayers.

Policeman Extinguishes Bomb.

One of the three bombs, consisting of thirty-five sticks of dynamite packed in a small black bag, was discovered by Policeman Patrick Fleming of the Stock Yards station in the doorway of a vacant store at 4183 South Halsted street. Fleming doused the bag with water before the lighted fuse had reached the explosive. The second floor of the place, police declared, was formerly a gambling den operated by Thomas Truitt, a friend of Quinlan.

The other two bombs, both made of dynamite and thrown within five minutes of each other, were directed against a floral shop at 3527 South Halsted street, owned by Charles P. (Chuck) Quinlan, a brother of Michael, and a soft drink parlor at 757 West 54th place, owned by Richard Quinlan, another brother. The first blast ripped in the entire front of the floral shop and shattered windows on both sides of the street. Damage was estimated at $1,500. In the other place a smaller amount of damage was caused.

Victim Has Quinlan's Picture.

A connection between the bombings and murder was seen by the police in the finding of a picture of Quinlan in the pockets of the slain man. Krueger is reported to have become wealthy in his beer activities with Bolton and to have incurred the displeasure of the rival Quinlan gang. A roll of $1,100 was found on Krueger's body after the shooting.

Police were searching last night for Krueger's divorced wife in the belief she may be able to shed some light on the killing. Some time ago, they learned, she is said to have made a threat to "get" Krueger. They failed to find her at her home at 2455 West 19th street.

"Polly the Cub" Ryan, "valley" gangster, son of "Paddy the Bear" Ryan, who was shot several years ago in a gun duel said to have been fought over Krueger's wife, and "Red" Purcell, were seized in Forest Park Friday night for questioning in the Krueger killing. When taken into custody Ryan was armed with a gun from which one bullet had been fired, according to police.

FLAMES DESTROY COSTLY INTERIOR OF BAL TABARIN

The interior of the Bal Tabarin, night club on the eighth floor in the Lake street annex of the Hotel Sherman, was destroyed early yesterday when a fire, believed to have been started by a cigaret stub, gained headway and consumed costly decorations and furnishings before firemen could gain entrance. Damage was estimated at $50,000 by the hotel management.

Hotel guests were not aware of the blaze until fire apparatus arrived and the pent up smoke escaped from windows and doorways.

A Sigma Phi fraternity ball, held Friday night, did not end until early yesterday morning. Firemen said that the fire started in a cushioned seat and that a cigaret, carelessly tossed there as the fraternity men were leaving, probably started the fire.

The decorations destroyed were designed and painted by Tony Sarg, the artist. Frank Bering, manager of the hotel, announced that he would wire Sarg at once, asking him to come to Chicago to make plans for redecorating the club.

CARNEGIE FUND TO CUT PENSIONS TO PROFESSORS

New York, N. Y., April 6.—[Special.]—Drastic reductions in old age pensions paid by the Carnegie Foundation for the advancement of teaching to retired professors will be made on May 1, it was learned today.

The maximum pension of $3,600 to professors retiring at 70, and $2,400 to those retiring at 65, will be lessened considerably to meet the strain placed upon the resources of the foundation by the increase in the total amount of pensions payable under the plan since the establishment of the free pension system in 1906, it was said. Minimum pensions of $1,000 will be only slightly reduced.

The Carnegie corporation has made arrangements, it is said, to make up the difference between the old pension amount and that of the reduced pension by an outright gift, not exceeding $500 a year in each case, to the 809 professors already granted pensions. The 3,600 "pensionables" who have not yet retired will not be so aided, though, therefore the new pensioners are the ones who seriously will feel the effects of the cut.

2 CAB DRIVERS FIGHT OVER GUN; THIRD IS SLAIN

Samuel Hanief, 28 years old, 3706 Lake Park avenue, Yellow cab chauffeur, was fatally wounded yesterday morning when he was shot by a fe[ud] over which two cab drivers were fighting at 39th street and Cottage Grove avenue. He died at the Chicago Memorial hospital.

The fight started after a collision between the cabs of Harry Tolson, colored, 5346 South Park way, of the Ivory Cab company, and William MacFadden, 4017 Lake Park avenue, another Yellow driver. Tolson jumped from his cab and threatened MacFadden with a revolver, the police were told. MacFadden grappled with the negro in an attempt to wrest the gun from him, and the pistol was accidentally discharged. The bullet struck Hanief, who was watching the fight from the curb, witnesses said.

Tolson escaped but was captured by Hyde Park police. He was held for the inquest into Hanief's death.

Ex-Employe of Brokerage House Held as Embezzler

Marvaux Charypar, 24 years old, 1814 Granville avenue, was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging embezzlement of $10,000. The warrant was obtained by the George M. Forman company, an investment house at 219 West Adams street, where Charypar was employed for three years. Charypar left the concern in Feburary and bought a refreshment stand in the lobby of a building at 114 West Van Buren street. He was arrested yesterday and will be arraigned tomorrow before Judge Daniel Trude in the Federal court.

NOBLEMEN SUE U. S. BROKERS ON OIL INVESTMENT

Boston, Mass., April 6.—(AP)—British noblemen, army and navy officers and others prominent in the public life of England were among 500 plaintiffs named in a bill in equity filed in federal court here today.

They seek to recover $2,666,500 from Peabody, Houghtelling & Co. of this city and Chicago which they allege they paid for bonds of the New England Oil Refining company of Fall River.

The plaintiffs charged that the defendant company in selling the bonds used false representations which investors "far across the Atlantic" could not be expected to distrust.

Among the plaintiffs were Sir Douglas Ramsay of Alyn, Perthshire; Rear Admiral Leonard Andrew B. Donaldson of South Sea; Brig. Gen. Ian Stewart of Leominster; Mary, Lady Ross, of Edinburgh; and Sir Alexander F. Whyte of London.

The oil company, according to the bill, was represented by the brokers as issuing $5,000,000 worth of 8 per cent bonds which were first lien on the company's rights in 210,000 acres of oil concessions in Venezuela. The British investors allege "no lien whatsoever was created on the oil rights or on the said concessions."

The plaintiffs asked the court to order Peabody, Houghtelling & Co. to reimburse them for the damage.

THREE KIDNAP, ATTACK GIRL; ALL CAPTURED

Miss Marie Sedero, 17 years old, 1801 West Cullerton street, was kidnaped last night by three young men at Lincoln and 18th streets, flung into their automobile, and driven into a prairie in Broadview, where the three attacked her. She sobbed her story to police at the Broadview station.

Chief Andrew Borg of Broadview, driving near the scene of the attack, heard the girl's screams and went to her rescue. He placed the girl in his car and ordered the three youths to get into their machine and go with him. Instead they speeded up in an effort to escape. But the car swerved and crashed into a light post. One of the youths was injured and was taken to the Westlake hospital in Maywood. The others fled on foot.

They were arrested early this morning at 19th avenue and St. Charles road, Maywood, by Sergt. J. E. Wilhite and his squad of the Maywood police. They gave their names as Frank Folver, 22 years old, 1531 West 17th street, and Walter Wojtezek, 21 years old, 1445 West 17th street. Both admitted they were in the car but denied attacking Miss Sedero. They named their companion at the hospital as Andrew Heinz, 20, 1515 West 17th street.

AURORA KILLING PROSECUTION IS PUT UP TO COURT

Carbary Says He Will Not Ask Indictment.

State's Attorney George D. Carbary announced yesterday that he is prepared to assume charge of the prosecutions arising out of the killing of Mrs. Lillian De King by an Aurora dry raider, but that he will make no recommendations to the grand jury to indict or not to indict. There was still, however, a possibility that he would be replaced by a special prosecutor, he admitted.

Decision as to who shall be in charge of the prosecution of Deputy Sheriff Ray Smith, who killed Mrs. De King, and of Eugene Boyd Fairchild, the snooper whose raise affidavit led to the raid, will come tomorrow from Circuit Judge John K. Newhall at Geneva. He will act on the original petition of Carbary, who asked to be supplanted in the case by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom.

Carbary Ready, He Says.

Mr. Carbary said that while he had not read Mr. Carlstrom's letter, refusing to take charge of the investigation and declaring it was the duty of the state's attorney, he viewed it in the nature of a command from a superior officer and was prepared to obey. At the office of Attorney General Carlstrom, however, it was explained that no orders had been given Carbary.

Attorneys Robert A. Milroy and Albert J. Kelley, representing the De King family, yesterday reiterated that they would ask the court to appoint a special prosecutor in place of Carbary.

The prosecution of Smith, who was held on a charge of manslaughter by a coroner's jury, will be delayed at least six months, Carbary said. He had been informed by Maj. H. H. Pillinger, the surgeon attending Smith, that the deputy sheriff would be in bed for that long. Smith was shot in the right thigh by 12 year old Gerald De King after the deputy killed the boy's mother.

Prosecutor Disowns Fairchild.

Regarding Fairchild, the former snooper, Prosecutor Carbary disowned him as an employé.

"I didn't hire him; Chief Investigator Walter Millar did," the prosecutor said.

Fairchild has gone to his father's home at Odell, Ill., to await arraignment tomorrow on a charge of perjury. Yesterday he conferred with Attorney Arthur Shay of Streator, regarded as one of the leading criminal defense lawyers of the state. Fairchild has another appointment with Attorney Shay today, but whether Shay will go to Geneva to defend him was not settled.

The donations were accompanied, in many cases, by letters of protest against the methods of prohibition enforcement which actuated the raid during which Mrs. Lillian De King was fatally shot by Deputy Sheriff Ray Smith.

CHARGES PARK OFFICIALS WITH CONTRACT PLOT

Injunction Asked to Stop Breakwater Jobs.

A taxpayer's suit for an injunction to restrain the Lincoln park commissioners and the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company from completing the $3,500,000 breakwater projects ordered by the former park board was filed yesterday in the Circuit court. A. E. Pemble is the taxpayer, and the petition was prepared by Attorney Urban Lavery. It charges certain former and present Lincoln park officials and the company with collusion.

Pemble charges that the commissioners conspired to let the contracts to the company secretly and fraudulently. He accuses David H. Jackson, former president of the board; Arthur B. Dehmlow, Mrs. Irene Pease Montanya, and Albert P. Bauer, former commissioners; Alexander Fyfe, Albert Z. Halperin, and John Torstenson, present commissioners; Carlos Ames, former secretary; Attorney Robert H. Farrell, General Superintendent Emil Johnson and Chief Engineer H. H. Marback.

Charges Prearranged Bids.

The petition alleges that those named schemed to award three contracts totaling approximately $3,000,000 to the Great Lakes company by prearranging bids with a lone competitor, the Fitzsimons & Connell Dredge and Dock company. Other competitors were not given notice before the bids were received, Pemble charges.

Advertisements were made in a small early edition of a morning paper so that competitors might not see them, the petition declares. It alleges that the Fitzsimons & Connell company was induced to prepare a higher bid than that of the Great Lakes concern, so that a semblance of legality might be observed. The competitor was offered the inducement of "being taken care of" on other contracts, Pemble charges.

The conspirators became adept in such transactions so that they concealed all evidence of their action, Attorney Lavery declared. He asks that the present board bring to light all evidence and pursue an open policy in its dealings to protect taxpayers.

Asks Payments Be Stopped.

The petition also asks that the present board be enjoined from honoring warrants for work already done, and the Great Lakes company from working on the projects. A temporary injunction will be sought on Monday, Attorney Lavery announced.

The petition cites the bidding on the three breakwater projects, pointing out that in each instance the Great Lakes company was low except in a portion of the third project which was divided. This division was the reward of the competitor, the petition declares.

On Aug. 20, 1926, exhibits accompanying the petition show, according to Attorney Lavery, that bids were received on 6,000 feet of breakwater north of Bittersweet place. The Great Lakes company bid $1,201,580 against the other concern's $1,262,000.

Low Bidder on Three Jobs.

On Aug. 23, 1927, Mr. Lavery said, the same company was low bidder on 2,000 feet of breakwater north of Montrose avenue at $1,195,500, against the $1,266,000 bid of the Fitzsimons & Connell company. And again on Oct. 24 of the same year the Great Lakes company bid $1,270,500, against $1,313,750 on 6,000 feet between Foster and Bryn Mawr avenues.

The first two contracts were awarded outright to the Great Lakes company, but the third was divided, Pemble's petition sets forth. The Fitzsimons & Connell company, in an item for 700,000 cubic yards of filling, was low at $448,000, against $469,000, and was awarded a contract for this portion of the work, while the balance of $801,500 went to the Great Lakes, according to the exhibits.

The petition charges that the company has failed to meet the monthly minimum requirements and has not completed the work as scheduled.

FAMINE TRAPS 50,000 SERFS IN BELGIAN CONGO

Race of Slaves Fights for Existence.

KAMPALA, Uganda, British East Africa, April 6.—(AP)—The teeming population of the Bahuti, a slave race in the Belgian Congo, is in a desperate plight from famine brought about by drought and inefficient cultivation of land. Thousands already have perished from hunger and disease which follows in its wake.

Under a longstanding feudal system the Bahutis are subjects of the Batusi, or ruling people. The dominant Batusis, who own herds of cows, care little for the welfare of their slaves.

The Bahutis now are virtually without food either purchasable or grown. The situation had steadily grown worse since the drought of August, 1927, and there has been little rain since.

Seek Food in Uganda.

Belgian food distributing centers at Rukira, Gatsibu and Kigali and three other places have been unable to cope with the relief problem on account of difficulties in transportation by porterage and lack of roads.

Emaciated and hungry, the serfs since November have been growing more and more desperate. Forced to choose between a long trek in search of food or a slow death, they began migrating into the Uganda territory, which is under British control.

In December the Uganda government, pleading necessity to conserve its own supplies, prohibited the sale or passage of food to the famine area.

Thus the foodless natives are shut in the trap of starvation with little hope of salvation. The ravenous population is hemmed by the Tagera river in the north and east, and barred by Uganda on the north. Food imported from the west is almost all bought up by the Belgian government and the mines.

Attacked by Lions.

It is estimated that some 50,000 desperate Bahutis passed through Mbarara in the Uganda region, the route of the trek being littered with corpses. Women and children lie helpless in the roads at night and sometimes fall victim to hyenas or lions, which are more prevalent as though attracted by the abundance of helpless people.

Another crying need is medical attention. Belgian authorities are improving roads and have purchased motor trucks in order to organize transportation of food supplies, but there are not enough qualified physicians to fight diseases, including smallpox, which are destroying the starving race.

2 QUIT PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA; LEADER ACCUSED OF RUDENESS

Philadelphia, Pa., April 6.—(AP)—Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia orchestra, today was charged with rude and unfair treatment by one of two leading members of the orchestra, both of whom announced their retirement, effective at the close of this season.

The musicians leaving the orchestra are Mischa Mischakoff, leader of the first violins and concertmaster, who said Stokowski was "rude and unfair" to him recently before the entire orchestra, and David Dunbinsky, leader of the second violins, who gave no reason for his resignation.

Stokowski expressed astonishment upon learning of Mischakoff's charges. He denied there had been any discourtesy.

MISS RICHARDSON BECOMES BRIDE IN APRIL SETTING

Weds Frederick Spencer at St. Chrysostom's.

The social limelight was occupied yesterday by the first April bride, Miss Bluford Richardson, whose marriage to Frederick Spencer of Highland Park was solemnized at 4:30 p. m. at St. Chrysostom's. The church was decorated for the service in shaded greens and white, with four large urns of calla lilies mingling with clusters of siberian ferns, palms and English ivy before the candle-lit altar.

The bride was a picturesque figure in a gown of cream colored satin, devoid of trimming except for a touch of rose point lace at the border of a flowing train suspended from the waist. Her long, filmy veil of rose point was purchased years ago in Belgium by her grandfather, Col. Samuel Walker, to be worn by his granddaughters and their descendants at their weddings. She carried a spray of calla lilies.

Frances Richardson Honor Maid.

The maid of honor, Miss Frances Richardson, wore a sleeveless gown of pale pink flat crêpe with pointed draperies trailing the floor in back and a felt hat of matching color. The bridesmaids were Miss Sarane Otis, Miss Elinor Farwell, Mrs. James Otis, Mrs. Stephen Y. Hord, Miss Elaine Pommeroy of Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Henry Potter of New York City, and Miss Elisabeth Sutphin of Cincinnati, O. They were similarly gowned in turquois blue crêpe and carried large armfuls of pink roses and sweet peas. The bride's mother, Mrs. Ralph T. Richardson, wore an ensemble of black crêpe with a black straw hat and silver fox scarf.

Brother Is Best Man.

Egbert Spencer acted as best man for his brother and the ushers included William Faurot, Charles Case, George Meesely, John Richardson, Clyde S. Bowen, Theodore Kenefick of Buffalo, N. Y.; Briton Martin of Philadelphia, Francis Mitchell of Cincinnati, O., and Richard Kimball, Charles Payson and Warren Leslie of New York.

The Casino club was ablaom with spring flowers for the reception which followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer have departed for a sojourn of several weeks in Bermuda.

NICARAGUA ASKS YANKS TO STAY AS GUARD CHIEFS

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, April 6.—(AP)—President Jose Maria Oncada in discussing Nicaraguan politics and relations with the United States today said that it was wise and imperative that United States marines continue to offer and train the national guard.

He acknowledged that the Monroe Doctrine had been a most effective method of preventing European interference in Central American affairs, but believed that it called for more material aid from the United States in maintaining peace and developing a republican system of government. He said that American action hitherto had been more like the words of a professor.

He intimated that Nicaragua was not consulted when the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was made in 1850 and said that his country remained the most interested party in the proposed interocean canal.

CELEBRATE 63D ANNIVERSARY OF G. A. R. FOUNDING

Five hundred sons and daughters of union veterans of the civil war living in Cook county gathered last night at the Hotel Sherman to make merry at a dinner commemorating the anniversary of the founding of the Grand Army of the Republic sixty-three years ago. It was an enthusiastic crowd that cheered each speaker as roundly as it did the colors.

Guests of honor for the occasion were Judge James Willis of Tama, Ia., formerly commander in chief of the G. A. R., who spoke on coöperation between G. A. R. posts; Charles T. Marsh of Rockford, commander of the Illinois G. A. R.; Jessie M. Anson of Chicago, president of the Illinois Daughters of Union Veterans, and Edward F. Ream of Aurora, commander of the Sons of Union Veterans. The principal speaker of the evening was Col. Henry A. Allen, commander of the 108th engineers of the A. E. F.

LARGE U. S. NAVY HELD GUARANTEE OF WORLD PEACE

Two widely differing views as to how the peace of the world may best be preserved by the United States were expressed yesterday at noon by Rear Admiral William L. Rodgers, United States navy, retired, and Frederick J. Libby, director of the National Council for the Prevention of War. They debated the question of naval disarmament before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations at a luncheon in the Palmer house.

"The greatest protection to the peace of the world is an American navy inferior to none and ready to act when the people call on it for the defense of American ideals and American policies," Admiral Rodgers said.

"Our nation maintains a great navy in order to support our international trade in peace and war and to protect it from unfair competition," he continued. "Foreign nations desire to see us reduce our ability to maintain our policies and are trying to induce us to reduce our navy voluntarily."

Mr. Libby replied to Admiral Rodgers that adequate preparedness is to be found in a friendly attitude, and that the reduction of the American navy is the only logical way of guaranteeing peace.

LINK DRINKING PARTY TO HOTEL FIRE; SIX DEAD

Des Moines, Ia., April 6.—(AP)—The known death toll set at six, firemen and police tonight continued to dig into the ruins of historic old Kirkwood hotel, swept by fire early today, in the belief that bodies of some of the eight persons unaccounted for might be found.

The dead were residents of Des Moines. Sixteen persons were seriously injured. Property loss was estimated in excess of $300,000.

Meanwhile, State Fire Marshal John W. Strohm and City Fire Marshal Charles Barker began an extended investigation into the conflagration.

Survivors were quoted by officials as declaring they had been awakened early in the morning by reports that the building was ablaze, but that they were told to return to their beds because the fire had been extinguished. Coroner William C. Carpenter said a number of survivors would be called to testify.

Reports of survivors told of parties on the upper floors last night. Fire Chief Burnett had a report that a group of men and women were gathered in the southwest corner near the top of the building when the fire started. He said that if that were true, they probably perished.

GERMANY LOST WAR AS CHIEF OF STAFF BUNGLED

Von Below Tears Veil Off Marne Battle Mystery.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 6.—[Special.]—How Germany constructed an invincible war machine and then failed of victory from lack of a brain equal to direction of the vast and complicated organism is revealed by Gen. Hans von Below, a veteran German officer, who commanded an army corps in the world war.

In an interview with THE TRIBUNE correspondent Gen. Von Below, who has been living in retirement in Washington for seven years, broke his long silence, disclosed secrets of the German high command and tore the veil from the mystery of the collapse in mid-career of the great German drive on Paris in September, 1914.

Other Side of Story.

Almost within gunshot of Paris, the Teutonic hosts were halted and turned back at the Marne and the French defenders were acclaimed the workers of a military miracle. On the seamy side this bit of history takes on a different appearance in the light of the testimony of Gen. Von Below. According to his version of the incident the great onsweeping German army was defeated in this battle of the Marne not so much by French arms as by the German general staff.

It was the German high command, according to Gen. Von Below, that lost this battle and, with it, lost the war. The German G. H. Q. bungled the direction of the greatest piece of military machinery ever put together by the hand and brain of man.

The plans of that advance on Paris had been drawn up in accord with the teaching of the great Von Moltke, but their execution was intrusted to a lesser Von Moltke—nephew of the field marshal—and the nephew, who was a sick man at the time, was unequal to a task that demanded the genius and resolution of his great kinsman. It was the little Von Moltke, according to Gen. Von Below, who not only weakened the German armies on the western front by the transfer of 75,000 men to the eastern front, but eventually, being imperfectly advised of the situation, ordered the retirement of the German armies with victory virtually within their grasp.

Lives in U. S. for Wife's Sake.

Gen. Von Below received me in his study. He presented me to his wife, an American woman, one of the Bryces of Columbia, S. C., who was with her husband in Germany throughout the war, but who prefers to live in this country and for whose sake her husband has exiled himself from the fatherland.

The general drew himself up to his full height, nigh six feet, threw back his broad shoulders and fixed me with a steel blue eye when I proposed that he give me an interview on the inside history of the war. I could tell that I had committed a court-martial offense and I was prepared for the worst. No, he couldn't think of it—was astounded at my effrontery.

Polite to the Culprit.

But he was determined to be polite to the culprit. He would show him his war mementos, his swords, helmets, medals, autographed photographs of the emperor, crown prince, fellow commanders, and comrades that adorn the walls of his study.

Little by little the bluff old war horse melted and almost before he knew it he was seated at his desk beneath a great portrait of Napoleon Bonaparte, telling me the story I had asked for. Incidentally, the little Corsican is the idol of this German warrior, "the greatest military genius the world has ever beheld," Von Below calls him.

First the general sketched in broad outline the history of the war to show the blunders of her military men that cost Germany the victory. When he had finished we turned to the warfare of the future. I recalled steps taken at the Washington conference on the limitation of naval armaments to outlaw the use of poison gasses and the unrestricted use of the submarine against merchantmen.

Will Use Hunger Blockade.

"Is there any one," he ejaculated, "so naïve as to believe that another big war will be fought without making use or trying to make use of the hunger blockade—the most cruel of all means—of U boats, of aircraft warfare, of gas, etc.? Only a person living in the clouds, who has learned nothing of history, could think so.

"When powder was invented the whole knighthood protested against such unknightly means of warfare. But, alas, powder, U-boats, gas are too powerful means for any country fighting for its existence to forego the use of.

"The soldier as well as the politician has to reckon with realities and not with Utopias. War may be restricted and diminished, but can never be abolished. Such restrictions as well as 'rights' must be enforced by might and so quite by itself might becomes right.

League Hasn't Ended War.

"Has the bitter effect of the last war changed any of those principles? The Versailles treaty gives the best answer. Vae victis! Germany is defenseless, around her militarism and marinism have reached a still stronger development. In spite of the league of nations wars have not stopped."

"What do you think of the latest development in mechanization of warfare?" I asked the general.

"It is easy," he replied, "to exaggerate the importance of mechanical devices in warfare. The mechanization of warfare has been going on for ages. Each war produces a new crop of hitherto undreamed of mechanical contrivances for annihilating the enemy. But, after all, it is men, not machines, who must be relied on to win battles."

I called his attention to the current controversy on the question of equipping the American army with tanks on a large scale.

"I think the American military authorities who are opposed to the expenditure of any large amounts on manufacture of tanks are well advised," replied Gen. Von Below. "Your country never will have need of tanks in any future war in which it becomes involved. No enemy ever will gain a sufficient foothold on your shores to necessitate the use of tanks. In an overseas war of the character of the world war you would need tanks, but I venture to say you will never again be able to transport a large army overseas. The fortuitous combination of circumstances which protected the transport of your great army overseas in 1917 and 1918 will never be reproduced."

The general gave his interview in perfect English.

Study Defense on Seven Fronts.

"For years our general staff had prepared and studied the plans of defense against several fronts, especially with a view to the landing of English troops in Belgium," said Gen. Von Below when he got down to recounting the events of the German drive on Paris in which he took part.

"The original plan with this contingency in view was made by Count von Schlieffen. Against Russia the plan was to coöperate defensively with Austria, meanwhile forcing a speedy decision in the west. Therefore as few troops as possible should be left in eastern Germany. These troops were to defend the frontiers and quits especially East Prussia, which would be threatened by a Russian invasion.

"Schlieffen even desired to withdraw these troops to the River Weichsel barrier in case the Russians appeared with too great a numerical superiority. The Weichsel barrier was to be held. A Russian offensive through the province of Posen ignoring the Prussian troops to the north was hardly possible and was not to be feared, as in this case the Russian right flank would be menaced. Schlieffen would make full use of all possible forces against the western enemies. The right wing of the western German army was to be made as strong as possible. With this wing Schlieffen would seek to win the war.

Must Pass Through Belgium.

"It was planned to advance with strong reserves 'en echelon' to the right. The advance had to pass through Belgium. In case Belgium should resist, her army must be overrun, landed English troops already ashore were to be pushed back into the sea, while the French army was to be attacked and its left wing outflanked. Schlieffen planned to harass the French army to the uttermost in order to compel France to initiate negotiations with Germany to end hostilities before England would be able to appear with masses in the theater of war.

"It was then hoped that troops no longer needed in the west could be sent to the east. The entire plan was based on a speedy decision. It was clear that, considering the isolation of Germany and her geographical situation, delay would be in favor of the enemy. The German mobilization and the concentration of troops proceeded like clockwork. Luttich [Liege] and Namur were taken by assault and the armies advanced victoriously. But unfortunately the ingenious plan of Schlieffen had already been weakened by Schlieffen's successor, Count von Moltke, nephew of the old Moltke.

Seven Armies Side by Side.

"The seven armies—numbered 1 to 7 from north to south—advanced side by side. The armies 1 to 5 were to deliver the decisive blow. But the right wing lacked reserves—the echelon which was to force the decision.

"The left wing of the army in Alsace-Lorraine could easily have been weakened. In accordance with the deductions of old Moltke before the war of 1870, Schlieffen had seen no danger in a momentary success of the French army in Alsace. There Strassburg, Metz, and the Rhine barrier were strongholds of safety. In case the French attacked Alsace and tried to invade south Germany, they would have had less forces at their disposal for the decisive fight in the north. With a decision reached in the north, French success in the south was doomed to certain failure.

Then Russians Strike.

"While the German armies advanced in the west the Russians invaded East Prussia. Naturally! That was to be foreseen.

"In answer to the call for assistance from the east the resolution of the German headquarters weakened. Dazzled by the rapid advance of the western armies, two whole army corps were withdrawn from these forces and sent to the east. The 11th and the garde reserve corps with an effective of approximately 75,000 men.

"And this before the decisive battle!"

The general clapped his hand to his brow in token of total incomprehension of so egregious a blunder.

Arrive After Battle.

"These army corps were to be badly needed during the coming battles in the west," he went on. "They arrived in the east after the battle of Tannenberg was fought and won. This disastrous mistake practically destroyed the already weakened plan of Schlieffen.

"During the western operations the reins slipped from the hands of the G. H. Q. It kept far too distant from the zone of fighting and was unable to keep close connection with the armies of the decisive wing. To a varying degree the connection with the troops remained interrupted.

"The two armies of the right wing—the first under Gen. von Kluck and the second under Gen. von Buelow—operated independently; the nearer they came to Paris the more they differed about the way in which to continue the operations. They did not operate in accord with each other. The G. H. Q., on account of the lack of contact I have mentioned, was not fully and correctly informed of what was going on at the front, and did not establish what was essentially necessary—unity of command. So it happened that the first army fought northeastward of Paris, offering its right wing to a counterstroke of the enemy, while the second army fought in line Mont Mirail-Vertus [south of Epernay] with its front towards the south.

French See Weakness.

"This situation was cleverly recognized by Gen. Gallieni, governor of Paris, who influenced Gen. Joffre to order at once what he, Joffre, had postponed in his mind for a later time—the counter attack. So Gallieni, using Manoury's army, attacked the right wing of Gen. von Kluck's army."

The general, warming to his subject, had drawn a sheet of paper from his desk and was rapidly sketching the positions of the armies.

"Von Kluck's army—here——," he indicated, "was in great danger about the 5th of September. But in a masterly way Von Kluck took three army corps from his left wing, where they had been in close contact with the second army, and by forced marches led them northward, partly behind his lines, marching day and night to a counterstroke against Manoury's left wing. Indeed, thanks to the heroic deeds of these three army corps on the 9th of September, the left wing of the French army was decisively defeated. Manoury's left wing fled to Paris. The left wing of Von Kluck on the River Ourcq defended and held its sector in days of hard fighting against superior numbers."

Lives Over Thrilling Days.

Gen. Von Below paused, oblivious of his interviewer and his surroundings. He was living over again those thrilling days. He had lifted his eyes to a picture of Frederick the Great in battle, flanking the portrait of Napoleon.

"Ah, that was a wonderful feat—that counterstroke," he murmured. Slowly the general came back to his narrative.

"On the 9th of September," he went on, "Manoury's left wing opened a way to Von Kluck's right wing leading into the rear of Manoury's army!

"Thus a priceless opportunity was opened to Von Kluck and this movement should have been the decision and more so, because on the same day Buelow's left wing and the right wing of Von Hausen's third wing had defeated the French troops in front of them. Naturally the taking away of three army corps of Von Kluck's left wing for the blow against Manoury opened a gap between the first and the second army. On the 8th of September this gap extended some 40 kilometers. It was filled out by two cavalry corps.

Under Influence of Defeat.

"Into this gap marched the English expeditionary corps of Gen. French. They advanced hesitatingly and apparently still under the influence of the defeats they had suffered since the battle of Mons. The deeper the English marched into that gap the more they then were exposed to later attacks from the inner wings of the first and second German armies.

"On the front the German troops, in spite of all the fatigues, were in the highest spirits. The enemy had finally accepted a battle and had been defeated. To show against what odds Von Kluck's army gained its victory it is only necessary to recall that 121 German battalions had faced 191 battalions of the enemy (127 French and 64 English)."

The general evidently was approaching a crucial point in his story. He whirled about in his chair and tapped his forefinger on his desk.

"On the 9th of September," he thundered," there occurred what foreign propaganda has called 'the miracle of the Marne.'

"The German armies, victorious, retired on the entire front during the night of the 9th and 10th of September!

"It was indeed a 'miracle.' Certainly one that the fighting troops could little understand.

"The G. H. Q., or rather Gen. von Moltke, a sick man, was in utter depression. Far away from the front, he was the victim of most contradictory reports and of lack of accurate news. It was a great mistake that he had not gone personally to the right wing of the German army to establish there a unity of command and to personally assume command.

Colonel Makes Decision.

"To make an end of all uncertainty the G. H. Q. finally sent a lieutenant colonel to the headquarters of the Fourth, Third, Second, and First armies, with Gen. von Moltke's full authority to make the momentous decision of a retreat or no retreat of the armies.

"Gen. von Moltke had great fear that the situation of the first army was disastrous. Alas, also, the lieutenant colonel regarded the situation through pessimistic spectacles. Coming from the dreary and peaceful office rooms of the faraway G. H. Q., one can perhaps imagine what an impression the zone of fighting made upon him. He saw the long columns of wounded and all the inevitable disorder behind a fighting army and heard the many possible and impossible rumors which always spread around behind the lines, especially during great battles.

"From where he rode in his auto he could not see the real spirit of the fighting troops. Also the influence of his pessimistic general in chief had already prepared him to regard all in darker colors. This episode, tragic as it is for Germany, is very interesting for the military student. The more distant from the battle front the G. H. Q., the more important it is to maintain close connection with the fighting line.

"Temporary visits to the front by the general in chief and permanent visits to the front of his general staff officers and the presence of liaison officers at the different headquarters are indispensable to maintain unity of command.

"Here in this case it failed and the result was an absolutely erroneous decision against which the troops would have rebelled if their discipline had been less perfect.

Gives Order of Retreat.

"After the discussions in the headquarters of the First and Second army the lieutenant colonel gave the order of retreat in the name of the G. H. Q., and the victorious troops, after unheard of fatigues and weeks of successful fighting, had to retire, with the enemy fleeing in front of them!

"Indignantly they expressed their disgust.

"Even though the Schlieffen plan had been partially destroyed by 75,000 men having been sent to the east, the victory in the west was practically won by heroic deeds of the troops and the good generalship of the First army. Again fate had favored the Germans; but the leading, or rather misleading, of the G. H. Q. let victory slip from Germany's hands. Hard for the army and hard for the country!

Those Absent Army Corps.

"I beg you to imagine how changed the result could have been had those two army corps sent to the east been at the Marne!

"Nothing illustrates better the genius of Schlieffen's plan than what happened at Paris when the thunder of German cannon was heard in the French capital. The French government had fled to Bordeaux, and some of the French newspapers clamored for negotiations with Germany. And even in the English expeditionary forces lack of confidence in the French resistance was frequently expressed. After receiving the news of the German retreat on the 10th of September, French and English generals expressed their astonishment at 'the miracle.'

Retreat in Perfect Order.

"The German armies executed their retreat in perfect order, of course, without being molested by an enemy who had been defeated. The German armies dug in on a defensive line—and the trench war began.

"As a landing of English troops was to be expected at Calais, the right wing of the German defensive line became endangered and it was necessary to reinforce it by troops from the left wing, the 7th army in Alsace.

"At once the question naturally arises, why had not the G. H. Q. taken the two western corps at once from the left wing of the German army if it was thought necessary to withdraw troops from the west for service in the east?

"The withdrawal of troops from the left army wing, together with the two army corps sent to the east, shows that in a faithful adherence to the Schlieffen plan at least four army corps—an army of 150,000 men—could have followed in reserve behind the right wing of the army. Surely this would have won the decision at the Marne."

The high command also bungled the campaign on the eastern front, according to Gen. Von Below. As a result two years were wasted in getting control of the situation in the east.

"While the Russian attacks were repulsed, the G. H. Q. ordered in the west the attack against the most formidable stronghold of the French—Fortress Verdun," he continued. "The attack was a failure and cost rivers of blood. Such strategical will o' the wisps could never lead to a decisive blow.

Delay Favors Allies.

"Already in 1915 it was clearly seen how delay favored the entente. When in 1918 four two million Americans had arrived at the theater of war the German army was no more what it had been.

"At the end of August, 1918, during the battle of Peronne I had five divisions under my command. One of them had an effective infantry in the fighting line of 300 and another of 180 men.

"The effective infantry of a division should have been 9,000 men. During the fights of September and October, 1918, we considered divisions which could put 700 or 800 men infantry in the fighting line as especially strong divisions.

"At that time our principal resistance consisted of our machine gun nests and of our artillery; the infantry was too weak to hold a long line. Our infantry at that time was used only as a protection for the other arms.

"Looking back now at the gigantic struggle of Germany one can well say that at the beginning of the war the prospect of a German victory was good. It was not alone possible—it was probable. I am of the opinion that, in spite of all, if the German government had not failed an understanding with the entente could have been reached about the end of 1915, thanks to the many German victories.

"But German diplomacy and the German government lacked energy and intelligence. It is hard to say, but, alas, it is the truth. Eventually the German government permitted single persons and political parties to sap the vital strength of the country and finally to stab the army in the back with a dagger.

Peace of Renunciation.

"Even in 1918 it was still in the power of the government to come to a peace of renunciation, securing at least a state of order and saving Germany from chaos. The armistice and the treaty of Versailles are the logical consequences of the blunders of an incompetent government.

"This government fell into the trap of the entente, which through Woodrow Wilson promised Germany a peace on the basis of his 14 points if Germany would lay down her arms. Germany did so in the armistice of Nov. 11, 1918. But after she was disarmed and entirely defenseless the 'peace of Versailles' was forced on her. In helplessness the then Socialistic government committed the mistake of signing a document which betrayed Germany. Not one of the 14 promised points was kept!"

Blundered on Sea, Too.

The German government blundered on the sea quite as disastrously as on land, in the opinion of Gen. Von Below.

"That is quite another story, which shows how little the German government understood how to make use of its splendid forces of defense," he said. "Admiral von Tirpitz has criticised this in his admirable book with a masterful hand.

"Instead of using the fleet the government bottled our squadrons up in the harbors. What our fleet was able to do was shown in the battle of Jutland. That battle or similar battles could have been fought in 1914. I believe such naval activity would have been very embarrassing to England."

U. S. TROOPS PRAISED BY LLOYD GEORGE ON 12TH ANNIVERSARY

BY DAVID LLOYD GEORGE.

[Wartime Prime Minister of Great Britain.]

[Copyright, 1929: By the United Press.]

LONDON, April 6.—On this, the twelfth anniversary of the day when the American nation took up arms to join us in the great war, I recall, with feelings of profoundest gratitude, the immeasurable value of that contribution to the allied cause from the first moment of intervention right down to the conclusion of the negotiations for world peace.

The armies she sent to the battlefield were magnificent in fighting qualities and played a decisive part in some of the most critical engagements of the war. The material and financial resources supplied by the United States were of vital importance in enabling us to carry on the struggle to a successful issue.

With the passing of the years, a kindlier atmosphere has replaced the bitter passion and animosities of the days of the war. We gladly forget the scenes of horror and the international hatreds that were called into play.

The great moral gesture of idealism and sacrifice expressed by the armies of eager young American manhood coming to the death fields of Europe will live always in the grateful memory of the allied nations and be, in particular, an enduring bond between the English speaking peoples on each side of the Atlantic.

EXHIBIT SHOWS WAR RELICS.

Twelve years ago yesterday America plunged into the maelstrom of the world war. To commemorate the anniversary the Chicago Historical society yesterdays held a special exhibit at its headquarters, at Dearborn and Ontario streets, displaying relics and mementoes of war days. Among the articles included were sacks that once contained flour sent to Belgium by America, which had been embroidered by Belgian children and returned as a token of their gratitude; a periscope used in the trenches near Verdun; gas masks, and a lantern from the cathedral at Verdun. In the place of honor in the main hall is a swinging frame containing the photos of Chicago boys who lost their lives in the service, which was made a part of the exhibit.

STATE'S WITNESS BACKS DOWN IN ELLER AID TRIAL

Is Fourth to Repudiate Former Testimony.

CRIMINAL COURT.

John Giacotti, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Charles A. Williams.

Edward C. Fleisser, embezzlement, sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Another state's witness in the trial of thirteen henchmen of Morris Eller, political boss of the 20th ward, yesterday repudiated testimony given in the previous trial last fall. The witness, Paumpy Cornelius, colored kidnaping victim in the April 10 primary, is the fourth whose testimony has collapsed in three days.

Cornelius failed to identify one of two witnesses named in direct testimony, both of whom he had pointed out at the previous trial. The defendants named are State Senator James Leonardo and Edward Brownstein.

Tells of Kidnaping.

Cornelius, on the stand in Judge Frank Comerford's court, said that he was kidnaped by a gang in front of his home in the 20th ward. He pointed to Leonardo as the driver of the car in which he was taken to the election day jail at 1352 South Peoria street. After his release, the witness said, Brownstein met him in the Maxwell police station, where he had made a complaint.

"Brownstein said I made a good statement," Cornelius continued, "and told me he would see me at my house. He came that night and told me he wanted me to be 100 per cent with his party. He promised me a $175 a month job, said he would take me down to see the 'old man,' and told my mother he would make her queen of the west side."

When Judge Comerford sustained objections of defense attorneys to questions on the identity of the "old man," the witness was examined by Defense Attorney Ben Short. Attorney Short asked Brownstein to stand.

Shakes His Identifications.

"Is this the man who talked to you at your home?" he asked Cornelius. A.—I don't know. I think it is.

Q.—Are you sure? A.—I don't think so. He looks to be a little taller and not so heavy. I can't realize that position.

The spectators tittered and Leonardo was then asked to stand.

Q.—Is this the man you identified as the driver? A.—I think so.

Q.—Was he the driver? A.—He looks to be.

Q.—Well, is he? A.—I don't know.

Q.—What was the name of the driver? A.—Joe.

Q.—Do you know that Mr. Leonardo's name is not Joe? A.—No.

The witness was excused and was not taken into custody.

Judge Comerford on Friday held Jess Freeman and Alvin Curley, witness who denied previous stories to the grand jury, on bench warrants charging perjury. Yesterday he announced that he would direct contempt action against Freeman.

Earlier in the day's session Police Captain Dan Lynch of the Maxwell station was charged with knowledge of the kidnapings. Mrs. C. Ray Hanan, wife of a victim, said that the captain had told her not to worry; that her husband would be freed later in the day.

BODY OF BAILIFF'S BROTHER FOUND IN QUARRY POOL

The body of Wilbert Beatty, 42 years old, 1929 West 46th place, was found yesterday in an abandoned quarry known as Sheehan's lake, near 55th place and Central Park avenue. He was a teaming contractor who had several garbage wagons hired by the city, and he was a brother of William Beatty, Municipal court bailiff who was shot by Myron Caffee, a prohibition agent, a year ago.

WILBERT BEATTY.

Beatty was reported missing last Nov. 29. Shortly afterward his mother, Mrs. Lavina Beatty, told the police she feared he had been harmed because he had identified two men as robbers. The men, who had stolen Beatty's watch, were questioned but released.

Yesterday after the finding of the body Irvine Sweet, a flagman for the Grand Trunk railroad, told of seeing a man get off a garbage wagon, tie his horses to a tree, and walk toward the quarry. He said the time was about Nov. 29.

Sergt. Louis Dinople said there was a bruise on Beatty's forehead but other than that there were no signs of violence. He said the cause of death could not be determined until after an examination of the body.

Beatty's mother said he was married and had two children but had separated from his wife and was living at the mother's home.

BOY GETS TWO YEARS AS BURGLAR.

Eau Claire, Wis., April 6.—[Special.]—Harold Lowe, 18, was sentenced to from 2 to 3 years at the Green Bay reformatory by Judge James Wickham in the circuit court here today for burglary and larceny.

Bring Flowers

The "School Children's Special," carrying 800 central Illinois high school and grade school students, arrived in Chicago from southern and central Illinois yesterday morning at the Dearborn street station. The students came for a tour of Chicago's parks and the Field museum.

The train, operated by the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad, was in charge of school teachers and Boy Scouts. Pana, called the "City of Roses," sacrificed its flower beds to supply roses to the young people, which they presented to Mayor Thompson's reception committee.

Lock Woman in Closet; Rob Flat of $5,000 Loot

Two burglars, posing as delivery men, yesterday entered the apartment of Mrs. Alice Sterling, 832 Argyle street, locked Mrs. Sterling in a closet and stripped the apartment of clothing valued at $5,000 and $50 in cash.

NEVADA RULING ON CRUELTY MAY AID MRS. INMAN

Divorce Not Assured if Both at Fault.

Reno, Nev., April 6.—(AP)—A new ruling of the Nevada Supreme court that the doctrine of "comparative rectitude" cannot be recognized in divorce actions, was injected today into the divorce suit of Walker P. Inman of New York, against his wife, Helene Garnet Patton Inman.

Counsel for Mrs. Inman said the Supreme court decision, handed down yesterday in another case, would be used in opposing Inman's plea for a decree on the grounds of cruelty. Mrs. Inman, a target of charges of infidelity, has countered with allegations of cruelty on the part of her husband and asks a divorce and a $250,000 property settlement.

"It is not a principle of the divorce law that if both are guilty the party who has sinned the least is entitled to a divorce," the Supreme court ruled in setting aside a decree granted R. E. L. Blankenship upon appeal of his wife, Byrd C. Blankenship.

The court held that the rule of recrimination was applicable to the Blankenship case and operated as a bar to divorce. Both parties had charged cruelty.

Continuing her testimony of alleged indignities on the part of her husband, Mrs. Inman today asserted that his mother, Mrs. James B. Duke, widow of the tobacco magnate, was cold to her.

She said she was told by Emanuel Cohen of New York, who was her attorney in the property settlement negotiations, that the Duke millions were against her.

DON'T YOU SNUB OUR DOLLY GANN, KANSAS WARNS

Mr. Gann Eats at Home if Missus Wins.

Topeka, Kas., April 6.—[Special.]—The social war raging in Washington society over the position of Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, sister of Vice President Curtis, is echoing in this city.

Kansans contend Mrs. Gann "Is our girl" and are standing by her brother, Charley, in his fight to push his sister to the fore socially in Washington.

Charles M. Harger of the state board of regents in a statement today declared: "Charley will get his rights if it takes all summer.

"Kansans will rally behind Curtis in his effort to upset society rules of the effete east and put his womenfolk in their proper place in the parade.

"What are a lot of bejeweled ambassadors' wives that they should be pushed ahead of a Kansas woman? The countries they represent all owe us money. Until they pay up they should be modest and stay where they belong."

Norris Rubs It In.

Washington, D. C., April 6.—[Special.]—The squabble raging over the social status of the Gann family produced another barrage of laughter today.

Senator George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.] climaxed the day's developments with a letter to Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson.

Mr. Norris warned the secretary that if his decision on the question of Mrs. Gann's proper position at the leading dinner tables in the national capital is delayed too long "the common people may have their eyes opened and discover that issues in campaigns, usually fought out along national and international lines, are second in importance to the social functions of our capital city."

And What of Mr. Gann?

While Mr. Norris was making the most of an opportunity to take a slap at the seriousness with which the capital of the world's greatest democracy takes the question of social precedence, it was disclosed in another quarter that any social ambitions cherished by Mr. Gann, husband of the Vice President's official hostess, will probably have to be sacrificed to his wife's aspirations.

It was revealed that if the state department capitulates to the Vice President's insistent demand that Mrs. Gann rank at official dinners above the wives of ambassadors and ministers, it is probable that in the future, invitations for social functions will be addressed only to the Vice President and Mrs. Gann. Until the present controversy arose, Mr. Curtis received a separate invitation while another was addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Gann. If the Vice President wins his point only one invitation would be sent and it would not include Mr. Gann.

Senator Norris' Letter.

"The real contest," said Senator Norris in his letter, "as is now shown by the agitation going on in the civilized world, was whether, if we elected a Vice President who was a widower and whose hostess was to be his married sister, the entire superstructure and underpinning of civilized government was going to be shaken to the very foundation with dangers of controversies, even leading to war, until it could be officially determined by you where the Vice President's sister should sit at the table or, indeed, whether she should have any dinner.

"While you are deciding this question, you might just as well also decide what is going to happen to the Vice President's sister's husband. Just as soon as you have determined where his sister shall sit, you will be confronted at once with the problem of finding a place at the table for her husband.

Matter for World Court.

"Either decide it without delay or officially report a disagreement on your part to the President of the United States and ask him to submit it to the world court."

The senator pointed out that vitally important international affairs hang in the balance while the attention of the country centers on the social controversy.

"Until it is known definitely where the Vice President's sister is going to sit," he said, "it will be impossible for many socially minded Washingtonians to properly shine in society in accordance with their social and financial ambitions. Many social functions are waiting anxiously and breathlessly for your decision.

"It is extremely important that society know without delay whether the Vice President's sister shall sit next to the dark skinned official from Liberia or whether she shall be on the right or left of the slant eyed statesman from Shanghai."

Entire World Watching.

The effect of the squabble is felt not only in Washington society, the senator said, but because of former Secretary Kellogg's ruling on the point, "all nations assembled in our capital have taken official notice, the decision has been appealed from and the entire world is watching your official action with intense interest."

"I have no personal interest in the decision," concluded Senator Norris. "I am only interested and I am writing as one of the common, ordinary citizens, who, in a very small way, contributes in the shape of taxes towards the payment and the upkeep of this great mysterious social sham, which towers in importance over questions of national and international import."

RESORT TO NOISE TO DRIVE BIRDS FROM CITY ROOST

Springfield, Mass., April 6.—(AP)—Sweet music may lull to slumber, but sour notes are to be tried to see if they will produce the opposite effect and so discourage the hundreds of starlings that nightly roost on the buildings of Springfield's million dollar municipal group.

Hiram L. Dorman, superintendent of public buildings, has been seeking means to rid the buildings of the birds, which have become a pest, but his style has been somewhat cramped by the insistence of T. W. Pearson, agent of the S. P. C. A., that the means devised shall be devoid of cruelty.

Whereupon Agent Pearson was drafted by Supt. Dorman to give aid in the anti-starling campaign.

Today the secret came out. Employes of the public buildings department Monday night will be stationed at strategic points in, on, and around the municipal group with noise makers of various sorts, calculated to disturb the rest of any starling.

There will be virtually no restriction placed on the type of noise maker except that its harmful effects must be confined to the birds' nerves.

Youth Tries Holdup with Toy Gun; Seized by Victim

A youth who is alleged to have attempted to commit a robbery with a toy pistol was overpowered by his intended victim at Madison and Peoria streets yesterday. The prisoner, James Smith, 16 years old, of the New Central hotel, approached Edward Severson, 1059 North Karlov avenue, with what appeared to be a gun in his hand, Severson said. Severson seized the youth's arms and shouted for a policeman. The "pistol" was found to contain nothing more deadly than cigarets.

KING'S SON BALKS AT SIDETRACK IN FOREIGN OFFICE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 6.—An amusing situation has arisen in the British foreign office in connection with America's claim to the Antarctic following Commander Richard E. Byrd's discoveries.

When Prince George, the king's youngest son joined the staff in the foreign office a few days ago, he was assigned to the western department. In order to find him something innocuous, he was given all the papers in connection with the Antarctic to study.

A few days later there came news about America's claim and when the senior officials tried to withdraw the Antarctic from his care the prince protested, declaring he had started to run this section of the world and intended to continue.

BANDITS ESCAPE WITH $9,000 IN HOLDUP IN LOOP

Rob Messengers on Way to First National Bank.

Two employés of the Foreman and Clark Clothing company, with headquarters in the store at the corner of State street and Jackson boulevard, were robbed of $9,000 last night as they were taking the money to be deposited in the First National bank, at Monroe and Dearborn streets.

Gerald A. Smith, 7007 Sheridan road, assistant manager of the company, carrying a black bag containing the money, and G. F. Walcott, 1417 East 47th street, a window trimmer and salesman, had reached the corner in front of the bank when an automobile drew up at the curb.

Holdup on Loop Corner.

One man jumped out of the car, shoved a revolver against Smith and ordered him to hand over the bag. When Smith had complied with the order, the bandit jumped back into the car and it sped away. The robbery took place shortly after 7 o'clock.

It was believed that the robbers in the auto had trailed Smith and Walcott from the clothing store to the bank, and police were working on the theory that the robbery was an "inside" job.

Walcott, who had been sent as a bodyguard for Smith, was armed with a .38 revolver, but failed to use it. He said that he had been sent on similar missions before, but that he had never fired a gun and was unfamiliar with them. He later told police he did not fire for fear of injuring Smith.

Bandits Are Described.

The robber who seized the money was described as about 30 years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing about 170 pounds. He was wearing a gray fedora hat and a dark suit. The man waiting behind the wheel of the car also wore a gray hat and a dark suit.

A radio flash of the robbery, broadcast over THE TRIBUNE'S station, WGN, brought police squad cars converging to the corner from every direction. Although the robbers had escaped, the radio was credited with having prevented another holdup.

During the excitement in front of the bank, a man entered the cigar store at 51 West Monroe street, across the street, and menaced John Grigsby, 1471 Devon avenue, the owner, with a revolver. According to Grigsby, the robber then heard the sirens of the approaching police cars and fled without loot.

BOY HIT BY AUTO DIES.

Paw Paw, Ill., April 6.—[Special.]—Danny, 4 year old son of Daniel Bentfro, prominent Lee county farmer of one mile south of Steward, died today of injuries sustained when run down by an automobile driven by Paul Riley Tuesday evening.

4 VIOLATORS OF NEW SMOKE LAW TO FACE JUDGE

Four violators of the new smoke ordinance have been subpoenaed to appear in court tomorrow to explain their additions to Chicago's soot and smoke laden atmosphere. Evidence will be presented by Frank A. Chambers, deputy smoke inspector.

On the next day, Tuesday, sixteen second time violators will appear before Mr. Chambers in his office to tell him why they have permitted smoke columns to belch from their stacks. After the first offense they were asked not to repeat, but now, Mr. Chambers said, they will be warned that the law will be used if they are caught offending again.

The four suits, which will be heard by Municipal Judge Alfred O. Erickson, have been brought against the Stratford Manor building corporation, 520 Stratford place; Illinois Packing company, 911 West 37th place; C. A. Burnette Packing company, 946 West 38th place, and the Saranac Building corporation, 6541 Everett avenue. Smoke and gas from the latter's stacks is said to have polluted the breathing air of residents of the Jackson Tower apartments nearby.

REPEAL THE VOLSTEAD ACT.

The Volstead act is a violation of primary American principles. It is an act of blood and persecution. It is a force act of intolerance. It is the source of lawlessness and corruption in public life. It outrages citizenship and distorts justice. It has brutalized law enforcement. It has debased government and has cheapened the lives and the rights of Americans. It has denied conscience and adult responsibility. It has destroyed adult self-respect and self-discipline. It has produced murder, manslaughter, disregard of property rights, hypocrisy, turpitude in public affairs, decadence in American morals and has put bigotry in control.

A swelling tide of American sentiment demands the repeal of this act before the damage it is doing gives the country some lasting injuries. The special session of congress beginning this month could do nothing better than kill it.

New York repealed its prohibition enforcement law by an act of the legislature and Al Smith, then governor, signed it. If any rights at all are retained by the states in the new ideas of the American Union this was a proper exercise of them, but the prohibitionists said it was anarchistic.

Wisconsin has ordered the repeal of its enforcement act by the vote of the people. The legislature submitted the repeal and the voters instructed it to take the enforcement law off the books. The Wisconsin action has a more significant background than that of prior date in New York. For one thing it was direct action by a majority of the people who have had enough of the noble experiment. For another thing it had antecedent to it some of the worst excesses of prohibition malestry.

The people of Wisconsin acted upon exhibits of prohibition purpose and method which have become notorious the country over. The savagery of fanatics who found themselves frustrated and defeated had been brought to the surface in the Jones bill passed by congress as an act of fury, in the excesses of law in such states as Michigan and Indiana, in the countenanced and defended brutality of man-killing federal enforcement officers, in the partisanship of the federal judiciary protecting the official violators of law, and in such outrages as the killing of Mrs. De King in Aurora.

In failure prohibition has been unfolding itself and the consequences have been exemplary. Bad law has proved that it makes bad administration of law. Despicable acts are necessary to the enforcement of prohibition because it is inexcusable in its principles.

The Aurora instance was a complete exhibit. The methods the county authorities adopted in their efforts to obtain proof of what they thought might be obscure violations of the law were degrading to authority itself. Irresponsible persons were paid commissions to make purchases and incompetent persons were then assigned to make arrests on faulty warrants. The result was an outrage against humanity.

Although Volstead retains the forms of law making, it has become an order in council. Its processes become more and more those of autocracy, of resolved and determined tyranny which dominates or prorogues legislative bodies, subordinates or discharges justice and employs only pliable and unscrupulous tools of execution.

It is a club cut from the old tree which has provided so many bludgeons for persecution, attempting to force nonconformists to obey when their habits, their opinions, and their consciences rebel. It is fortunate that time has mitigated the possibilities of zealot fury. The excesses of prohibition are abominable for this age, but the excited and narrow minded leaders of Volstead are of a temperament to spare nothing and to excuse everything in their efforts to carry their point against people already dismayed and disgusted by them. They condone murder, they applaud violence, they abet lawlessness if it serves their purpose, they demand a biased and hard judiciary, they seek cruel and excessive punishments, they ignore essentials of freedom and liberty, they strangle individual opinion and conscience, they are indifferent to crimes committed in the name of their morality, they are undisturbed by exhibits of public corruption and for their acts, their ideas, and their purposes they conjure a blessing and a benediction.

In this they run true to form. Oppression always has sought to sustain itself by an assumption of apostolic approval. Persecution has been a mimicry of clerical conscience and in its day it has glowed and gloried in the self-praise of its good works.

The persecutors have passed off the scene to be execrated, Charles V., Charles IX., Philip II., Bloody Mary, James II., his tools, Jeffreys and Kirk and his Lambs, Mather and his clerical witch jury, the ear lopping persecutors of the Quakers, the partisan judges of the sedition law, the slave owning advocates of the fugitive slave law. American zealots could read history for instruction as to themselves.

The evidence indicates that the American people are reaching the end of their patience. This unnatural law with its lawless consequences has filled out a lamentable period in the record of the United States. It is due time for the end of it.

Congress in its special session should take notice of the revolt of an exasperated people. The Volstead act must be repealed for the reclaiming of American government and for the reassertion of American principles. The Volstead act must be taken from the federal statutes, law restored to its old soundness and sanctity, administration to its rational province, the federal government to its true functions, and the citizen under the law to his proper place in American life.

AMBASSADOR HERRICK IN FRANCE.

In France the death of Myron T. Herrick has released a volume of affection that Americans rarely can command, and, though historians still must decide whether the late ambassador caused America's entry into war against the central powers, the French at least hold him in that regard. The outbreak of the world war gave him a chance to serve the France he loved so well. His sympathies and his influence in Paris and in Washington, like those of Page in London, were contributory, at least, to America's entrance on the side of the allies.

France well may love him if, as the Germans say, he was the man "who brought America into the war and thus won the war for France." That the crisis of the French nation during those years of war was his first interest and his main concern is hardly to be doubted. "There are times when a dead ambassador is more useful than a live one," were his words, according to report, when he remained at some risk in Paris during the early months of the great war; and it was usefulness to France that was in his mind.

In the later years of war and the troubled peace thereafter, during strain and difficulty, during debt recriminations, Uncle Shylock epithets, and French bitterness toward America, Ambassador Herrick still remained the French nation's most consistent friend. Lindbergh came at the peak of these crises, like a sudden angel from the sky, to the aid of his diplomacy. It reaffirmed French enthusiasm for America and smoothed a troubled path. The war and Lindbergh's coming were the two most significant events in Herrick's diplomatic career.

But Americans have still to learn the part played by their ambassador to France in the entry of this nation into war. What happened in French-American diplomacy in those years before 1917 has never been fully known, but there can be little doubt that Ambassador Herrick's experience and sympathies played a key part. Why our archives have not before revealed these critical but obscure days of American history has not been explained. Some time, it may be hoped, Americans can know these influential pages of their history. In them Ambassador Herrick doubtless will be a most important figure.

THE RESERVE ACT AND THE RESERVE BOARD.

Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City bank of New York, has been subjected to criticism for offering $25,000,000 to the stock market during the money stringency last week. Senator Glass of Virginia has called attention to the fact that Mr. Mitchell, a director of the Federal Reserve bank, disregarded the wishes of the reserve board in easing the money situation. Mr. Glass goes farther in saying that Mr. Mitchell's act was even contrary to law.

When Mr. Mitchell acted, money was quoted at 20 per cent and it might have gone higher. Stock prices were tumbling and they would have tumbled farther had he not eased the money market. There might have been a panic. It is probably well within the truth to say there probably would have been something approaching a panic if the money stringency had been allowed to continue. The injury which might have resulted to the nation's economy if a panic had resulted is not pleasant to contemplate.

On the whole, there is little inclination in the country to blame the federal reserve system for recent monetary difficulties, though it appears that the federal reserve act needs minor modification in the light of post-war changes in the financial organization in the country. There is, on the other hand, widespread criticism of the federal reserve board which has administered the act. When it comes to distributing blame, the federal reserve board is entitled to a large share. In its efforts to help foreign countries the reserve board lowered American interest rates, against the advice of many American bankers and notably of Chicago bankers. The lowering of the interest rates precipitated the wild bull market. In its efforts to place a halt on speculation the board has pursued a hither-and-yon policy. It has shown little confidence in the public and less in its own judgment.

The Other Side

THE PROHIBITION KETTLE BOILS OVER.

[Philadelphia Public Ledger.]

On the eve of the special session of congress, prohibition is more discussed in Washington than either farm relief or tariff. All the old attacks upon politicians who "vote dry" and "drink wet" are echoing and reechoing. The claim of ex-Senator Bruce, who once said that all the actually dry members of the senate could find seats in one taxicab, is being recalled. The warning given by Reed of Missouri, on the eve of his retirement from the senate has taken on a new meaning with the charges against the two dry members. The senator said:

"The day will come when the man who votes for prohibition but who himself violates the letter and the spirit of the law will be held in that kind of contempt which ought to be visited upon the knavish hypocrite who masks himself behind pretended virtue and who seeks to hold office by reason of his false pretense."

That day seems a little nearer than it did two months ago. The issue grows harder to evade. Congress is being pushed towards an investigation into the drinking habits of its own members, toward known abuses of the "freedom of the port" privileges and toward a general and sweeping inquiry into the means and methods of enforcement.

WOMAN AND THE CHURCH

BY MRS. OLIVER R. WILLIAMSON.

[Vice President Chicago Church Federation and Member Board of Pensions, Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.]

DOUBTLESS Adam was a surprised man when he awoke from a deep sleep to find Eve in his camp. He had not been aware that he needed help or company. But there she was. There is no record to show just how they adjusted their subsequent daily life together. Adam had the advantage of being the first comer, but such masterfulness as was shown was on Eve's part rather than his.

Down through hundreds of generations the son of Adam preferred to alternate between being the master and the slave of the daughter of Eve rather than to concede her a definite position maintaining the self-respect of both those whom God in his wisdom made alike human and yet so different. Woman generally was content to live her life within bounds set for her by man. In Old Testament times and later she was approved for her faithfulness in service, and probably had more influence in what would now be called public affairs than kings and prophets and chroniclers recognized. But she held ordinarily a distinctly subordinate position. It was not until the beginning of a new dispensation with the coming of Christ that there began to emerge a different conception of woman. From that time on there was ever before the widening world the great example of the Master of men who saw her not as a slave or servant or plaything but as a human creature in her own right, equal with man before God.

Woman owes much of her gain in position to the church. Within the field of religion she has had opportunities for expression and for a slowly widening experience without which it can hardly be supposed that she could have been trained or would have developed the courage to enter other fields. Yet a hundred years ago, except in a few of the smaller denominations such as the Friends, woman had little or no voice in any of the affairs of the church. Charity work was about the extent of her opportunity to serve. Then she found a place in the Sunday school, without which participation that organization could scarcely have reached its subsequent great importance. Later, through the organization of her own societies, she gave a great forward impetus to foreign and domestic missionary work. Today in most of the Protestant religious bodies she secures each year the funds she sets out to get, almost entirely through volunteer effort. Her interdenominational organizations, with no purpose of organic union, have for years brought together the women of all sorts of churches in the interest of objects common to all. And it will hardly be questioned that these groups have had just as effective leadership as any wholly composed of men.

But I am not aware of any deep or widely held ambition on the part of women to enter alongside of men generally in higher official church direction. They are not, I believe, zealous to hold such positions in local churches as those of Presbyterian elders, Congregational, Methodist or Baptist deacons, or Episcopal vestrymen. Two things I do believe many of their leaders consider they have a right to ask for them. First, that they shall have a decisive voice, not as women but as human beings according to their abilities, in the planning for and the administration of the undertakings to which they give constant, arduous and wholehearted service. Second, that they shall not only have a primary vote in parish matters but that there shall be no discrimination toward them in representation to higher courts.

The first desire would be made possible, if not actual, by achievement of the second. This I may illustrate in my own church, the Presbyterian U. S. A. Every communicant has a vote for elders in the local church. Each local board of elders, or "session," elects one of its members who with the pastor may vote in presbytery. Presbytery each year elects a delegation, half ministers and half elders, as members of general assembly, the highest national legislative body. Assembly directs the administration of missionary and other boards, electing the members of these bodies. It is obvious that women cannot be commissioners to general assembly, since they are not elders; nor can they participate in the election of commissioners, since they cannot be members of presbytery; nor can they vote for members of presbytery. Those who want a change do not aspire to perform the parish duties of the eldership, but they wish to share in a representative capacity, for which only elders and ministers are now eligible, all along the legislative line to the top. The Presbyterian general assembly at St. Paul in May will pass upon a recommendation of the general council that the sense of the churches be taken on permitting women to become elders.

The situation in other bodies varies greatly. In some of the autonomous churches in foreign mission lands, with no official traditions to preserve, women are on a parity with men. Evangelical churches in Germany and Switzerland admit them to the diaconate and the eldership, but not to the ministry. The Church of England not long ago took action putting women and men on the same basis in lay assemblies, local, district and provincial, and admitted them to the diaconate as to a holy order, with certain restricted authority to administer rites in an emergency. The door is still rather tightly closed in the Presbyterian churches of Scotland. In Ireland the Presbyterians have woman elders and the same is true of the Reformed churches of England. In the United Church of Canada women may be sent to general assembly. None has been sent.

In our country, men and women of the Congregational, Baptist, Friends and some other churches are already theoretically on an equality. In the Lutheran church women may become deaconesses only. Methodist women are permitted to be local preachers but this does not make them eligible to the higher councils. The various Reformed churches admit women to no authority. The United Presbyterian and Southern Presbyterian churches maintain that scripture does not authorize the ordination of women; and only ordained persons can become church legislators.

Intelligent women of today are well aware of the power for good that can be exercised through coöperation. Outside the church they are free to organize or to enter into all sorts of societies responsible to no overhead dictation and in which the only discrimination is in regard to fitness. They are finding here, many of them, an outlet for their ideas and their energies, and demonstrating in many cases that they can preside, debate, discover facts, plan and administer quite as effectively as do the exclusive official groups of men. With the utmost respect for those who conscientiously believe in a scriptural prohibition of woman's equality with men in the functioning of the church, and who consistently hold this prohibition not to be annulled by new conditions in life, one may suggest that they are likely to see valuable powers which woman might exercise within the church more and more exerted outside of it.

FAVORITE HYMNS

BY C. W. FRY.

I've found a friend in Jesus—He's everything to me;
He's the fairest of ten thousand to my soul!
The "Lily of the Valley," in Him alone I see—
All I need to cleanse and make me fully whole:
In sorrow He's my comfort, in trouble He's my stay;
He tells me every care on Him to roll;
He's the "Lily of the Valley," the Bright and Morning Star;
He's the fairest of ten thousand to my soul!

He all my grief has taken and all my sorrows borne;
In temptation He's my strong and mighty tower;
I've all for Him forsaken, I've all my idols torn
From my heart, and now He keeps me by His power.
Tho' all the world forsake me and Satan tempts me sore,
Thro' Jesus I shall safely reach the goal;
He's the "Lily of the Valley," the Bright and Morning Star;
He's the fairest of ten thousand to my soul!

BURSAS IN THE HEEL.

A LASTING pain in the heel is very likely to mean bursitis. When a teamster finds that the collar is rubbing his horse's shoulder he is likely to put a pad where he figures it will do the most good. If a machinist or a farmer finds that a line is wearing where it rubs against wood, he is likely to protect the point of wear by a pad.

Bursas are pads. The machinist, sailor, farmer, or teamster in this case we call nature. When a tendon or ligament crosses a bony ridge or turns a bony corner, nature is likely to provide a pad and to place it between the bone and the tendon. These bursas are not uniform as to number, size or location. They come when and where they are needed and they disappear when the need no longer exists. There are certain locations in which there are always bursas. That's because we walk, sit, stand or work as we do. Should we change ends and stand on our heads we would get a new lot of bursas in a new lot of locations and eventually the old fellows would quit doing business at the old stands.

And such is the story of the bursas. So long as everything goes well they stand and silently serve. But if all does not go well they are liable to talk. They talk in terms of pain and tenderness. If things are very wrong they sing or chant, day and night. And the chief ways in which things go wrong are through infections and traums, one or both in combination. All of which is by way of foundation for a story about painful heel.

Any thought about the mechanics of the body must suggest that there must be several bursas in the foot. The heel has its share. These bursas are easily injured. They are easily infested. Infection occurring in any part of the body is apt to settle in the well pounded heel. Therefore, if a man has a painful heel, let him think of an injured, infected, inflamed bursa as the probable cause. It is true that pain elsewhere, even as far away as the hip joint, the pelvis, and the sciatic nerve, may be reflected to the heel. But the chances are more than even that when a pain in the heel persists as inflamed bursa is the cause. On the other hand, the pain from inflamed bursa may be reflected. Some of the calf pains result from painful heel.

In many cases of painful heel the shoes can be so adjusted as to give relief. Maybe wearing heel pads or heel rings will help. Maybe wearing rubber heels will suffice. In some instances arch supports are helpful. In some cases specially padded shoes should be worn. In many cases the services of a physician or a surgeon are required. He looks for spurs and bursas with X-rays, he searches for swollen, tender bursa sones, and he looks for foci of infection. He may operate.

DIET FOR YOUNG BABY.

Mrs. E. L. R. writes: My nine month old baby, from his first month, has been fed a baby food. He now takes some buttermilk, crackers, dry toast, orange and tomato juices, and cereals. He is cutting his first teeth. Is a strong, happy, good natured fellow, but he does not seem to sleep as soundly at night as he should and he wants to eat everything he sees.

REPLY.

Continue feeding him as you now are. Give him slightly more of the infant food. As spring advances give him vegetable soups and finely mashed, tender vegetables. Begin with strained soup.

Poor sleeping is not the result of his diet. He needs some training in mental calm. Less company, less showing off, quieter evenings, quieter sleeping quarters.

BLOOD PRESSURE AND DIET.

F. M. S. writes: 1. What is the correct blood pressure for a girl 24 years old?

2. I am drinking a half pint of cream and milk between meals in order to put on weight and have a blood pressure of 130. Is there any harm in doing this? I am afraid it might cause the blood pressure to go higher.

REPLY.

1. 120.

2. There is no proof that such a diet increases blood pressure.

BREEDING PLACE FOR RATS.

Chicago, March 25.—[Friend of the People.]—The vacant lot at the southeast corner of 50th and Wood streets is being used as a public dump for tin cans, garbage, etc. This is a breeding ground for rats and the condition is not a very healthy one for the surrounding apartments. Cannot something be done to remedy the situation?

H. R. W.

Report is made that conditions complained of have been remedied. A "No Dumping" sign will be erected on the lot within a few days. JOSEPH J. BUTLER,

MARRYING IN NEW YORK.

Chicago, March 26.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I would be greatly obliged if you could tell me what is the marriage formula or the questions asked of the couple to be married by the judge performing the marriage in the state of New York. F. A.

We assume that you mean to ask what questions are likely to be asked before the issuing of the license. This is largely discretionary with the license clerk. Your answer to one question may lead to another question or obviate the necessity for a question usually asked.

NO KICK ALLOWED.

Chicago, March 24.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A claims it is unlawful to make or have in possession, at home, grape wine or any homemade wine that has reached an intoxicating stage. B claims you are within the law in making wine for your own home use.

A AND B.

The prohibition enforcement officers have ruled that a householder who manufactures in his home for home consumption cider and fruit juices which acquire by fermentation one-half of one per cent or more of alcohol by volume, but which are not intoxicating in fact, does not violate the law; but that the law is violated if the fermentative process is allowed to proceed to the point where the beverages become intoxicating in fact.

PROTECTING LIBERTY BY JURY.

Chicago, March 27.—The editorial, "Gentlemen of the Jury," certainly arouses my admiration and, in my opinion, should be posted all over the land in letters a foot high. I have had considerable experience in the trial of cases before juries, and from that experience am of the opinion that the jury system as it is in Illinois is the greatest system for the preservation of justice and the rights of individuals ever invented by the mind of man.

In nine cases out of ten the jury comes to the right conclusion. Could judges do better? Are they better qualified to determine where justice lies? Are they more familiar with history, science, and philosophy? Many of them are not. Are they all unbiased? A great many, if not all, are influenced in their decisions by their desire for publicity and political preferment. All are connected in some way with political organizations and must depend upon them for reelection. Judges are only human beings and react the same as those who do not wear the judicial ermine.

Should we give to judges power over individual liberty which has been wrung from them by centuries of bloodshed? One needs but read the history of the struggle against English judges and their tyranny to be loath to destroy or impair the jury system as now constituted.

Some one has said that "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." Tyranny, when no longer able to encroach upon the rights of man by violence, resorts to cunning and sets about under the guise of remedying a public evil undermining institutions which make tyranny innocuous. If our boasted free government is to be preserved we must be eternally vigilant and watchful of those institutions built from the blood of our forbears. We should examine with care every proposed change in those institutions, however much the public exigency seems to demand the change, for by a stroke of the pen we may barter away the most precious rights we possess for a "mess of pottage" designed to cure all our ills. Let us hope that THE TRIBUNE will lead us in our fight to preserve those institutions that have made life worth living in this great nation.

TIN CANS ON THE LAKE FRONT.

Chicago, March 27.—Wagon loads of tin cans have been washed up within the last few weeks along the north shore beaches in Rogers Park and Evanston. Where do they come from and why do not the city authorities prevent this destruction of Chicago's chief recreation facility? Tin cans ruin a beach far more than glass, as they always remain dangerous to bare feet. The source of these cans should be run down and the ruination of Chicago's north shore beaches prevented.

PEARLS IN EDIBLE OYSTERS.

Maquokets, Ia., March 26.—Crites Antone, who found a pearl in an oyster he was eating at a restaurant, had better save the money he plans to spend for mounting the pearl. No pearl found in the edible oyster, cooked or uncooked, has any value whatever.

The valuable pearl is found either in the pearl oyster or in fresh water clams. This type of publicity may be of value to the oyster industry, but a volume to the jeweler who must spend much time in oyster season explaining pearls to people who are naive to believe most of what they read in the newspaper.

FAVORS PRESENT SPRINKLING HOURS.

Chicago, March 25.—A. C. Ruhe asks to have sprinkling hours changed back to 5 to 7 a. m. and 7 to 9 p. m. The hours are the worst hours to use sprinkling. Any engineer or janitor who has observed his water meter or water pump in the apartment buildings, hotels and homes knows these hours are the ones in which 95 per cent use most water in the house.

The new sprinkling hours in force last summer are the hours when there is hardly any water used. The ones that want sprinkling hours changed back are less than 1 per cent of those that have to do without water around meal time. They who changed the sprinkling hours last summer had the correct data on water consumption. It doesn't make any difference to me what the city pressure is, as I pump all my water in my building, but it's the 2 and 3 story buildings and private owners who suffer.

A. DRUMMOND.

RESISTING PROGRESS.

Chicago, March 29.—Traveling in Wisconsin and Michigan I come in contact with manufacturers. Invariably they are sold on the lakes-to-gulf waterway.

Some have shown me what they expect to save, in freight charges, and why we find the states of Michigan and Wisconsin fighting the program to allow diversion of water to enable a 9 foot navigate.

GEORGE G. WHEAT.

COMPARING ASSESSMENTS.

Chicago, March 27.—Park Ridge and Chicago share the paving of Oakton avenue equally. Park Ridge paved their half last summer at a cost of $38,000. I live in Chicago and my assessment notice states that the cost for Oakton, half of the street will be $43,000. Both jobs contain the same number of square feet and the same specifications.

CHARLES M. GAMBLE.

CATCHING UP WITH CRIME.

Gary, Ind., March 28.—Regarding "Reader's" letter condemning the use of radios in the police cars, I think it is the best idea hit upon at present to help the police catch men who go around robbing people.

"Reader" said he was held up twice and in each case the robber was caught. When he reads his morning paper he will read of many holdups during the evening previous and see how few of the robbers were actually caught. As to the women getting alarmed, they'll get used to hearing the messages sent over the radio, as they got used to reading about holdups.

I wish THE TRIBUNE station, W-G-N, success in their coöperation with the police.

OPPONENTS SEE ETERNAL GRANT IN TRANSIT BILLS

House Committee Hears 15 Pleas For, Against.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

For six solid hours yesterday, at a hearing in the council chamber of the city hall the house committee of the state legislature handling Chicago traction listened to eight opponents and seven proponents of the transportation bills pending before the general assembly.

At the end of that time Representative T. J. O'Brien said publicly to the advocates of the seven bills:

"I'm a little suspicious. You have got to show me something different from what you have exhibited today."

The hearing, presided over by Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, lacked the bombastic attack which was made against the Barr bills in 1925 and the companies' bills of 1927, while the advocates displayed more certainty in their stand and more vigor in expression.

Harlan Urges Amendment.

The opponents consisted of John Maynard Harlan, attorney for the Lisman plan; Prof. A. R. Hatton for the City club; A. W. Stanmeyer for the Cook county real estate board; Attorney Henry M. Ashton for himself; Paul H. Douglas for the Better Transportation league; Joseph Mantell for the Chicago Engineering company; O. F. Carpenter for the Liberal club, and Raymond T. O'Keefe who says he represents the car riders.

Mr. Harlan, whose clients are seeking a 20 year franchise from the city, said they had instructed him not only not to oppose the bills but to aid in their amendment. He said that he is not an opponent of the bills if properly amended, and his suggestions—judging from the comments and questions of legislators—made a bigger impression than any of the day.

Under the bills, Mr. Harlan asserted, the companies may consolidate without interference from the city. He indicated that that merger could be made on the basis of $147,000,000 for the elevated roads and $232,000,000 for the surface lines. After consolidation, he said, the companies, under the bills, can obtain a certificate of convenience and necessity to operate, and can continue to operate, without a franchise, until the city says "Stop." But he said that the city cannot say "stop," because that would paralyze the city.

Legislators Suggest Change.

"That is a very pertinent criticism and well presented," commented Representative Michael L. Igoe, preparatory to asking advocates of the bills why those alleged defects cannot be remedied. Representative Grover C. Hoff and Representative Alexander Wilson also suggested the need of amending the bills in this particular. Reference was also made to the fact that the same suggested amendments were contained in a recent newspaper editorial.

O. F. Carpenter, for the Liberal club, pleaded for the same amendment, although he urged that the terminable permit bill be completly killed.

Prof. Hatton's chief plea was for an inviolable contract. He said that under the bills the conditions placed in the franchise are subject to future legislation. He asked that the city be given the right to make an inviolable contract, so that when it is made it will mean what it says.

Sees Perpetual Grant.

Regarding the terminable permit bill A. W. Stanmeyer said: "There is not the slightest doubt that this bill, if passed, will operate as a perpetual grant to the companies. Except in phraseology, it is identical with the Barr bill and the Insull proposals."

Henry Ashton's view was similar to Stanmeyer's, and Paul H. Douglas found something substantially wrong, in his opinion, with nearly every one of the bills. O. F. Carpenter also appeared to be of the municipal ownership trend of thought.

Joseph Mantell desires a franchise of 60 years from the city for subways, which he wants to build. His suggestions were to permit the city to grant a fixed term franchise for 60 years.

O'Keefe Attacks Operators.

O'Keefe urged that no bills be passed until the surface lines provide feeder busses for certain sections of the city; but most of his speech was a vehement attack upon the operators of the local transportation facilities.

Among the proponents of the bills were four aldermen, [O. F. Nelson [46th], E. I. Frankhauser [49th], John Toman [23d], and Jacob Arvey [24th]. Barrett Wendell of Lee Higginson & Co. made substantially the same speech yesterday he made before the citizens' committee on Friday. Some of the legislators saw red when an investment banker told them how difficult it is to obtain money on securities in which the public lacks confidence.

Tomas F. Deuther of the Northwest Side Commercial association and M. F. Flynn of the Central Northwest Business Men's association also spoke in favor of the bills.

Explain Transit Plan.

Aspects of the transit problem were presented by interested parties and discussed in open forum yesterday afternoon at the Hamilton club. As attorney for the citizens' committee appointed by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, Sidney S. Gorham recommended his committee's plan. Others who spoke were Thomas F. Sheehan, counsel for the transportation committee of the city council; Ald. Wiley W. Mills [35th], Attorney Harlan, representing the Lisman interests, and S. J. Konenkamp, representing the Amalgamated Improvement association of the northwest side.

Railway Honors Its War Heroes

Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and North Western railway, and Mary Blossom Burns, daughter of W. G. Burns, organizer of road's Legion post, looking at tablet unveiled in terminal yesterday in honor of employes who fell in world war. There are 108 names on the tablet.

Bulk of Ehret Fortune of $5,000,000 Left Widow

New York, April 6.—[Special.]—George Ehret Jr., who died two weeks ago, left the bulk of his fortune, estimated by his lawyers at more than $5,000,000 to Mrs. Louise M. Ehret, the widow, it was disclosed today when the will was filed in Surrogate's court. Bequests ranging up to $100,000 were left for relatives and friends and there were a number of bequests to charities. Mr. Ehret was the son of the founder of one of the nation's largest breweries.

Memorial Services Tonight for the Rev. C. H. Brent

Services in memory of the Rt. Rev. Charles H. Brent, chief chaplain of the American expeditionary force in France, will be held tonight at All Saints' Episcopal church, Hermitage and Wilson avenue. The Rev. Irwin Sangreal, will deliver the address.

SERGEANT KILLS SOLDIER AND SELF.

Washington, D. C., April 6.—[U.P.]—Sergt. John Doherty, Greenwich, Conn., shot and fatally wounded Private Duane Morrison, Muncie, Ala., during issuance of arms to soldiers at Fort Humphreys, Va., near here today, and then committed suicide. An old grudge was believed responsible.

Delicious frozen desserts will be served. Valuable books will be given away. You will have an opportunity to operate the new "Cold Control" . . . to see exactly what it does and how it does it. And in addition to all this, the most sensational electric refrigerators ever announced will be on display. Be sure to attend.

Tuesday we start a special 7-day demonstration of the new Frigidaire Cold Control

FROM April 9th to April 16th we're giving one of the most interesting exhibitions ever held in our showrooms. We are demonstrating the new Frigidaire "Cold Control". We are showing how it speeds the freezing of ice cubes, salads and desserts . . . how it gives you a wide variety of Frigidaire-frozen delicacies that could never be made before.

Taste one of these new desserts

The development of the "Cold Control" has made it possible to add dozens of delightfully different recipes to the Frigidaire Recipe Book. And during the entire week of the demonstration we will serve in our display room delicious frozen delicacies made from these recipes.

Helpful hints from domestic science experts

As a special feature of our demonstration we have arranged to give our guests a valuable book on refrigeration written by Dr. P. K. Bates. This book shows you how to make the best use of the storage space in your refrigerator. It tells you which sections of your refrigerator to use for different foods. It tells you how to keep foods fresher . . . longer. Be sure to ask for your copy of this free book.

Don't fail to see the most sensational electric refrigerator ever announced

Another feature of our 7-day demonstration will be the new D-4 Frigidaire . . . a Frigidaire that can be placed in your home at the lowest price in Frigidaire history. And yet, despite its remarkably low price, it has all of the essential features that have made Frigidaire the world's most popular electric refrigerator.

See this new Frigidaire. Compare it with any other electric refrigerator. You'll agree that the D-4 sets a new standard of value. Don't miss this special demonstration.

SPECIAL OFFER
for seven days only

We are prepared to make a special offer to all who buy Frigidaire during our 7-day demonstration. Let us tell you about this offer. Let us give you the surprisingly low prices. Let us tell you about the General Motors liberal payment plan. Come in tomorrow or at your first opportunity. We will be open evenings until ten o'clock all this week.

YOUNG VOTERS OF BRITAIN TAKE UP LIQUOR PROBLEM

Quiz Party Leaders on Booze Reforms.

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 6.—The attitude of the three English political parties on the liquor question was revealed in replies to a national memorial concerning suggested temperance legislation addressed to the leaders of the parties by the Young Electors of English Constituencies.

The recipients were invited to indicate the attitude of their organizations on three points—local option for England and Wales; adequate public control of the liquor supply in registered clubs, and Sunday closing of saloons.

Baldwin Urges Education.

Premier Stanley Baldwin, expressing the Conservative party's attitude, said the party believes the solution of the liquor problem is to be found in the influence of enlightened public opinion rather than restrictive legislation.

"We believe the evils connected with intemperate use of alcohol cannot be cured by proposals put forward in the memorial without grave disadvantages," he said.

The Conservative party feels that interference with the free behavior of individuals should be maintained at the minimum, which is essential in order to safeguard the rights of other citizens, he added.

Ramsay McDonald, replying on behalf of the Labor party, indicated that the Labor government plans to appoint a royal commission to report upon what law modification and what changes in the method of control should be made regarding the sale of liquor.

The Liberal party's attitude, as expressed by Sir Herbert Samuel, is in favor of a revision and improvement in the system of the sale and distribution of alcohol.

The Easter lull for English politics ends this week and by the middle of next week the campaign for the general election, which takes place on May 18, will be in full swing.

Tories Delay Was Error.

The prime minister is spending the week-end at Chequers and is in close consultation with J. C. C. Davidson, chairman of the Conservative party. They are putting the finishing touches on the party program, which will be submitted at the cabinet meeting next Wednesday, at which time also a final decision will be taken on Winston S. Churchill's budget, which will be submittd to parliament when it reassembles on April 15. The budget, of course, is this year an electioneering document and must be reconciled closely with the Tory party program.

The general feeling among the political experts is that the Conservatives made a grave tactical error in withholding their program from the people so long. The Laborites were first in the field with their platform months ago, and have been hammering it home at scores of meetings all over the country. David Lloyd George produced the Liberal program, which is largely a scheme to cure the unemployment situation, a couple of weeks ago, and immediately started a lively discussion.

May Hold Balance of Power.

He is making the running for both the Tories and Laborites, but not even his most sanguine supporters expect, however, that he can restore the Liberal party to power. The most expected is about 100 seats in the house of commons. The Tories and Laborites will be about equally balanced.

If the election turns out as expected with no party holding a clear majority, Lloyd George with his 100 seats will hold the balance of power, and be able to dictate the composition of the next government.

AUSTRIA'S PRIZE DRINKER OF BEER TO HEAD CABINET

Former German Quaffs 10 Quarts at Sitting.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

VIENNA, April 6.—Dr. Alfred Guertler, president of the Austrian parliament, is regarded as the next chancellor of Austria, to succeed Msgr. Ignaz Seipel, the Catholic prelate who resigned because of religious as well as political reasons.

This was agreed upon at a conference between Dr. Seipel's party, the Christian Socialists, and the Pan-German, controlling between them 85 of the 165 seats.

The Socail Democrats, who hold 71 seats, are not participating in the new government as hoped by Dr. Seipel, although Dr. Guertler, who is considerably further towards the left than Msgr. Seipel, has been assured support by the more conservative socialistic deputies.

Is From Germany.

Dr. Guertler is from Germany and was formerly a professor at the University of Gratz and a member of the Austrian parliament in 1900. Formerly a Catholic, he became a Protestant and still maintains the latter faith. Four years ago he was minister of finance. Dr. Guertler is known for his capacity for drinking. He has consumed ten quarts of beer at a single sitting. He is 54 years of age, of medium height, carries a bulky figure, affects a Van Dyke beard and wears horn rimmed glasses.

Dr. Guertler yesterday held a conference with the Socialists, and it is understood he has agreed to discharge M. Schober, a former chancellor and now police president. He is held responsible by the Socialists for the shooting into the mob which burned the Palace of Justice and killed a policeman on July 15, 1927. One hundred persons were killed in the riot which followed. Some oil was poured on the troubled waters, however, by appointing Schober as chief auditor.

Foreign Policy Unchanged.

The working program of the new government includes a compromise on the question of raising pre-war rents and also a stricter tariff protection. The Pan-Germans demanded an end to clerical influence in the government. Dr. Seipel's project to organize a Catholic university at Salzburg has been abandoned. Karl Vaugoin, minister of war, who attempted an army party organization, has been ousted. The foreign policy will remain unchanged.

TWO HELD AS ROBBERS.

Jack Thornton, 25 years old, 3619 North Halsted street, and Alex Strom, 6258 Greenview avenue, were held to the grand jury on the charge of robbing an apartment at 3619 North Halsted street and stealing an automobile by Judge Herbert G. Immenhausen in the Town Hall court yesterday.

BIBLE IS MOTHER'S GIFT TO GUIDE ROUMANIA'S KING

BUCHAREST, Roumania, April 6.—(AP)—King Michael, who will be eight years of age next October, today received his first holy communion.

After fasting for a fortnight from meat, milk and other animal products, the young sovereign confessed his boyish sins to Patriarch Miron Christea, who is also a member of the regency, and received full absolution. This communion in the Roumanian National church, which follows the Greek orthodox ritual, is the counterpart of confirmation in the Catholic church.

Michael was accompanied by his sad but stately mother, Princess Helen. In a trembling voice he recited the child's prayer to "the all loving Angel of Angels, who protects childhood," declaiming the lines without error from beginnign to end. After Michael's confession his mother embraced him ardently and kissed him on the brow. She told the patriarch how she had sat at the boy's bedside night after night until he could recite the prayers in Roumanian without hesitation.

After the communion the king received as a gift from his mother an illustrated Bible.

"This Bible," she told him, "shall be your guide and comfort in the serious hours of your life, which for crowned heads are more troubled than for others."

SENATORS BLOCK EXAMINATION OF CANAL RECORDS

Starr, Beaten in Clash, Charges Stalling.

BY CARL WARREN.

State Senator Harry W. Starr's sanitary district investigating committee split wide open yesterday over the question of what to do with the Central Auto Service company records in its possession. The records are said to reveal the use of taxpayers' money by drainage board employés for wine, women, powder puffs, and vanities.

Overriding the demand of Chairman Starr that the records be examined immediately, the other four members of the committee decided the thing to do was to ask for another opinion from Attorney General Carlstrom as to how to proceed. To this Starr vigorously objected, charging that it was merely "a stall to delay the inquiry," but he was outvoted four to one after an exchange of caustic remarks.

As a result of the majority action, the pleasure party records will remain locked up in the Palmer house vault for at least another week, perhaps longer.

Four Oppose Inspection.

Members of the committee who favored the appeal to the attorney general were Senators Adolph Marks and Edward J. Hughes of Chicago, William R. McCauley of Olney, and Arthur A. Miles of Rosiclare.

The controversy over the garage records started five minutes after the session opened just before noon in the sanitary board offices. Senator Starr read to the committee the order obtained from Federal Judge George A. Carpenter by Assistant State's Attorney Frank J. Loesch impounding the records with the clerk of the court when the committee is through with them.

"I am in favor of inspecting the records and then turning them over to the court," Starr announced. "And now is as good a time as any to start the inspection."

Senator Marks Objects.

Senator Marks immediately objected. He said he was not certain as to the jurisdiction of the federal court and could not see "the legal force" of the order. He also cited a previous opinion of the attorney general holding that the committee's seizure of the records was illegal.

In view of the confusing legal situation, Marks said, "the sensible and logical thing to do is to again seek guidance from the attorney general." He moved that be the sense of the committee. Starr made a substitute motion that the records be examined at once.

"This is nothing but a dilatory move to hold up this inquiry until after the legislature adjourns," the chairman asserted. "These records are going to get musty before long. I say let's get into them."

Lays Tangle to U. S. Court.

"That statement," replied Marks, "is entirely in error. The fact is the United States court has so tangled things that we cannot proceed judiciously without consulting the attorney general."

Chairman Starr's motion was laid on the table by a vote of four to one, and Senator Marks' motion carried by the same vote. Starr then moved that Mr. Loesch be asked to make the members of the committee parties to the proceedings in the federal court. Again Marks objected and again the chairman was voted down.

Senators Clash Again.

During a brief afternoon session Senator Starr and Senator Marks clashed again. Benjamin Peristein, accountant for S. B. Arvey & Co., which recently was engaged to make an audit of the district's finances by President Howard W. Elmore, testified that he found that between 1924 and 1928 only $4,000,000 had been diverted by the board from bond funds to the corporate fund.

"Do you know that Gore & Co. found there was about five times that much diverted?" demanded Senator Starr. "Two honest men can't be far apart, can they?"

Senator Marks interrupted. "Are you insinuating that Mr. Elmore has entered into a conspiracy with the Arvey company to make a false report?" he asked Starr.

"Well, maybe not a conspiracy," the chairman answered. "I think Elmore is honest but this sanitary district crowd is too fast for him. I believe this Arvey report was made up for the purpose of deceiving the legislature."

Swanson Refuses Records.

State's Attorney Swanson said yesterday that he would not comply with the resolution of the senate committee asking that he produce all the vouchers and records in his possession pertaining to the dealings between the district trustees and the auto service company. He said his office needs the documents for presentation to the special grand jury which will start work tomorrow.

BAR ASKS SUIT TO REGAIN CANAL PAY ROLL FUNDS

Condemn Lawyers on Padded Lists.

whether it is sufficient to warrant criminal prosecution.

Find Flaws in Books.

Irregularities were uncovered by the bar investigators in the bookkeeping system of the district. The report accuses the former canal board of trying to hide its misconduct.

"In the opinion of the committee," reads an excerpt, "the omission from the published proceedings of all mention of the miscellaneous pay roll is convincing evidence of a consciousness of guilt on the part of the trustees and others participating in such concealment and indicates that they well knew that this miscellaneous pay roll was being used for wrongful diversion of funds from the treasury of the district."

A condemning chapter of the 22 page printed report treats with the work performed by the lawyers and reads in part as follows:

"The regular work of the law department was performed by a comparatively small staff of lawyers having their offices with the district and giving all, or substantially all, of their time to its affairs, and a few outside lawyers who, as above stated, gave faithful service.

Admit Doing No Work.

"Of the other lawyers on the pay rolls, receiving salaries ranging from $3,000 to more than $9,000 per year, a number admitted that they had performed no service whatever for the district, although stating that they had been ready and willing and expected to render legal services. When asked how long they would have felt justified in continuing on the pay roll without doing any work, some of them admitted that they had experienced a growing feeling of the impropriety of receiving public funds without giving anything like adequate consideration therefor, while others insisted that so long as they were ready and willing to perform any service required of them they were justified in continuing on the pay roll and receiving what they improperly termed a 'retainer.' Several lawyers frankly stated to the committee that they did not now feel that they were entitled to the money paid them, and one of them subsequently made restitution to the district of the full amount of compensation he had received.

No Work for Money.

"Most lawyers appearing before the committee sought to make some showing of service performed, but in a large number of these cases such service was pitifully slight as contrasted with the amount of compensation received.

"One of the lawyers, when pressed on examination as to what actual work he performed, stated that he sometimes showed callers into the office of one of the chief assistants, and again, that he sometimes got books down from the upper shelves in the library for other assistant attorneys who were looking up the law. This particular lawyer, whose services included such office boy work, was paid a salary of $4,800 per year."

Criticism for Legislators.

Cook county legislators on the sanitary pay roll as lawyers, most of them at a rate of $416.66 a month, are severly criticized in a chapter of the report which reads in part as follows:

"What legitimate object the district had in employing members of the state legislature it is difficult to determine. The intimation has been made that it was necessary to carry a number of legislators on the pay rolls in order to secure proper protection for the district's interests at Springfield. Such a purpose was manifestly improper.

"Members of the senate and house who appeared before the committee denied that any action taken by them as legislators was influenced in any way by the fact that they were, or had been, on such pay rolls. They admitted, however, that it was objectionable for any municipal body, such as the sanitary district, whose interests are frequently affected by legislation pending at Springfield, to have a number of legislators on its pay rolls. The employment by the sanitary district of members of the legislature before which a program of proposed legislation for the relief of the district is pending, is a practice which is bound to destroy the independence and usefulness of the legislative branch of the government.

Deny Effect on Legislation.

"The legal services reported to have been performed by the Cook county legislators in consideration for the salaries received from the district were for the most part not of a substantial character and did not, in the opinion of the committee, justify the amount of compensation received by them. Part of the work stated to have been done by certain legislators consisted of looking over the laws enacted by the session of the legislature just closed, in order to determine how far the interests of the district were affected thereby. This could not have required any considerable amount of work, and there were competent lawyers on the regular staff of the district who could have readily performed such service without subjecting the district to any such expense as was incurred by employing these legislators."

The operation of spoils politics in the sanitary district is described in the bar's report as explanation for the "political debauchery."

"It was stated frankly enough before the committee," the report reads, "that the sanitary district has for years been a political dumping ground, and that numerous employés of the law, as well as other departments, have been given jobs, not because of any need for them, but because of a desire to give them a reward for some political service, or as a favor to some political boss, big or little, who sponsored their appointment. The line of communication between the political bosses of different parties and different factions and the treasury of the sanitary district was only too evident. Nearly all of the lawyers who appeared before the committee stated that they got their appointments through the influence and nomination of some ward committeeman or other politician."

Members of Committee.

The bar's committee, which is making an exhaustive investigation, is headed by Edgar B. Tolman with Lessing Rosenthal as vice chairman. The other members, all prominent members of the profession, are: Walter Bachrach, Richard Bentley, Stephen A. Foster, Irwin T. Gilruth, Bruce Johnstone, M. V. Kannally, Harry Eugene Kelly, Thomas J. Lawless, George H. Meyer, Erwin W. Roemer, Frederic E. Von Ammon, Russell Whitman, James H. Winston, and Hobart P. Young.

The investigation of the conduct of the individual lawyer pay rollers is expected to take more than a year to complete.

LOOK FOR HOOVER TO RENOVATE GEORGIA G. O. P.

Battle Is On for National Committeeman.

Augusta, Ga., April 6.—[Special.]—A three cornered fight is in progress for the position of Republican national committeeman from Georgia—a post made vacant by the Republican national convention at Kansas City following the national notoriety given to charges of federal office selling in some southern states.

The culmination of repeated protests against alleged sale of federal political offices in Georgia came last summer when the postmaster at Douglas, a south Georgia town of about five thousand inhabitants, killed himself. He left a note declaring he was hounded for payments levied against him as toll for holding the position.

Senator William J. Harris and Senator Walter F. George of Georgia demanded congressional investigation, and disclosures were made at hearings showing scores of office holders had been contributing regularly a percentage of their salary.

Postoffice Posts Bartered.

Investigators ascertained that in several instances contributions amounting to as much as five hundred dollars cash had been paid for some postoffices and that other cash demands of three hundred dollars had been met by rural letter carriers. In most cases, however, the toll levied was to be from ten to twenty-five dollars a month extending over a long period, generally the tenure of office.

The situation reached a crisis before the national Republican convention was held in Kansas City, and Ben Davis, Negro national committeeman from Georgia, was not reflected at the convention, the position being held open.

Ben Davis succeeded Henry Lincoln Johnson, Georgia Negro national committeeman for a long number of years, who actually resided in Washington. The activities of Johnson, held under cover and in secret it was claimed, ousted many bona fide Republicans from any participation in "party" meetings, and as a result the Georgia legislature passed a law making it mandatory that all political meetings where any party transactions are carried out should be held in the various county court houses and open to the public.

Law Gives Rule to Majority.

Of course, this law does not preclude secret caucus sessions, but it has given the membership of any party assurance of participation in proceedings and enables the majority of that organization to overrule especially objectionable features.

The scramble now being made for the Republican national committeeman's place involves a faction led by a regular Republican white leader, presumably former Sheriff Flanders of Swainsboro, with Roscoe Pickett and others of another wing of the party opposing him. Then there is a third entrant from the Republican group in a Negro, whose identity has not been disclosed, but for whom a strong fight will evidently be made by the Negro contingent of the party

TINY HELIGOLAND REVOLTS; SEEKS RULE OF BRITAIN

German Laxity Awakens Old Allegiance.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, April 6.—Heligoland, or "Holyland," the tiny but strategic island one-fifth of a square mile in area, commanding access to Hamburg and Bremen, started its own revolution yesterday for England against Germany.

The first blows fell when hundreds of Heligoland's 3,400 inhabitants demonstrated by singing "Britannia Rules the Waves" with gusto in a broad German accent, then marched up to the building of the pro-German paper, Heligolander Zeitung, beat up the editor, and engaged in a free for all fight. The editor appealed to local authorities, who refused to interfere.

Originally Were British.

The islanders originally were British until 1890, when Heligoland was exchanged for Zanzibar by an agreement between Lord Salisbury and Bismarck. Under the empire they proved loyal to Germany, which did a great deal for the island's prosperity by making the strong military station a base for a flying naval squadron and building a huge cement dyke to protect it from the ravages of storms.

Versailles imposed upon Germany the demolition of not only the fortifications but also the protecting dyke, since when every big storm has carried away bits of the crumbling sandstone island. Last summer work was started on the building of a cement sea wall, but the Prussian government, facing the necessity of economy, could not continue with sufficient subsidies, so the work was suspended. The winter's exceptionally severe frosts further disintegrated the sandstone, rendering many houses near the cliffs unsafe and threatening the island's very existence.

Stirs Old Allegiance.

The dissatisfaction has stirred to life again the old allegiance to England, many islanders believing a return to English rule would not only give them a strong sea wall, but renew prosperity by the establishment of a naval base. Efforts to suppress pro-English agitation were foiled by the attitude of the local council, which almost unanimously shares the population's feelings.

Many villages beat up and nearly killed tax collectors sent by the government. They threatened a general farming strike.

The Heligolanders hope by courting England that their tax bill will be reduced to a minimum. Right now they are receiving favored treatment. No duty is imposed on goods imported into Heligoland, so that it is an "Eldorado" for smugglers of luxuries such as perfumes, lobsters, silks and cigarettes, all of which are heavily taxed when they enter Germany.

FISHWICK BUYS NONUNION MINE BONDS, GETS O. K.

Peoria, Ill., April 6.—[Special.]—Harry Fishwick, president of the Illinois Miners' union, won another victory today when the biennial convention in session here rejected a resolution criticising the president and other state officers for investing $150,000 of union funds in a nonunion coal mine in West Virginia.

Delegates sponsoring the resolution declared that it not only was poor business but was morally wrong for the union to invest funds in a nonunion property.

Fishwick replied that the investment has given the union a foothold in the West Virginia territory. He also pointed to the fact that the investment, yielding 7 per cent interest, is sound financially.

When coal company bonds were purchased, Fishwick asserted, the company signed a contract agreeing to recognize and organize the mine at any time workers established a union in its territory.

Following the defeat of this resolution, one seeking to suspend salaries of union officials during strikes and to limit their expenses to $3 at such times was taken up. After brief debate, it was referred to the committee on constitution.

Under this resolution, terms of union officers would be limited to one term, after which they would be required to return to the mines and work two years before again becoming eligible to hold office.

POLICEMAN KILLS BANDIT.

St. Louis, Mo., April 6.—[U.P.]—Ernest McConnel, age 18 years, Negro bandit for whom police have been searching for a week, was shot and killed by Patrolman James Evans today after he attempted to rob a grocery store.

GREEN, HEAD OF LABOR, ON WAY TO FACE 'PISTOLS'

Elizabethton, Tenn., April 6.—(AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, will arrive here tomorrow to address a public meeting called following the reported kidnaping early Thursday of two union officials for which six men face charges of kidnaping and felonious assault.

Edward McGrady, vice president of the federation, and Alfred L. Hoffman, southern organizer of the United Textile Workers of America, reported they were forced at pistol point by a band of men to leave Elizabethton and warned not to return.

McGrady said he was taken to Bristol, Tenn., and Hoffman to the North Carolina state line. They returned and last night addressed a massmeeting, attended largely by workers in the textile plants.

Green, in a statement in Washington, characterized the affair as an "outrage," and said that "if necessary I will visit Elizabethton as a challenge to this gunmen lawlessness."

5,000 Idle in Carolinas.

Charlotte, N. C., April 6.—(AP)—Conditions in the strike sectors of North and South Carolina remained unchanged today at the end of the first week, during which the strikes have become general.

More than 5,000 textile workers continued idle at Gastonia, N. C., Union, Greenville, Anderson and Woodruff, S. C.

CHICAGO RAILWAY STATIONS LAG IN MODERN METHODS

Survey Shows Lack of Improvements.

Chicago is lagging behind other cities in modernizing railroad terminals, it was declared yesterday after an inspection of the city's terminals showed that all of them require passengers to clamber up to the steps of coaches when entering trains.

In New York City the platform in the Grand Central and Pennsylvania terminals are on a level with the lowest step of platforms of the coaches, permitting passengers to walk in and out of trains without stepping up or down, just as access is given to Chicago elevated trains.

Engineers Favor Change.

The importance of having the platforms at the same level as the coaches is recognized by engineers, who point out that many elderly and infirm people cannot be comfortably transferred from coach to station platform under the old arrangements. Travelers and commuters loaded with parcels, baggage, sometimes with children in arms also find great difficulty getting on and off trains.

Illinois Central suburban trains are loaded and unloaded from train level platforms, but their through traffic service still has the ground level system. At the North Western, Union, Grand Central, Polk street, La Salle street, and Park row stations all passenger platforms are on the ground level.

The practice of loading and unloading from train level platforms is also in use in Europe. All over England, even at small suburban stations, the platforms are elevated to the level of the car interiors. In Germany the same system has been adopted in most of the large stations.

Explain Chicago's Failure.

Several explanations were given for the failure of Chicago railroads to raise these elevated platforms in terminals here. Joshua D'Esposito, chief engineer in charge of the construction of the Union depot, the newest Chicago terminal, said it had proved impossible to install them there.

"We tried hard to find a way to do it," he said. "We realized it wasn't modern to force passengers to climb up and down, and we held up the design of our platforms till the very last.

"This is what we were up against. The width of railway coaches is not uniform on the lines we accommodate in the Union terminal. The eastern lines have standard width equipment, but the western lines have coaches of varying widths, differing as much as twelve inches. Of course, any one can see that the platforms must be designed for the widest coaches, which would leave a gap of about a foot for some passengers to step over. This would be extremely dangerous, it is clear.

Prepare to Make Change.

"The concourse at the Union depot is several feet higher than the platform levels. When the equipment is standardized—and it will be some day—it will be an easy job to elevate the platforms."

Questions as to plans for the proposed joint terminal to be built on the south side were answered by Perry Clark, vice president of the Rock Island.

"The plans are so nebulous that the question of platforms has not been discussed at all," he said. "But if it is found that the equipment of all the roads will permit the car level platforms to be used, I am certain they will be installed."

Another reason suggested for the impracticability of installing the elevated platforms in Chicago was that many of the older coaches have no vestibules, and consequently no trap door from which passengers could be discharged on the car level. This would necessitate rebuilding platforms at hundreds of suburban coaches, but Mr. D'Esposito said this would have been done by the railroads if the other difficulty had been surmountable.

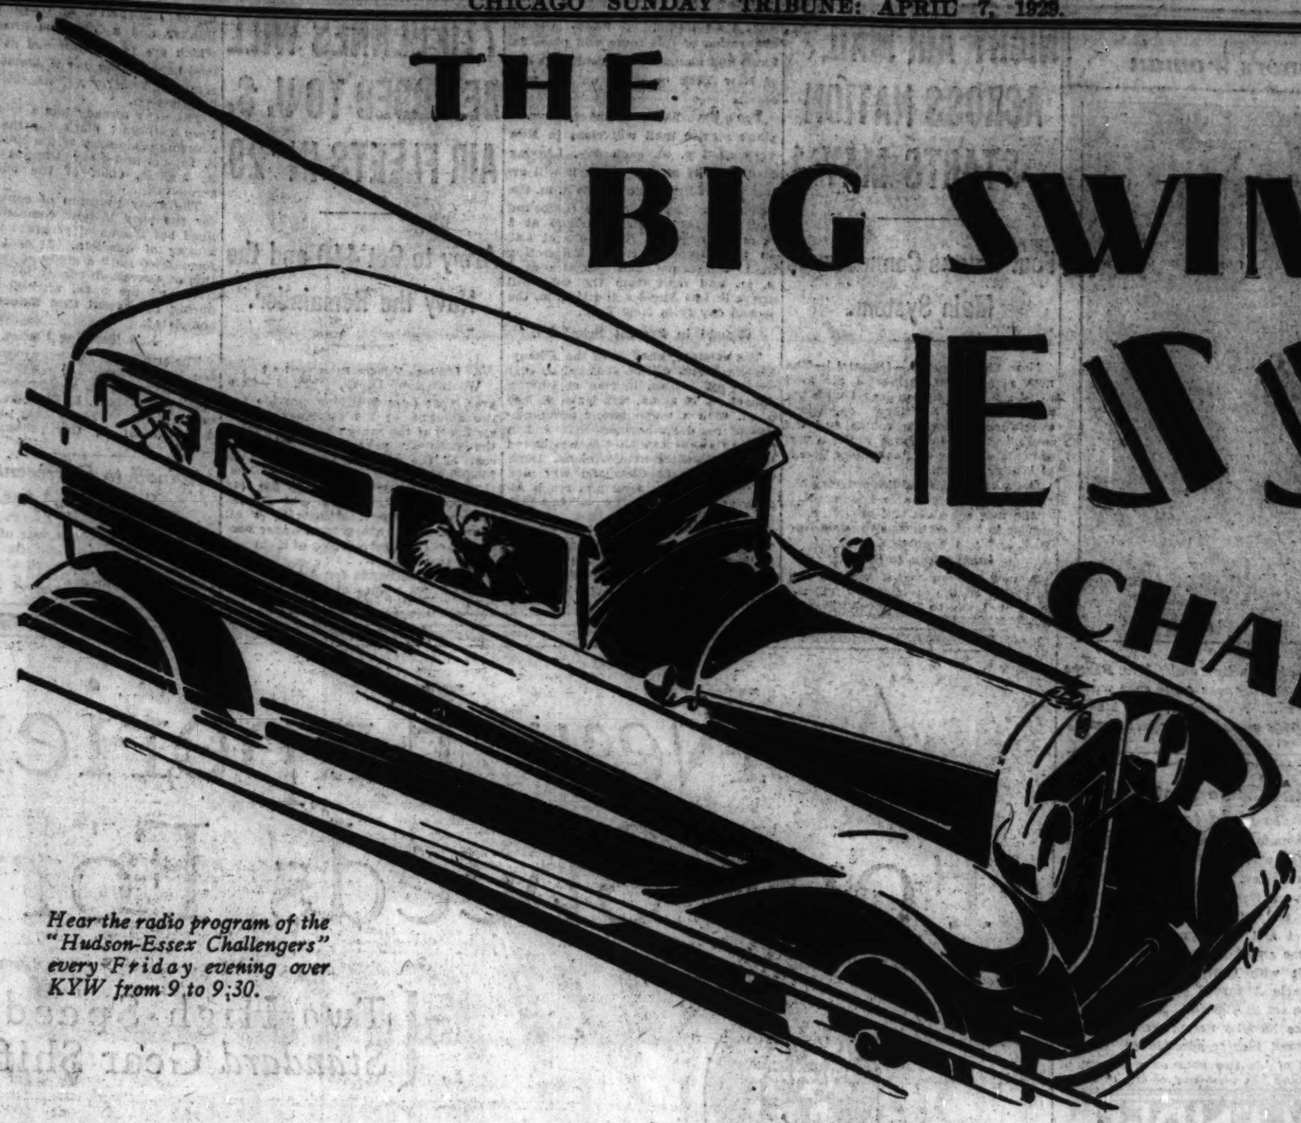
THE BIG SWING is to ESSEX THE CHALLENGER



Hear the radio program of the "Hudson-Essex Challengers" every Friday evening over KYW from 9 to 9:30.

It Challenges Your Interest in These Important Ways

EASY TO BUY

For Instance, the Coach $268 Down, and monthly Payments of $50.16

Your present car will probably cover the entire first Payment.

The H. M. C. Purchase Plan Offers the lowest available finance terms on the balance.

EASY TO OWN

On our own streets, here in Chicago, Essex the Challenger, under competent observation, averaged 20 miles per gallon. The average owner in this city can expect 18 to 20 miles and upward. Hundreds of records all over the country during "Challenger Week" prove Essex economy. Commercial users operating large fleets of Essex cars say that service and maintenance costs, covering millions of miles of operation, are lowest of any car they ever tested.

Essex the Challenger sweeps aside the barriers of price class. It challenges the performance, the style, the luxurious roomy comfort of any car at any price, on the basis that no other gives you back so much for every dollar you put in. That is why the big buying swing is to Essex. That is why motorists by thousands are switching from past favorites, and trading in their present cars for the big values Essex the Challenger gives.

BY ROBERT WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., April 6.—[Special.]—America's aircraft industry came to the national automobile capital today to display its wares.

And when the doors of the air show opened tonight a curious public swarmed in to discover that in color, fitting and comfort, the new airplane is very much like the groundbound auto.

Ninety planes of widely varying size, color, and design were packed wing to wing in Convention hall when Mayor John Lodge formally opened the second all American aircraft exhibition tonight.

At Anchor in River.

The A. Sikorsky amphibion, too big to squeeze under the festooned ceiling of the exposition hall, rode at anchor in the Detroit river.

The exhibits show a tendency toward a wider diversity in aircraft. The largest plane—a Ford tri-motored all metal cabin liner—has a wing spread of 77 feet, a horse power of 1,200, and weight 12,650 pounds. The smallest exhibit—the Heath "Baby Bullet"—a Chicago product, has wing spread of 18 feet, weighs 225 pounds, and is propelled by a 32 horse power motor.

The exhibits include many new single motored cabin planes, ranging in capacity from four to eight, and a variety of new amphibions and flying boats. In the class with the Sikorsky amphibion is the new Fokker flying yacht, the Keystone-Loening amphibion, a single motored monoplane which closely resembles a big shoe.

New Flying Boat.

An entirely new flying boat is shown for the first time by the Eastman Aircraft corporation of Detroit. New developments in land and water craft are presented in the Ireland amphibion, the Vought Corsair, and the Italian six passenger seaplane, the Savoia Marchetti.

Boeing is represented by a new mail plane of the type which soon will be placed in service over the Chicago-San Francisco mail line.

Of all the hundred planes exhibited not one is decorated in battleship gray, which for many years was the conventional color for aircraft. The new colors are bright red, yellow, and blue, with a sprinkling of green and silver planes.

Chicago Man to Receive Decoration for Bravery

The distinguished service cross will be awarded to Private John V. Hogan, 8219 South May street, by Maj. Gen. Frank L. Parker, new commandant of the sixth corps area, at ceremonies at Fort Sheridan on Tuesday morning. Hogan will receive the decoration for extraordinary gallantry in action in connection with his single-handed capture of a machine gun nest in France during the world war. The entire personnel of the fort will be paraded and delegations will attend from the American Legion and other service men's organizations.

Father Who Shot Priest Is Held to Grand Jury

Gaetano Menna, 63 years old, shoemaker, who shot and seriously wounded the Rev. Father Charles Erkenswick on Good Friday in the yard of the Holy Ghost church at Adams street and Keeler avenue, was held to the grand jury on a charge of assault with intent to kill by Judge Francis Allegretti yesterday. Bonds were set at $100,000. Menna told the police he shot the priest because he believed him responsible for the arrest of his two sons on a charge of robbing the poor box of the church.

NIGHT AIR MAIL ACROSS NATION STARTS MAY 1

Four Routes Connect with Main System.

New York, April 6.—[Special.]—The new night transcontinental air mail will be inaugurated on May 1 with the institution of additional operations over four connecting routes and the establishment of one new route, it was announced today by Postmaster General Walter Brown.

Complete new schedules covering the entire system were also announced.

The new schedule will provide daily service in both directions between New York and San Francisco.

Omaha Line to Start.

A new section which will go into operation on the opening day will run from St. Louis to Omaha, via Kansas City, a distance of 403 miles. The inauguration of this route will place St. Louis and Kansas City within one day of New York or cities on the west coast.

For the night trans-continental plane service mail will close in New York at 8 p. m. each day. Leaving Hadley Field at 9:35 p. m., it will arrive in San Francisco at 4:30 a. m. the second morning after. The eastbound mail will leave San Francisco at 8 p. m. to arrive in New York at 6:42 on the second morning. Connecting mail will leave Los Angeles at 7 p. m. and mail from the east will arrive in Los Angeles at 4:15 a. m. the second day from New York.

Change in Present Schedules.

The existing schedule of the Albany-Cleveland run will be changed so that westbound planes, instead of leaving Albany at 10 a. m., will leave at 3:40 p. m. with a much larger accumulation of the day's business mail and in time to connect with the westbound trans-continental at Cleveland. Eastbound planes at Cleveland will pick up mail from the west and reach Albany at 3:10 a. m., after serving Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Rome, Utica, and Schenectady en route. No change will be made in the Cleveland-Pittsburgh route, but additions will be made in the service for one plane in each direction shortly after midnight.

710 PLANES WILL BE ADDED TO U. S. AIR FLEETS IN '29

Army to Get 410 and the Navy the Remainder.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 6.—Congressional appropriations provide for the addition of 710 airplanes to the air fleets of the army and navy during the calendar year 1929. The total cost of the aircraft will run above $30,000,000.

The army air corps will get 410 planes, while the navy will receive 300 new machines. Deliveries of all types of planes are getting under way and by early summer most of them will be in service.

2 Transports for Army.

The finest planes of the great new aerial fleet will be two new army tri-motor transports, a Wasp motored Fokker and a Wasp motored Ford, which are to be stationed at Bolling field here for the use of Assistant Secretary of War for Aeronautics F. Trubee Davison.

The navy already has a tri-motored Ford transport plane for the use of Assistant Secretary of the Navy David S. Ingalls and Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics.

The army program of construction for the year is now completely outlined but the naval program is still a matter of question. It will not be formulated until a study of the operation of aircraft in connection with the fleet and the naval aircraft carriers during the recent fleet maneuvers is completed.

New Training Planes.

The army construction program calls for 130 new training planes, 58 new pursuit planes, 142 observation planes, eight amphibians, 27 bombers, and 15 cargo planes. The training planes are a refinement of the present army model.

STIMSON BEGINS QUIZ OF COAST GUARD TACTICS

I'm Alone Case to Be Laid Before Hoover.

Washington, D. C., April 6.—[Special.]—Impending criticism by the Canadian government of the coast guard's destruction of the schooner I'm Alone 200 miles off the Louisiana coast has precipitated a state department investigation into the methods employed by the dry navy in its fight to eliminate rum row.

This investigation is a part of the general inquiry being made into the I'm Alone incident as a result of intimation made by Canada, following the sinking of the ship and the loss of one seaman. It is designed to give Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson sufficient facts on which to base a decision as to whether the coast guard's action in the I'm Alone incident was or was not too violent in view of the circumstances.

The whole question of whether the coast guard should be allowed to imperil America's friendly relations with other powers by shooting up foreign schooners suspected of liquor smuggling is involved. In many administration quarters it is held that the coast guard should be limited to boarding vessels.

One reason for Mr. Stimson's active sy lies in the interest President Hoover has taken in dry law enforcement methods since his assumption of office. At the White House it is admitted the President will discuss the I'm Alone case with Mr. Stimson and that the question of whether the coast guard was overzealous in its sinking of the vessel will be discussed.

Past Efforts Futile.

Unless President Hoover himself take a hand in the matter and curbs the overzealous practices of the coast guard the state department will be unable to keep the dry navy within legal bounds. Efforts of the state department to prevent the guard from using undue violence in handling suspected rum runners have been of little avail because of the fact that the secretary of state has no authority over another cabinet department.

On numerous occasions former Secretary Kellogg criticized coast guard officials for their excessive zeal in enforcement of the anti-smuggling law. In one instance he is credited with having told a treasury official that the coast guard dry navy represented the most lawless element in the country.

In view of the attitude taken by President Hoover yesterday on enforcement by prohibition agents, White House attachés assume he will insist that the coast guard obey the law literally when operating off the American coast.

Protest Expected Monday.

The Canadian protest will be delivered Monday to the state department, it was disclosed today. A few days later a reply will be sent by Secretary Stimson.

The American note will carry the United States interpretation of the treaty and defend the coast guard action thusfar as Mr. Stimson considers they have followed legal methods.

It is likely the note writing period will be followed by the filing of claims against the United States on the theory that the seizure was illegal. A tribunal selected by the two governments will then settle the case if possible.

SPAIN GRANTS LOWER CLERGY RAISE IN PAY

Country Loyal to Mother Church.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, April 6.—By special request of King Alphonso XIII., the pope has just accorded Spain the special privilege that the prayers of the faithful here during the pontiff's jubilee year will count as indulgences for the soul of the deceased queen mother, Maria Cristina.

This announcement calls attention to the affection with which Spain, because of her centuries of loyalty and lack of schism, has always been regarded by the mother church in Rome.

An acute condition, however, has just been remedied in a measure in Spain by the government agreeing to raise the stipend of the lower clergy by a few hundred pesetas annually, in order to relieve the precarious condition of some of the rural clergy, which was in marked contrast with the sumptuous situation of the higher church dignitaries. The poverty of the lower clergy was also in contrast with the richness and splendor of the churches of Spain. Through the wealth acquired from the ppoperty confiscated from heretics under Torequemada in the inquisition many splendid priories and churches were built and vestments and ornaments acquired.

Priests Get More Pay.

The government granted the small increase as a result of agitation which began among the poorer secular clergy last fall. Some sections of the parish priests organized what was called a national defense league and wrote directly to Primo de Rivera demanding increased pay, for in Spain the maintenance of the Catholic cult is a state charge. They took this step because the higher clergy has not always been marked in its zeal of defending the lower ranks.

In fact, the primate of Toledo, in a pastoral letter, criticized the lower clergy for the organization of the defense league and for constantly complaining. The primate deplored the pagan spirit which he said was penetrating Spanish institutions and homes, adding, "Piety in Spain today is far distant from the steadfast piety of our forebears."

Declare Church Is Rich.

Citing the large sums sent to the Vatican annually by Spain, an eminent Catholic, Dr. Torrubiano Rispoll, wrote a letter to the press demanding that Primo deliver the county and religion from an insatiable clericalism. He said the clergy had no need of another cent from the taxpayers if the funds they now got were properly distributed.

The church of Spain, some Catholics declared, was rich. Its support by the government is based on the Concordat of 1852, signed by Isabella and Pope Pius IX., which was also recognized by the Spanish constitution of 1876. Support of the Catholic cult made a charge of 62 million pesetas in the last budget. Article 38 of the concordat also specifies the sources from which the revenue for the clergy should come. These are, first, the return on wealth restored to the church in 1845 and converted into three per cent state bonds; second, the proceeds on special offerings obtained under the famous Crusaders' Bull, providing for special dispensations and indulgences [the pope has just extended this bull for another twenty years at the king's request, ostensibly for its value as a source of revenue]; third, payments by certain military orders; fourth, property and inheritance tax levied by the state for the church.

ENDS LIFE IN CELL

Muskegon, Mich., April 6.—[Special.]—Alex Zack, father of seven children and the first man to be sent to prison as a habitual criminal under the amended Michigan criminal code, hanged himself today in his cell in the county jail.

Zack was sentenced Friday by Judge John Vanderwerp to serve from ten to fifteen years in the Michigan prison at Jackson. After sentence was passed the sheriff took him to his children. While in the home, Zack obtained a piece of clothesline and concealed it in his pocket. He used it to kill himself.

Zack's case attracted national attention last fall when Harold H. Smedley, then prosecuting attorney, refused to prefer habitual criminal charges against him following a fourth conviction on a liquor charge. Smedley said his conscience would not permit him to help send a man to prison for life for a liquor law violation.

Student Flyer Crashes 200 Feet; Dies of Shock

GENERAL PLAN OF HOUSE FARM AID BILL AGREED ON Subcommittee to Follow Hoover Program.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 6.—General outlines of a farm relief bill were agreed upon today by a subcommittee of the house committee on agriculture.

The five members of the subcommittee voted unanimously to follow President Hoover's ideas as closely as possible. After agreeing upon the general plan, the subcommittee met with drafting experts of the house who will prepare a bill in accordance with the program.

The tentative draft will be ready for the subcommittee some time next week and further consideration then will be given to details which were not acted upon today. The final bill will be ready for the house at the opening of the special session and will be the first measure taken up on the floor.

Features of Plan.

The principal features of the bill as approved today include the following:

Creation of a federal farm board, composed of the secretary of agriculture and probably six members appointed by the President.

Formation by the board of advisory councils for various commodities.

Purchase and storage for future marketing of surplus farm crops by stabilization corporations to be organized by coöperatives with the approval of the board.

Establishment of a 300 million dollar fund from which loans will be made by the board to stabilization coöperations and to coöpertives for handling surplus crops and for other purposes.

Provision for loans from a part of this fund to coöperatives or stabilization corporations for the purpose or construction of physical facilities for the marketing of agricultural commodities.

Loans to Help Members.

Loans to coöperatives from a part of the same fund to enable them to advance to members a greater share of the market price of a commodity than is practicable under other credit facilities.

Loans to insurance funds authorized under the bill.

Members of the subcommittee are: Representatives Gilbert N. Haugen [Rep., Ia.], Fred S. Purnell [Rep., Ia.], Thomas S. Williams [Rep., Ill.], James B. Aswell [Dem., La.], and David H. Kincheloe [Dem., Ky.].

Willing to Follow Hoover.

The Republicans on the subcommittee all were supporters of the McNary-Haugen bill of the last congress but now are willing that President Hoover's plan shall be given a complete trial. Representative Aswell, who never was a McNary-Haugen bill supporter, announced his intention to go along with the Hoover program during the hearings earlier in the week and Mr. Kincheloe today indicated that he would do the same.

The expectation is that the subcommittee will not make its report to the full committee until President Hoover presents his message to congress on Tuesday, April 16, the day after the special session convenes. The full committee is certain to approve the bill, although some proposals for amendments may be made, such as one by Representative John C. Ketcham [Rep., Mich.], to add the export debenture scheme favored by the National Grange.

The full committee will make its report to the house in time to permit debate to commence on either Wednesday or Thursday of the opening week. About a week will be taken in its consideration on the floor of the house.

End Senate Hearings.

The senate committee on agriculture, which also expects to have a bill ready by the time congress convenes, concluded its hearings today. The witnesses included Benjamin Marsh, radical farm leader, who injected criticisms of imperialistic policies of the government into his observations, and W. F. Hollingsworth of Seattle.

Senator Charles F. McNary [Rep., Ore.], chairman, announced that he would call a meeting of the full committee in executive session on Tuesday or Wednesday to commence consideration of a bill. The McNary measure, which follows the general lines of the Hoover program, will form the basis but various minor changes are likely to be made. In the end, the senate and house bills are expected to be substantially similar, which will expedite action in conference after both houses have passed the legislation.

Carrying Wine in Home Not Transporting, Court Rules

Carrying wine from the third floor of a home to the basement does not warrant a charge of transportation of liquor, Judge Joseph L. McCarthy ruled in the Chicago avenue court yesterday. Samuel Affrunti, 21 years old, 1018 Larrabee street, and Thomas Pules, 17 years old, 1123 Larrabee street, were arraigned yesterday on charges of transporting liquor brought against them when they were arrested two weeks ago in a house at 631 Hobbe street. When it was learned that they were carrying the wine for Pules' father the judge dismissed the charges.

LUNDBORG RESTS IN DETROIT FOR LECTURE TODAY

Capt. Einar Lundborg, rescuer of Gen. Umberto Nobile in the Arctic last summer, found Chicago hospitality so strenuous yesterday that he cancelled a number of engagements to speak and appear at luncheons and at circuses, and took the early morning train for Detroit to relax for a day before his Chicago speech at Orchestra hall this afternoon.

This announcement was made yesterday afternoon by Adolph Lindstrom, member of the American Sons and Daughters of Sweden, which feted the Swedish hero at a testimonial dinner Friday night.

"Either Capt. Lundborg had to rest without being bothered or he could not have appeared Sunday," he asserted. "He was worn out by the attention given him, and we suggested he go up to Detroit and see the aircraft exhibit on there in the airport. I took him to the train myself."

Mrs. Lundborg remained in Chicago. The captain was slated to appear yesterday afternoon at the opening of the 16th Swedish-American art exhibit.

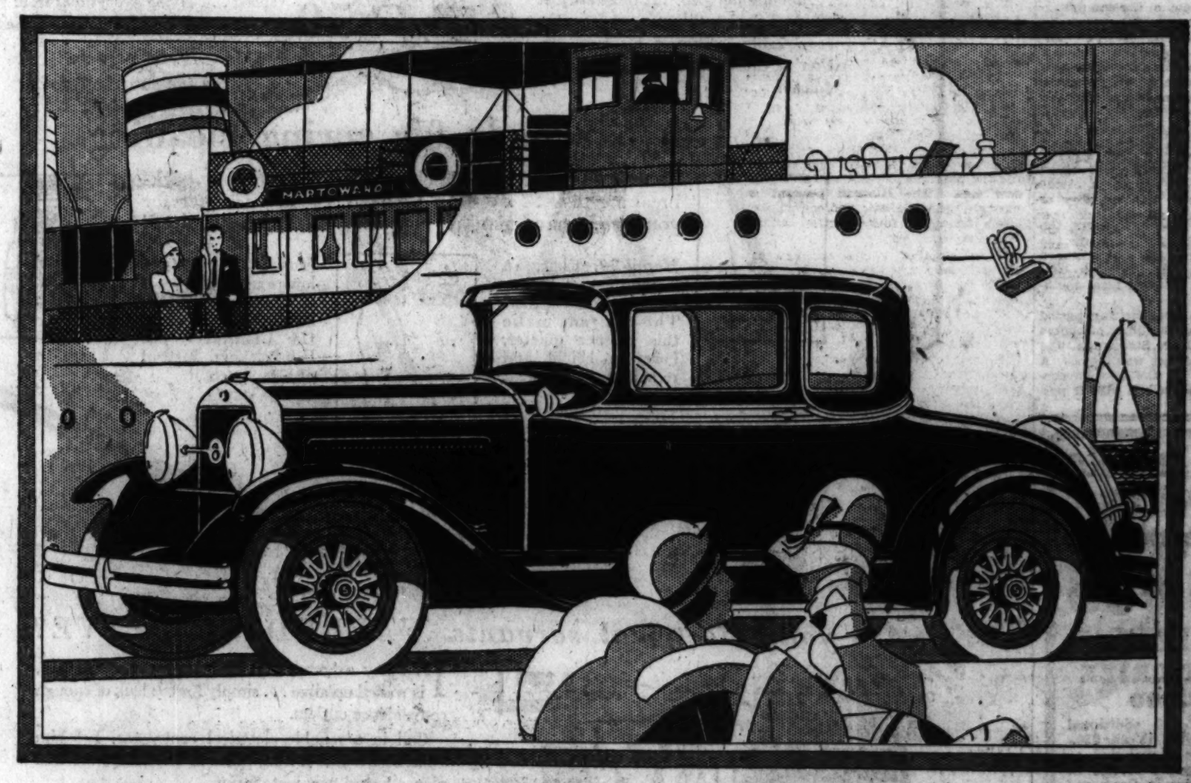
An Eight— a Studebaker—and a Commander

at $1495—COMMANDER SIX $1350

Prices at the factory



THE NEW COMMANDER EIGHT COUPE FOR TWO—$1495. COMMANDER SIX COUPE—$1350. Ideal for business. Large luggage space under rear deck. Also available with rumble seat. Prices at the factory. Bumpers and spare tire extra.

THINK of it! An eight, a Studebaker—and a Commander—for $1495. Worthy successor to the world-famous Commander which sped 25,000 miles in less than 23,000 minutes in heroic proof of its speed and staying power. Heir to the full fruits of Studebaker's engineering genius, which requires no further evidence than the fact that Studebaker today holds, undisputed, every official speed and endurance record for fully equipped stock cars.

Today's Commander is emphatically today's motor car. Its superb performance is matched by forward, youthful style, which beautifully interprets that performance. Lower—lower looking—and steadier at great speed—because of its costly double-drop frame. Restful riding, such as motoring never knew until Studebaker introduced the luxury of ball bearing spring shackles, is still further enhanced by hydraulic shock absorbers.

Studebaker now sells more 8-cylinder cars than any other manufacturer on earth.

RUSSIA PEASANT SEEKS POVERTY; EASIEST WAY OUT

If He's Prosperous Reds Raise Taxes Sky High.

[This is the fourth of a series of articles describing a reporter's impressions of a trip through central Russia and the Ukraine.]

BY MARK RASUMNY

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

OGULZI, Kharkov District, Russia, April 6.—Ogulzi is a typical Ukrainian village. I thought I knew something about life in the soviet village, from what I had learned in the soviet cities; but I discovered that in order to learn what the peasant thinks about the soviet government and the present economic conditions you have to go to the village and make friends with the peasants themselves.

The first day I was here the peasants eyed me suspiciously. They refused to answer my questions and walked away from me when I tried to talk with them. In the end I discovered the magic formula—I had only to tell them that I was a foreigner and their whole attitude changed.

They asked me what was the attitude of the American government towards the American "peasant." Did the government laugh at them and treat them contemptuously, as the soviet government was doing? How does the American "peasant" live? What prices does he get for his products? How much does he have to pay for necessities? I answered these questions truthfully, and overnight I obtained an enviable reputation as being the most entertaining liar in Russia. After ten years of bolshevism the Russian peasant thinks that conditions in foreign countries are equally bad, if not worse, than in Russia.

Conditions Growing Worse.

The communist régime has always maintained an irrational and inconsistent policy towards the village. The communists admit frankly that this policy is destroying Russian agriculture, but the party leaders in Moscow have decreed that the present policy of repressions must continue, and so economic conditions among the Russian peasants are getting progressively worse.

According to the communist party, the population of the Russian village has been divided into three classes—Kulaks, rich peasants owning more than one horse or one cow, who are excisively taxed; middle peasants, who at the utmost own one horse and one cow, and poor peasants, who generally are farm laborers, owning neither a horse nor a cow.

"If we do not cultivate all our available land, then the government denounces us as enemies and demands that we raise more crops," a middle peasant explained. "If we obey orders and cultivate all our land then the government calls us Kulaks and confiscates our crops. It is the same with our live stock. If we keep more than one cow we come into the Kulak class and our taxes are increased till we have to sell it. If we do not keep more than one cow, then we are accused of sabotaging the government's plans to improve village economy."

Peasants Seek to Be Poor.

This is the situation in the Russian village in a nutshell. It is a vicious circle and there is no way out. As it is now, each peasant tries to be poorer than his neighbor. If one peasant has two cows, his neighbor keeps one. If he has one, his neighbor tries to sell his and go without milk and butter.

The same condition applies to the area of land under cultivation. The result is now being seen in the shortage of foodstuffs in the Russian cities. The peasants are only growing enough produce for their own immediate needs. The less they have, the less there is to be confiscated by the communist tax collectors.

The former large exports of grain from Russia came chiefly from the estates of large landowners. After the revolution many of these estates were divided among the peasants, but this action did not increase the cultivated acreage nor the production of grain. The Russian peasant before the war grew enough grain to supply the interior needs of the country. Last year the soviet government made no attempt to supply the interior needs and exported large quantities of grain abroad before crop returns were in.

Later there was a crop failure in the Ukraine.

Plan Up to Date Methods.

Commissioner Petrowski, chairman of the Ukrainian central executive committee, anounced that the only way out was to establish Kolhozi and Sovhozi [communal and state farms] which would use modern up to date methods and produce enough grain to supply the needs of the cities and leave some over for export. After six months organization work the Russian commissariat of agriculture announces that such farms will produce 150,000 tons of grain this coming summer.

Efforts to persuade the peasant to join his neighbors and pool their land and resources to operate a communal farm have thus far been unsuccessful and the peasants are distrustful of this new idea. The Russian peasant is strongly individualistic and communist ideals have not found fertile soil in the villages.

Every Russian village has a number of Kulaks and these men are generally the most capable and energetic men in the village. They rent horses and loan implements to the poor peasants for a portion of their crop, and while their charge is often exorbitant, still their aid enables the poor peasants to live. The Kulaks do not enter the communal farms because they have the most to lose. The middle peasants also do not wish to enter because they all are ambitious to some day become a Kulak.

The Kharkov district has a total of 218,000 peasant farms. Under the present regime there is a tendency to split up these farms into smaller ones. The average peasant farm in the district today consists of slightly less than six acres of arable land. Last year 5,200 of these farms were split into 10,890 farms. This means a further decrease in the land sown with grain, and if we remember that this process is going on all over Russia it is easy to understand why the soviet commissariat of agriculture admits that Russia is not likely to become a large exporter of grain for many years to come.

"We are no longer going to be such fools as to continue to supply the towns with bread," one peasant said. "The town workers don't supply us with anything in abundance. Let the workers in the city grow their own food. The city gives us nothing and we shall give it the same."

Forced to Give Up Crops.

Between October, 1928, and March, 1929, the first half of the soviet fiscal year, the government collected from the 218,000 farms in the district a total of 6,446 tons of grain aside from the usual produce tax. In the villages communists organized "committees of the poor peasants," who forced the other peasants to surrender their crop to the government grain collectors at the prices fixed by the state, which average one-fourth to one-tenth of the market price. Parades were organized and brass bands headed the line of village carts as they approached the local elevators. The parades were generally followed by several murders, for the peasants revenged themselves upon those who betrayed their hidden stores to the government.

A national campaign is under way to increase the cultivated area ten per cent and the production of industry seven per cent during the coming spring. There is little chance of this ambition being fulfilled.

Russia has always been a country of bad harvests. Primitive agricultural methods, poor roads and extreme climatic conditions have resulted in many famines in the past, and will provide more famines in the future. The Ukraine is the richest agricultural region in Russia, for it contains that famous "black soil district" which in the past has produced fabulous crops. But the present winter has been unusually severe. Heavy winds have blown the snow from the fields and the winter crop has been severely damaged. The outlook for the coming harvest is very dark.

Red Officials Murdered.

The village Ogulzi is boiling with rage against the government. Peasants have murdered communist officials and members of the committee of poor peasants. Kulaks, who instigated the murders, were shot, but murders continue to be committed. Ogulzi is not an exception. Instead, it is the average Russian village.

CHECKER TAXI CO. HEAD ACCUSED OF BEATING DRIVER

2 Officials Are Charged with Stealing Cabs.

Warrants charging Robert McLaughlin, president of the Checker Taxi company, and two other members of the company with assault and battery on a Checker driver, were issued yesterday by Judge Daniel P. Trude in the Racket court. Leo Marshall, 41 years old, 3353 Wilson avenue, the driver, claimed he had been beaten up in the president's office for "talking against the company."

At the same time two employés of the taxi company were accused of stealing the cabs of two other drivers, in warrants issued in Judge Trude's court. The warrants against McLaughlin and the others further complicate the affairs of the company, which have been in litigation in the Federal court for months. Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson is expected to rule on a petition demanding a receiver for the firm on Tuesday.

According to Marshall, he was summoned to McLaughlin's office at 1401 Jackson boulevard and there found Sol Bloch, general superintendent, and Frank White, an employé, with the president.

He was immediately accused of making remarks against the company, which he denied, he said, but without warning the men set upon him and beat him.

Nathan Rubinstein, 5023 Kimball avenue, and Morris Levin, 4451 North Sawyer avenue, Checker drivers, asked warrants against Gus Lippert, a road superintendent, and Louis Duskin, his assistant, claiming that their cabs had been taken from them on the northwest side and placed in a garage without an explanation. They obtained warrants charging larceny against the two employés.

The world's first STRAIGHT-EIGHT under $1000

The Roosevelt five-passenger Sedan . . . sleek and trim on the outside. Roomy and luxurious inside. Powered by a straight-eight motor of Marmon manufacture.

This is the new Roosevelt Eight . . . an entirely new conception of what a low-priced car can be. Straight-eight Marmon-built motor . . . Style and distinction in every line. See it today

People see the Roosevelt—they drive it—they compare. The car itself answers all questions save one—that question is: "How soon can I get one?"

If you consider beauty first, what car can compare with the low, graceful lines of the Roosevelt? If you determine preference by performance, what car can match the smooth, effortless power of the Roosevelt 70-horsepower straight-eight engine? If you would go into the full mechanical detail, what car matches the specifications of this advanced Roosevelt?

The more one goes into the facts, and from every angle, the more apparent it becomes that no car in the world gives so much at or anywhere near the $1000 figure.

We submit here many of the outstanding Roosevelt features. They tell part of the story—but the car itself tells far more.

ATHENS WINS NATIONAL BASKETBALL TOURNEY

OUR CUBS LOOK FIT TO WIN AND SET FOR FIGHT

Mr. Burns Sizes Up Each Individual.

The Cubs defeated Houston yesterday, 6 to 4. Details on following page.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Houston, Tex., April 6.—With no rain or anything to interrupt the endeavors of the Chicago Cubs, about all we've been doing is writing about McCarthy's victories. We havn't been doing nearly enough baseball experting to suit us.

JOE M'CARTHY.

But here it is, little more than a week till the big opening at Wrigley field, and we've just got to get caught up on this experting business.

We now propose to set down the names of all the Cubs and say just what we think of 'em, after having rowped with the gang since Feb. 14. Here goes:

PITCHERS.

Charley Root—Says he never felt better in his life. Every man on the club is whooping it up for Root to duplicate his 1927 season. He is assured of the fightingest kind of support whenever he goes in there.

Fred Blake—Slow in reaching his form, but going great guns now. He's our bet for the opening day assignment against Burleigh Grimes.

Pat Malone—Has been taking his time about bearing down, but reached condition in Beaumont.

Hal Carlson—His health is completely restored. Hasn't been doing much bearing down but upon several occasions, when he wanted to get rough, made the Detroit Tigers eat out of his hand.

Art Nehf—Manager McCarthy has been permitting him to shape up that old left wing along his own lines.

Guy Bush—Has broken out several times with his mania for experimentation with side arm, under arm, knuckle ball and screw ball deliveries. Recently has shown signs of getting down to serious pitching.

Mike Cvengros—He has been surprisingly good at times. He's a child of misfortune, however, and most anything can happen while he's working.

Claud Jonnard—Picked up after Landis' free agent edict. He's a great big fellow with a world of speed and quite a bit of experience.

Berlyn Horne—Little, but he has a lot of stuff. Though up for the first time, he's 29 and has had a great deal of class AA experience. He'll stick.

Eddie Lautenbacher—A great big kid who shows daily improvement.

CATCHERS.

Leo Hartnett — Has been out all spring with a sore arm. Said today a miracle had been wrought overnight and that he expects to catch a game before the club leaves Texas.

Mike Gonzales — Getting younger every season. His presence has been reassuring since Hartnett's arm went bad.

INFIELDERS.

Charley Grimm—Hasn't changed a bit in any particular, except maybe he's got several new pieces for his violin or is it a banjo?

Rogers Hornsby—A million per cent OK. We know why he has the reputation of being a "loner." Most folks want to talk about something besides baseball, once in a while. Hornsby refuses to talk about anything but baseball at any time.

Woody English—He doesn't hit when we think he should but, as Hornsby says about him, "he gets on base so what's the difference?"

Norm McMillan—Had the third base job stolen from Clyde Beck, then the fans hit him. We guess he'll be in the starting lineup opening day, however.

Clyde Beck—Probably weary from overhearing all the chatter about the Cubs' only weakness being third base. Doesn't appear to be as good a ball player as he was at the start of the season.

OUTFIELDERS.

Riggs Stephenson—You bugs are going to pay more attention to this fellow or get a piece of our mind some of these days. What if he hasn't got a good throwing arm? Can't a guy get a break for leading the club in hitting, year after year? And, don't forget, Stevie finally has gone in for home run hitting.

Hack Wilson — Snorting and pawing more than ever. Secretly, the meeting of the pudgy one from the danger spot in the batting order has furnished a challenge that will be interesting to watch. Instead of sulking Wilson has turned on the steam.

Kiki Cuyler — Seems a little faster than ever. Has been hitting in streaks, but isn't pressing as he was a year ago.

Cliff Heathcote — Still probably the best second string player in baseball.

Johnny Moore — It is a pleasure to see this kid get 'em. He can sock, too.

Sammy Taylor — Plenty of class here.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BASEBALL.

LARGE cities furnish a smaller percentage of rookies to major league baseball teams than formerly. Fewer boys learn on the vacant lots the elementals which may develop them into national stars. This is in part because there are fewer vacant spots of sufficient size for a group of youngsters to "choose up sides." Another reason is a greater number playing tennis, which requires less space. And still another reason is the demand for golf caddies, enabling boys to earn spending money. The logical inclination for a caddy is to become a golfer.

Under such conditions one might think baseball interest on the part of the public in our large cities would decline. That has not happened. Of course, where losing teams have been the rule, attendance has fallen off, but where winning teams have prevailed new season attendance records are not uncommon.

Take Chicago, for instance. Cub fans expect a winning team. Most of them expect a pennant. Try to secure a reserved seat for the opening game, still ten days away. There are none. The reservations have been sold out for several weeks. That seems to prove that baseball still is our "national game," even if fewer city boys are now able to enjoy its thrills by participation.

Some old timers profess to fear for the caliber of baseball, on the theory that its source of supply is drying up. Those recruits the cities are not furnishing are coming from the smaller towns and an increasing percentage from the colleges. Prejudice of managers against campus products no longer is deep seated. Still more, no doubt, would reach the professional teams from the campus except for the handicap imposed by the short college season, ending just as the weather really gets good in the north.

This is why the south sends out more college boys than the north. The amateur rule prevents many, not all, college players from summer baseball experience, and it sends some back to the campus ineligible for the college nine.

It is an economic law that where there is demand a supply will arise. The Wake sees no reason why this law should not apply to baseball.

Dollar, Dollar, how shall I rhyme
Your big, bold bluff with my frightened Dime?
Pve stretched and strained its pitiful pride
Over scars and bruises these patches hide,
But bigger and bolder you swagger along,
While your heart is gay and your stomach strong . . .
O, how shall a withering Dime survive
The blighting scorn where the mighty drive!

Dollar, Dollar, the fatter you grow,
The less of honor a Dime shall know.
A mustard seed of the scriptures grew . . .
But never a Dollar the Prophet knew.
This "cent-per-cent" of the saving cult,
So far as I know, has but one result:
The less you eat the thinner you'll be,
While you toil and dream of the "bread-fruit tree."

Dollar, Dollar, how shall I rhyme
Your big, bold bluff with my bills in time
To laugh at the Sheriff who comes to awe
My helpless Dime with the stone-faced law?
Your oily sermons on thrift are fine—
More gifts they ask from my famished Dime . . .
Dollar, Dollar, what shall we do
When the days are short and the years are few?

Sir: F. M. R., Michigan '11, says Indiana's alleged basketball supremacy is the bunk, because in the last 10 years Michigan and Wisconsin have been in four Big Ten championships, Purdue in three, and Indiana in two.

Data recently published in the Purdue "Alumnus" show that Purdue has been in first place four times, instead of three, in the last ten years—1921, 1922, 1926, 1928. This same data show Purdue has played Michigan nine times, winning five; Wisconsin ten times, winning six. Coach Lambert's teams have not finished lower than fourth place in the last ten years. REIGH COUNT RUNS 11TH IN ENGLISH DEBUT

Chicago Colt Boxed Near Finish.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 6.—Under the eyes of his owner, Mrs. John D. Hertz of Chicago, and her husband, Reigh Count today ran his first English race, the Lingfield handicap, finishing eleventh in a field of twenty-five starters. The American horse started the race a three to one favorite.

B. MICHELL.

The Lingfield handicap is a mile race on a straight course and the time for the race was 1:30. Drawing number four position, the American horse dominated his flank of the field at the start, but the pace was too fast and Jockey Chick Lang began using the whip shortly after the half mile was passed. Despite his efforts, Yoho, who finished third, pressed ahead and closely followed Square Rock and Caballero, first and second, respectively. The American favorite passed the finish line pocketed in a group of horses.

Mrs. Hertz, however, has not lost hopes of taking the Ascot gold cup. She does not believe Reigh Count was at his best today. This is the first race he has run in England and his training is based on a schedule to bring him to the peak of condition for the gold cup.

Trainer Michell Silent.

Trainer Michell was taciturn, as usual. When asked after the race what he thought of Reigh Count's chances for the gold cup in the light of today's performance he said, "It is too early to think."

However, when he showed up at the track there was no doubt but what Reigh Count was the most photographed horse there and drew the most interest. As a matter of fact, he is in a different class from most of the horses at Lingfield, which is not a very important meeting. The mere fact that he is an American horse, a comparative rarity on English tracks, was enough to arouse curiosity, even if his record were not known and respected here as it is.

Where the interest of the race centered was indicated by headings in the London evening papers. There are only three, and all three featured Reigh Count's loss, mentioning the name of the winner in only a subhead. One paper called him "America's best race horse."

Reigh Count Draws Interest.

Increase in interest in Reigh Count began with yesterday's dope articles in which he was mentioned as worth watching, although it was the general opinion that he probably was not ready yet to run a winning race. But this morning when the correspondents at Newmarket—the little town where Reigh Count trains—sent in their selection Reigh Count stock went up, for the Newmarket experts who had seen the horse work out picked him to win unanimously. Although the London experts were still cautious the price rose from eight to one to three to one, making Reigh Count the favorite at the start.

When the American horse entered the paddock before the race he was the cynosure. Enveloped in a big yellow blanket, and contrary to English custom with tail braided, he also was the target of a few witticisms from Britishers who found the general effect "just like the Yankees."

Wasn't Quite Ready.

But the experts were not looking at the blankets. They were examining the horse, with the usual variance of opinions. One told THE TRIBUNE, "A very pretty horse, but he does not look like a cup winner to me."

While another, with undisguised admiration, said: "The best horse I've seen in a long time. But I do not thing he is fit enough yet to win a race."

This seemed to sum up English opinion—Reigh Count is a first class horse but was not ready in this race to show all he has got.

That was certainly the impression one got as he swept by the finish. A good many of the horses were traveling faster, but the ease and grace of movement of the handsome chestnut made him appear superior to most of his running mates. Somehow he seemed to be moving too easily, as though he could run lots faster if he felt up to it. At the end of the race he also seemed fresh and had lots of strength left. While the other horses were steaming after their exertions in the raw spring air, Reigh Count's coat was hardly damp with perspiration.

Pa Stribling Arranging for Son to Cuff Scott

Washington, D. C., April 6.—[U.P.]—Pa Stribling today announced he is arranging for Young Stribling to cuff Phil Scott, English fighter, to the canvas, and then punch MAX SCHMELING, sensational German hope, into oblivion, in Berlin.

Three Tie in Pole Vault at Minnesota

Minneapolis, Minn., April 6.—(AP)—Abbott of the University of Illinois won the special mile run, one of the feature events at the first annual Minnesota relays at the University of Minnesota here tonight. He finished ahead of Letts of Chicago, and negotiated the distance in 4:24 4-10. White of Illinois was third.

In the special pole vault event for Big Ten contestants, Warne, Northwestern; Canby, Iowa, and Otterness, Minnesota, each cleared the bar at 13 feet.

The Big Ten mile relay was won by Iowa [Thomas, Ferguson, Depping and Gunn]. Wisconsin was second and Minnesota third. The time was 3:28 6-10.

Cornell college of Iowa captured the midwest conference mile relay in 3:32 6-10. Carleton was second and Hamline third.

The North Central conference mile relay went to North Dakota university, with the North Dakota Aggies second and Morningside third. The time was 3:37 5-10.

CLAIM HIGH JUMP MARK.

Berkeley, Cal., April 6.—(AP)—What was announced as a new world's record in the high jump under the standards that went into effect this year was set by Henry Coggleshall of the Olympic club with a leap of 6 feet 6¼ inches in the dual track meet between the Olympic club and the University of California here today. Coggeshall, a former University of Southern California student, was first credited with a jump of 6 feet 6⅛ inches, but later measurements increased the height by one-eighth of an inch.

Under the old system of jumping the horizontal bar rested on pegs set in the standards, but under the system adopted this year, the cross-bar rests on the tops of the uprights, making it more difficult for the jumper, as the slightest contact will dislodge it.

The Olympic club won the meet, 81 4-5 to 49 1-5.

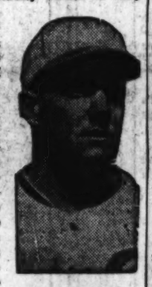
STANFORD WINS TITLE.

Palo Alto, Cal., April 6.—(AP)—Stanford's Cardinals won the Pacific coast dual track and field championship today with a smashing 74 to 57 victory over the Trojans of Southern California. Upsets in three events, the half mile, low hurdles, and broad jump, which Stanford performers captured, mounted a winning total that was as surprising as it was effective. A crowd of 15,000 witnessed the meet.

Sox Defeat Wichita Falls Again; Thomas Hurls Route

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Wichita Falls, Tex., April 6.—Tommy Thomas, rightfully rated as fifty per cent of the White Sox pitching department, today made his initial assault of the season on the nine round route, and, while successful, was not particularly impressive. He was slapped by Wichita Falls for eleven hits, but the Chicagoans came through with an attack every bit as good, so whipped the Spudders for the second straight day. The count was 8 to 5.



TOMMY THOMAS.

In only two rounds was Thomas able to hold the Spudders hitless. These two perfect chapters came at the start when the red-cheeked boy from Baltimore was fresh and willing. However, he displayed enough to warrant a belief he will be ready to pitch against the Browns, April 16. He also was disturbed a bit this afternoon by fearfully high winds that blow in Texas like nowhere else.

Gather Three Home Runs.

The Sox were given a chance to look at two hostile pitchers, one being Milt Steengrafe, who once belonged to their gang, and the other an obscure fellow named Stiely.

Among the clouts with which the Chicago delegates amused the few hundred wind blown customers were three homers.

Two of these, by Redfern, cleared the left field fence while Steengrafe pitched. Redfern, ordinarily, is not given to such boisterous deeds but on this occasion profited by the wind which gave impetus to his drives. The other homer was by Bud Clancy. It was rather peculiar. Clancy laid the ball on a shelflike niche in the right field wall and circled the bases while the Spudder fielder made amusingly frantic efforts to reach the pill.

The local gang nicked Tommy for the first time in the second inning when Bean sailed a fly to right and Watwood let it get away for a two bagger. The young fielder hadn't made allowance for windage. The beneficiary scored when Eldred singled. Redfern matched this run when he slapped his first homer in the third. Then he put the Sox two ahead in the fourth with his second circuit blow while Reynolds was on base, the result of a pass.

Watwood Raps Double.

The Spudders dented Thomas some more in the fifth and sixth, getting two runs, but the Sox managed to keep out in front with two in their sixth stand, these coming at the expense of Stiely. This rally started when Clancy walked. Reynolds then bunted and the first sacker gave the ball such a healthy throw to the second baseman, who covered, that Clancy ran all the way home on the error and Reynolds to third. A whistling double down the right field line by Watwood drove the waiting runner home.

In the eighth Clancy laid the ball on the shelf for a home run. The two remaining Sox tallies resulted from four hits off Stiely in the ninth. Redfern started it with a pop single that the wind blew away from a waiting infielder. Thomas scored him with a double. Then a single by Kerr and double by Clancy shoved Thomas home.

The Spudders concluded their assault on Thomas with a homer in the eighth by Bennett and one run in the ninth, the result of a single and double.

The same teams will play tomorrow if the wind doesn't blow away the ball park.

Shires, Penitent, Back In Dallas to Rejoin the Sox

Dallas, Tex., April 6.—(AP)—Arthur Shires, the "bad boy" of the Chicago White Sox, whose open breach with Manager Lena Blackburne a week ago caused his temporary banishment, was back in Dallas today penitent and anxious to rejoin his mates. He arrived from his home at Italy, Tex. The Texan said he was anxious to "forget the past and go out and hit the ball." He said he would report to Manager Blackburne here Monday.

Buffalo Beats Oak Park for Y Title, 39-33

While the national interscholastic tournament at the University of Chicago was drawing legions of prep fans to witness the championship games in Bartlett gym a record crowd of Oak Parkers packed themselves into the Oak Park High school fieldhouse last night to see Buffalo, N. Y., defeat Oak Park for the International Y. M. C. A. championship, 39 to 33, in the game which concluded three days of play for the title.

The Buffalo five took a lead in the first quarter and held it through the half, which ended in their favor, 24 to 9. Oak Park led only once, when Capt. Birks looped in a long shot during the first minute of play.

Oak Park Rallies.

The villagers came back in the last period and led by Arthur Bramhall, St. Mel High school star, who scored 5 baskets and 4 free throws, rallied and nearly evened the score. Then McNamara, the easterners' star, who counted 6 baskets and 4 free throws to take high scoring honors, began to hit the rim, and Buffalo went on to win.

The consolation tournament was won by Youngstown, O., which defeated the St. Louis, Mo., in the "second chance" final. Third honors went to Ann Arbor, Mich., which had fallen before Oak Park in the semi-finals earlier in the day, and which easily defeated the Montclair, N. J., five, for third place.

League of Nations.

The new championship team represents a veritable league of nations, bringing together players of eight nationalities, five of whom have played together for five years. They are: Capt. Hecker, Jewish; Amigone, Italian; Wiseman, Jewish; Ormsby, Polish, and McNamara, Irish. The others are: Bell, English; Decker and Eberle, German; Lawrence, Swedish; Dollar, manager, Scotch, and Stuff, German-American.

John Kagay of the Ann Arbor team was awarded the trophy as being the player most valuable to his team. Lineups:

GIANT TEXANS BEAT OKLAHOMA QUINTET, 25-21

Cicero Team Loses Consolation Title.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

Athens High school's big Texas Rangers won the interscholastic basketball championship of the United States last night by defeating Classen High school of Oklahoma City, 25 to 21, in the final game of the University of Chicago tournament in Bartlett gymnasium. Athens came through a field of 40 teams, 28 of them state champs, to take the championship to Texas by winning five games, all by wide margins save the last.

A. A. STAGG.

It was furious basketball, that final game, a grueling contest between two powerful teams, who mixed smooth passing with headlong dives and grim wrestling for the ball that more than once sent two or three men sprawling. Once the referee stopped the game while he massaged his neck, having been in the way of one of those smashing drives that stopped neither for flesh nor officials. And Tom Merrick, Classen forward, was carried out with a twisted knee at the end of the first period.

Clean but Hard Playing.

It wasn't the sort of roughness that endeavors to injure an opponent; it was the pure "fight" of lads battling for something they considered worth fighting for.

But it was not dirty. Athens had one foul called on the six men who played and that late in the last period.

Classen trailed through most of the game, but only for a short time in the third quarter were they more than a few points behind. They were fighting almost hopeless odds in the height of the Texans, never once getting a short shot, but they fought on, sinking ten long shots to keep within striking distance.

They call them "hornets," these big lads from the large open spaces of Texas where the cow puncher has given way to the oil driller, but they were more like genial giants in that final game.

The six first string men average only a small fraction under 6 feet 2 inches in height, the center and shortest man being exactly 6 feet. They drove hard with the ball, yet when the whistle blew they grinned.

Classen, with only one man, Jumping Jack McCracken, matching the Texans' height, really had a smoother attack, but Athens had the defense and the power. They controlled both backboards without effort and what defense is there against a team which calmly lofts passes over its opponents' heads and bats the ball about under the hoop until some one shoves it up through the net? A jump ball near Athens' basket was just too bad for Classen.

Beck Keeps Team Going.

Capt. Andy Beck of Classen kept his team in the running at the start and even put them out in front, 12 to 11, at the half by making four baskets on five long shots.

But after that Athens' high passing to short shots pulled them away to a seven point lead. More long shots by McCracken and Beck brought Classen within three points, but after that Texas matched basket for basket.

Classen got a four point lead at the start, Merrick and Milner sinking long shots, and after Sumner had scored a free throw Beck hit the first of his five with a long hook. Sumner flipped an overhead shot through the hoop and Brannon came on with a push-up for another before the quarter ended, 6 to 5, just as Merrick dropped to the floor with his twisted knee. He was taken to a hospital, where it was learned his knee was sprained, but he returned with his team last night.

Athens Spurts in Third Period.

Starting the second quarter Sumner counted a free throw and Ben Tompkins and Johns hit short baskets before Beck lofted through the first of three long shots for the quarter. The first was from midfloor. Ben Tompkins got a point of Milner's foul and Beck continued with another basket a third the length of the floor and yet another from the corner. The last one put Classen a point in front at the half, but it didn't last.

Athens played its best basketball in that third period, holding Classen to one long basket by Milner while scoring ten points, chiefly on tip in shots. Sumner scored a push up and a hook shot before Milner got his basket. John Tompkins followed with two fouls, Ben Tompkins scored from under the basket on his brother John's pass and Sumner slapped in a rebound on John Tompkins' long shot to give Athens a 7 point lead as they began the fourth quarter.

McCracken began that final period with a long shot, the word long being quite unnecessary in describing any of Classen's baskets. Beck tossed a one-handed shot from the foul line. Only three points in front, John Tompkins leaped upward, took a pass at the foul line, twisted in the air and scored. Beck immediately matched it with a long angle shot. Sumner scored a moment later from under the basket and McCracken counted another before the final gun.

Each team had scored ten baskets, the difference in total score representing free throws.

Joes Defeat Jackson.

Joes, the mountain village of 90 which sent 10 per cent of its population to this tournament as its basketball squad, can rejoice as their tall farmer lads won third place, beating the smooth passing Jackson, Mich., team, 21 to 17, after Jackson had led most of the way. Joes whose sole reliance at the start of the tournament was an uncanny eye for the basket, demonstrated it had learned something of defense, yet it was the ability to put the ball through the hoop that scored ten points and won for them in the final quarter. Snyder hit three baskets, Nikkel, four and Hall three.

Jackson started a team of subs, replacing them with regulars a minute before the end of the first quarter which ended 2 to 2. Jagnow, Jackson's fine center, hit two baskets and free throw to give Jackson a lead of 7 to 4 at the half. Two quick baskets by Jackson on smart passing added to their lead but then Nikkel and Snyder began to hit pulling up 15 to 11 at the start of the last quarter.

Morton Loses, 17-10.

Then Joes began to score in its accustomed style. Hall counted two under the basket shots, Nikkel two more from an angle and Snyder hooked one in. Jackson failed to score while Joes tied and went ahead. After securing a four point lead Jackson scored once but two more of those Joes' shots that have become famous made it sure.

Morton High school of Cicero lost in the final game of the consolation tournament, which gave the east a share in the honors, when Brockton, Mass., won, 17 to 10. The boys from the Shoe Town refused to be fooled by Morton's stalling and delayed offense, which seemed to annoy the fans more than it did their opponents. Morton scored first but the strong eastern team, led by Hollomore, a fighting forward, dropped in a couple of baskets from about the foul line and took a 6 to 4 lead in the first quarter.

Hollomore's hook shot at the start of the second quarter was the only score in the second period and after the rest at half time the easterners built up their lead to 11 to 7. Morton scoring only three free throws. With a lead of 12 to 7, in the early minutes of the final quarter, Brockton elected to stall, and added a couple of sleeper shots, while all Morton could collect was Cerny's free throw and Gauthier's side shot just before the gun.

Morton Reaches Consolation Final.

Morton yesterday morning defeated Columbia, S. C., in a consolation semi-final game, 27 to 18.

Brockton whipped Wheatland, Wyo., in another consolation semifinal and thus earned the right to oppose Morton.

Morton's delayed offensive tactics Morton got away to an early lead and was never headed, holding a half time lead of 7 to 2. In the last half Morton ran up the score. Incidentally, the present Morton center is a brother of Ed Kowalski, who was the mainstay of the United States championship team in 1927. Since that time, however, the family name has been cut down to just Kawal. Lineup:

It was the seventh success scored by a Frenchman in the last nine American tennis championships, indoors and outdoors. The Frenchmen started their winning streak in this country in 1925, the last year Bill Tilden won the singles title.

Errors—English, Wilson, Gonzales. Two base hits—Grimm, Pepper, Martin, Stephenson. Stolen base—English. Sacrifice—Wilson, Williamson. Double plays—Rock, Jordan; Smith; Grimm, Horne; Jordan, Smith. Bases on balls—Horne, 5; Myers, 7. Struck out—Horne, 1; Myers, 4. Hits—Off Horne, 6 in 7 innings. Passed ball—Hoffman. Time—1:55.

Houston, Tex., April 6.—The Cubs had to wait until the ninth inning to beat Houston today, 6 to 4. A left handed youth named Gerald Myers, with deceptive floaters, handcuffed the McCarthys for eight frames, but they solved his offerings in the final round and clubbed out four runs.

Until the last inning some of the best Cub batsmen were being stood on their ears. The Chicagoans had made only four hits when they decided they had been fooled long enough.

Stephenson started the rally with a double and scored when Grimm singled. Gonzales walked, and Heathcote ran for him. Taylor batted for Grampp and struck out, but the third strike was a passed ball, so Grimm and Heathcote moved up. English grounded to Jordan, who got Grimm at the plate, but Beck singled to center, scoring Heathcote and English. Beck reached second on the throw in and scored when Cuyler singled to center.

Buffs Take Lead in First.

When the first inning was over the Buffs were in possession of a 1 to 0 lead. In the Cub half English walked and stole second while Beck was striking out. Cuyler walked, but Hornsby, for the third time in his last four times at bat, hit into a double play.

Hock, the Buffs' third baseman, opened the home offensive with a tap to Horne. Jordan then singled to center and proceeded home when the ball got past Wilson and rolled to the fence.

The Buffs acquired their second run in the third inning. Benson singled and reached second when Gonzales made a faulty throw in an effort to catch him off first. Myers bunted and the effort went for a hit, Benson pulling up at third. He scored while Hock was forcing Myers. Horne caught Hock napping off first, and English threw out Jordan.

In the fifth, the Cubs got two passes, but were powerless with their bats. Grimm walked and Gonzales popped to Martin. Horne walked and English popped to Jordan. Then Beck popped to Benson.

Great catches by English and Stephenson prevented the Buffs from adding to their total in the fifth. Pepper pushed off with a double. Hoffman popped to Grimm. English went to the stands for Benson's foul fly and Stevie came up with a diving catch.

The Cubs broke through in the sixth. Cuyler walked and went to third on Hornsby's single to center. Wilson's fly caught Shortstop Benson off balance in short left, and Kiki scored after the catch. Stephenson hit into a double play, Jordan to Smith.

Horne Loses Control.

Horne lost control in the seventh after having refused to grant a pass. English booted Smith's grounder. Wilson made a great one handed leaping catch of Martin's drive. Pepper walked and so did Hoffman, filling the bases. Benson forced Smith at the plate, Grimm to Gonzales, but Myers walked, forcing in Pepper. Horne threw out Hock to end the round.

The Cubs made one run when they seemed in a fair way to clean up in the eighth. English walked and went to third when Beck rapped out the fourth Cub hit of the game. Cuyler struck out. Hornsby tapped to the pitcher, who elected to make the throw to first, English scoring and Beck stopping at second. Wilson then struck out.

Winning the conference wrestling title was the result of four years' hard work on the part of Keen. Virtually beginning the sport at Michigan four years ago, his team placed in the first division the first year, won the eastern division championship of the conference the following two years and then captured the Big Ten crown.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 6.—(AP)—One fielding lapse and poor base running in the ninth sent the Phillies to defeat by the Athletics before 20,000 fans here today in the first of five games for the spring championship of the city. Sullivan, pitching for Fort Worth, held the Tigers to two runs in the first six innings. Uhle of Detroit was even tighter, holding Fort Worth to one tally and five hits in the same periods.

Detroit	001	001	040—6 12 3
Fort Worth	000	100	101—3 9 4

Birmingham, Ala., April 6.—(AP)—The Washington Americans got revenge for the 1 to 0 defeat handed them yesterday by the Birmingham Barons by swamping the Southern association team today, 12 to 2.

Going into the seventh inning with the score tied at 2 all, the Senators fell on Hilton, Birmingham hurler, for eight lusty hits, which with a Baron error accounted for eight runs. The Washington hits included a home run by Barnes, and triples by Judge and Rice, the latter pinch hitting.

Stewart's double and a pair of Birmingham errors gave Washington two more runs in the ninth. The score:

Washington	000	002	802—12 13 1

WANER PLAYS; STEERS WIN.

Dallas, Tex., April 6.—(AP)—Paul Waner appeared in uniform for the first time this season today and rapped a single and two doubles in four times at bat, but the Pirates were nosed out by the Dallas Steers, 6 to 5, in eleven innings.

Waner appeared to be in good condition, despite the fact he is a month late for spring training. He handled four chances afield without a bobble.

The Steers won with an eleventh inning assault on Spencer, bunching four hits and a walk to score four runs and overcome a three run lead accumulated by the Pirates in the first half.

PROMISING NEW PLAYERS SCARCE IN BIG LEAGUES

Several Clubs Likely to Keep Lineups Intact.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Wichita Falls, Tex., April 6.—In the way of new Ty Cobbs and new Mordecai Browns, the spring training process, from which sixteen major league clubs now are emerging, appears to have been the next thing to a total loss.

EARL SHEELY.

From the standpoint of the owner who hopes to find something for nothing and the manager who hopes for something because it will assist him in the percentage column, the almost complete absence of youthful "sensations" has been sickening. But some of them are consoling themselves with the thought that they have one or two promising prospects who may come through later.

In the aggregate, however, the sixteen starters, so far as regulars are concerned, will bear striking resemblance to the team makeups of 1928.

Lary's Stock Declines.

One indication of the lightness of the rookie crop is the champion Yankees. They have added two or three who may be heard from in the future. One of these newcomers—Lary, the high priced item from the coast—was slated for the short job, but skidded a bit toward the close of training.

A week ago Dandy Dan Howley, the gentleman who unexpectedly piloted the St. Louis Browns into third place last season, thought he had a great third sacker in Ed Grimes. But Grimes has failed to measure up to expectations as a hitter, and now Howley fears he may have to go back to the combination of O'Rourke at third and Brannon at second.

Howley, however, still thinks well of Ferrell, his kid backstop, and has an unexpected possibility in one Herb Cobb, a right hander, whose throwing in the spring games has been impressive.

Liska Promising Pitcher.

Pitchers never can be definitely appraised until they show they have the "heart" as well as the stuff, but Washington appears to have the best of the entire crop in Adolph Liska. He is being counted upon to pitch regularly.

The Cleveland club stepped out and paid a quantity of money for Outfielders Averill and Porter, but only one of them may be used at the start.

The Detroit management opened up and did a bit of buying for various fellows like Alexander, Prudhomme, Schuble, and Johnson. If two of these prove good enough to labor regularly, the Tiger bosses will feel repaid.

Mack's Athletics are going to be about the same, perhaps a bit weaker. The Red Sox will enjoy the revision made possible by getting six men from Washington for Buddy Myer. The White Sox figured at the start they had three or four sure fire candidates for regular jobs, but developments haven't been encouraging.

Cards to Have New Faces.

The Cubs aren't going to produce even one man who can be called new, and the Giants will be a makeover from 1928, except that Leach, lifted from the Phillies, will help to bolster the outfield. Bush of the Pirates figured he had a candidate for third, hence he shifted Traynor over to short, but the newcomer hasn't knocked anybody's eyes out. Traynor will go back to third eventually, leaving second and short for men available last season. The sole change will be old Earl Sheely at first base, and he's hardly a youngster, but he can play that bag and hit.

The Cardinals will have a few new faces, but nobody knows how good they're going to be. At least two of them will play regularly, and there'll be a couple of recalls among the pitching staff. The few remaining teams won't be changed enough to make it noticeable, at least not in the percentage column.

LOUISIANA STATE CONQUERS ILLINI IN DIXIE FINAL, 9-6

Baton Rouge, La., April 6.—[Special.]—The University of Illinois baseball team wound up its southern tour here today by losing to Louisiana State university, 9 to 6. The Illini, tired and crippled, with outfielders playing the infield and infielders and pitchers in the outfield, functioned miserably afield.

Capt. Andrews was wild and passed bases on balls in the sixth inning paved the way for a three run rally which sent the locals into a 7 to 5 lead. The northerners went to pieces in the eighth frame and four more runs scored before the side could be retired.

Two singles in the ninth inning and a home run by O'Grady accounted for three Illinois runs.

Of the eight games played on the southern excursion, the Illini won three, tied three and lost two. Score:

ESSARE WINS BY NOD IN BOWIE FEATURE RACE

Demonstrates He's Game in Capital Handicap.

Baltimore, Md., April 6.—[Special.] Essare from the Jacques stable may not be a derby horse, but he is a good sprinter. This was demonstrated at Bowie today when he won the Capital handicap, although it took nearly his last ounce of endurance to do it.

There were three heads on the post at the finish, and 15,000 persons roared their approval of the Light Brigade colt, for his head was in front, and so was the heavily played favorite, Buddy Basil was second and third was Matin's Minister, going strongest of all.

Second Victory of Season.

It was the second victory of the season for Essare, as he won at 5½ furlongs here opening day. Essare went to the post for the 7 furlong Capital carrying the top weight of 117 pounds. The public flocked to his support by the thousands, so that even mutuel tickets had to be issued to him.

The start saw Essare's tangerine colors, studded with four leaf clovers, in the van. Then Equafion rushed up to take the lead, and the crowd gasped.

Others Full of Run.

On the turn, Essare closed on Equafion and the latter folded up. But it was evident that others in the field were full of run. At the sixteenth pole Buddy Basil and Matin's Minister had moved up, and the three were running together. Essare was appearing to slide back and Buddy Basil and Matin's Minister to rush up.

The crowd roared for him to hold out. Essare had a little strength left and he threw it into the race to hold the other two even. His head was in front as he nodded past the wire, a good game colt running his best.

Over a good track, the winner's time for the 7 furlongs was 1:27 1-5. He paid $4.40 for a $2 ticket.

WINTER SEASON LEAVES MIDDIES 2 CHAMPIONSHIPS

Annapolis, Md., April 6.—[Special.]—During the winter season of athletics, the Naval academy took first place in two sports, gymnastics and water polo, and second in two others, boxing and fencing. This shows a marked improvement over last season, when boxing was the only sport in which the Naval academy could claim leadership.

Both of the Navy's championships were based upon records of uninterrupted victory. As to gymnastics, it was the regaining of a place in which it was formerly well settled, while it was the first time the highest place had been won in water polo.

By defeating the Naval academy in gymnastics during the season of 1928, Dartmouth broke the Navy's string of 12 years of continuous victory. However, the Navy defeated Dartmouth, as well as all other opponents, during the season just completed.

The Navy water polo team had its hardest contention from the teams of Yale and Princeton, but defeated both. It was the first time that Yale had been defeated since 1924.

Although the Naval academy boxing team was outpointd by Pennsylvania state in the finals of the Intercollegiate Boxing association, it completed its tenth consecutive season without being defeated in a dual match, a record unapproached by any other college in this sport. In all, the naval academy had engaged in 48 dual matches, winning 45 of them and drawing the other three.

As to dual matches, the season was one of the most successful the Naval academy has had. The midshipmen engaged in eight dual matches, opposing every member of the association, and no team won more than two of seven bouths. Penn State was defeated, 5 to 2.

The Naval academy also pressed Yale for honors in fencing. The improved work of the fencing team was the outstanding feature of the winter sport season.

Yale is the only college which can compare with the Naval academy in winter sports. It is credited with first place in swimming, fencing and polo. No other college has won more than one the University of Pennsylvania taking basketball honors, Lehigh wrestling, and Penn State boxing.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS · By WESTBROOK PEGLER

He used his right hand mainly to rub himself where Knute had tagged him last.

NEW YORK, April 6.—Comparisons between the rigors of football and prize fighting always come to a puzzle in physical training and condition. Most of the prize fighters at a given time are residents or ex-residents of the slums. The air of the slums is bad, the habitations are dark and generally verminous, the streets and buildings are dirty, the food comes from push-carts and unsanitary markets and the fare of a typical slum family at dinner would make a young gentleman from a college football training table feel ill on sight.

The majority of these young prize fighters train in gymnasiums situated up flights of dirty stairs, where the windows are closed and the atmosphere reeks of old cigaret smoke, garlic fumes, unbathed humanity, liniment, perspiration, and moldy leather and clothing. The same atmosphere and conditions in the gymnasium of the United States Military academy would call for a congressional investigation, innoculation all around and regimental delousing.

Wonders How They Can Fight So Doggedly.

All this makes me wonder how it is that sallow and pimply young athletes from the slums can fight along in the ring so successfully and so doggedly when pink and robust football men from college, who have been matured on scientific rations and scientific training under ideal conditions, have been unable to give even a decent account of themselves.

There have not been many collegiate prize fighters, it is true, barring the fake, low comedy collegians, such as Frank Moran, who said he took plane geometry, but didn't study the fancy kind. The prize fighting alumni have been Ed Garvey of Notre Dame, who flopped; Monte Munn of Nebraska, who was a giant on the varsity, but almost expired from exhaustion when he tried to go more than six rounds in the ring; Wee William Middlekauff of Florida, who soon learned that the dreariest bums of the ring were his betters; Big Ben Pound of Rollins, another Florida college, who still is fighting in a faint way; Les Marriner of Illinois, Sully Montgomery of Center, and unless I have been misled, Wyoming Warner of the University of Wyoming.

Of these last three, Marriner has had some preliminary success; Sully Montgomery, in six or seven years of fighting, never has fought a main event in what might be termed major league territory, and Warner, if he is a collegian, stands at the head of the rah rah group as a pretty good member of the second flight of fighters.

College Boys Come Undone When Tagged on the Nose.

The strange feature of this record is that football players of more or less renown have lacked not only stamina, but also that faculty which football is supposed to develop in the athlete, which is resourcefulness. They come all undone when tagged on the nose and consequently take more pokes on the nose while thus confused. The youths from the push cart regions of New York City, on the other hand, often take pokes on the nose, but seem to regard them as trivial annoyances and give no sign of perturbation.

One evening after Monte Munn had been gentled along through a program of popover matches intended to season him for more serious work, he was placed in the ring with Knute [pronounced Nude] Hansen for a ten round fight. Hansen, with greater experience and superior skill, gave him a jolly good prodding throughout the entertainment and from the fourth round to the end Monte's legs were melting beneath him. It was heart alone that carried him through for his strength was gone. Not that Knute had whipped him very severely.

Fighters Keep on Fighting Though Hurt.

Any one of half a dozen journeyman heavyweights who never played football would have taken the same beating without serious distress. Monte who had played straight through football games which dragged along for two hours in the robust, rough and tumble rivalries of his alma mater, hadn't the strength to stand this hammering and keep his arms and legs for 30 minutes in the ring. Confusion seized him before the first round was over and he used his right hand mainly to rub himself where Knute had tagged him last.

They make much to do over a broken nose in football, and I would not seem to urge that players be kept on the field when they have been injured. But to see the referee wave the teams apart and signal the sidelines for doctors when a player's face is knocked slightly out of joint usually reminds me of ratty little fighters from the Ghetto or Hell's Kitchen who are injured much worse in the ring, but keep right on fighting, their gums agape where the teeth have been knocked out, their noses swollen grotesquely, their bodies colored with gore.

The accepted thing to do in prize fighting, of course, is to keep on pounding a broken nose or gashed eye, and a young man from the slums who has been thus injured fully realizes that he stands a good chance of being injured twice as badly before the fight is over.

My wonder has to do with their strength. These Rosenbergs and Goldsteins, Carroras and Lynches, who never saw grass outside Central Park, who eat fried food and doughball spaghetti as a training diet, and take their training in gyms like the black hole of Calcutta, somehow have reserves of strength to draw from that well conditioned 'varsity men know nothing about.

Prize Fight Seems Most Wearing Sport.

Whatever the rules, there is no little rabbit punching and leg twisting in the course of an intercollegiate football game, but having watched both types of endeavor quite closely for some years, I believe prize fighting is much the more wearing sport. There are rests between plays in football; there is frequent "time out" for injuries, real or fictitious; there are the two quarterly intermissions and the long recess between the halves.

In the ring the schedule is one minute's rest to three minutes' fighting, and the strain and punishment in a good 15 round fight is much more severe. It would be interesting to see a team of football players recruited from Hester, Bleecker, and Delaney streets play a regulation football game against Princeton, the Army or Stanford. That might even the argument and prove that, after all, fist fighting merely is the natural expression of the Ghetto athlete.

Wallace Johnson Takes Reins as Penn Net Coach

Philadelphia, Pa., April 6.—Wallace Johnson, nine times among the first ten tennis players in the United States and runner-up to Maurice McLaughlin and Bill Tilden in national singles championships, will start his outdoor tennis career as a coach at the University of Pennsylvania next week.

Johnson, an intercollegiate singles and doubles champion in his undergraduate days at Pennsylvania, has issued a general call for candidates for the tennis team. They will report on the courts on River field for practice.

The new coach faces a difficult task to develop a team that will continue the record established by last year's, which won 11 matches and lost one. Three of the six men who made such an excellent record last season have been lost.

For a nucleus Johnson will have Capt. Wesley Stanger, Gabriel Lavine, and Emanuel Kardon. Several members of the freshman team of last season and a number of newcomers with some experience are expected to become candidates for the team. The season opens with Columbia here April 17.

He had 33 points in ten dual meets out of a possible 50, which he could have achieved with a perfect score of ten victories by falls.

H. M. Weinraub of Fort Wayne, Purdue's 115 pounder, was awarded a medal for being the member of the squad who showed the greatest improvement during the season.

EASTERN DERBY HOPES DIMMED BY WEST'S STRENGTH

Blue Larkspur, Van Dusen Early Favorites.

Louisville, Ky., April 6.—East is east and west is west, but Mr. Kipling didn't know his points of the compass. The twain shall meet at Churchill Downs on Saturday, May 18, in the fifty-fifth running of the Kentucky Derby, and at this time fortune seems to smile more kindly on the west.

This apparent edge is only a slight one, so slight that early racing or sensational trials may alter the complexion of things before the bugle blows for the $50,000 added event six weeks hence.

The present advantage of the west lies in the fact that the favorite and second choice in winter prognostications are representatives of this section. Blue Larkspur, which has been most esteemed from the announcement of nominations, is a product of Col. E. R. Bradley's Idle Hour farm in the bluegrass, and Clyde Van Dusen, second choice, was foaled in the same vicinity.

May Dispute Van Dusen.

There may be some dispute of the west's claim to Clyde Van Dusen, however, as his owner is Herbert P. Gardner of Amsterdam, N. Y. Mr. Gardner's stable, however, does all of its racing in the west under the management of Trainer Clyde Van Dusen and is generally looked upon as a western stable.

Both Blue Larkspur and Clyde Van Dusen are training perfectly for the race, both are in master hands and unless some unforseen mishap occurs there is little doubt that they will go to the post in tip top condition. Clyde Van Dusen has worked over the Lexington course in a manner to indicate that he is close to racing form even now.

Twink Upholds East.

Many horsemen hereabouts are inclined to look upon Twink as the solid horse of the eastern contingent. This imported colt in the Loma stable of Mrs. L. G. Kaufmann of New York was a stellar performer last year and is reported to be training in fine style.

Oak Park High Wins Third Title in Iowa Prep Games

Iowa City, Ia., April 6.—[Special.]—Oak Park, Ill., High school retained its supremacy in the University of Iowa indoor interscholastic track and field meet here tonight. The Illinois school scored 42 points for its third consecutive championship. Mason City won the Iowa state title by taking second with 29 points. Three other Illinois schools finished in the next three places, Galesburg with 22 points, Hyde Park with 21 1-3, and Deerfield-Shields of Highland Park with 21. East Division High of Milwaukee was sixth with 19¾.

Seven meet records were broken and a mark was established in the mile relay, which was run for the first time. Newton nosed out the Oak Park quartet in the fastest heat in 3:36 7-10.

Skelly, Oak Park, set a pole vault mark at 12 feet 1¼ inches. In one other field event, the broad jump, Kelly of Kirkwood, Ill., leaped 22 feet 2 inches for a new mark. In the individual track events records in the 50 yard dash, 60 yard high hurdles, and 440 yard dash were broken.

Oak Park bettered its record time of last year in winning the two-thirds mile relay in 2:12 3-10. The Galesburg two mile quartet turned in the other new mark, bettering a record set by a Galesburg team in 1927 with a time of 8:29 2-10.

Fifty-nine schools were represented in the meet, the institutions from three states having nominated more than 500 athletes. Twenty-five high schools were represented among the qualifiers in this afternoon's events.

Plans a Second 'Keepsie Course for Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., April 6.—[Special.]—Elaborate changes in the program of the Wisconsin varsity crew were announced here by Mike Murphy, new Badger crew coach.

Madison will become a second Poughkeepsie if the coach's plans for a boathouse and course and construction of observation cars by a local railroad materialize.

Murphy made a tentative agreement with railroad authorities for the construction of observation cars to run on the railroad tracks that border two miles of the new course along Lake Monona. The proposed course would make a straight sweep the length of the lake.

The change from Lake Mendota, where present training and racing is done, to Lake Monona is being considered because of the more sheltered position and the fact that it usually is available earlier in the spring.

Harrisburg High Wins Triangular Track Meet

Harrisburg, Ill., April 6.—[Special.]—Harrisburg, with 48 points, today defeated Herrin and Marion High schools in a triangular track meet. Marion and Herrin each had 41½ points. All three teams are members of the Big Seven conference of southern Illinois, which will hold its track and field meet at Harrisburg, May 4.

INFIELDERS—Thompson, Caton, Myers, Neuha, Craig and Meehan.

PITCHERS—Capt. Blakely, Long, Eads and Hurst.

CATCHERS—Burow and Rowan.

The lineup for the two contests with the Bloomington Three Eye league club Tuesday and Friday will be picked from these men. Wesleyan opens the Little Nineteen conference season with St. Viator, April 19.

IOWA U. BLANKS MONMOUTH, 11-0, IN HOME OPENER

Iowa City, Ia., April 6.—[Special.]—A first inning attack that netted eight runs combined with airtight hurling by Brown and Twogood brought the University of Iowa baseball team an 11 to 0 victory over Monmouth college in its opening home game here today.

Brown hurled the first five innings, allowing but one hit. Twogood, pitching the remainder of the contest, gave one more blow. The Hawkeyes nicked Schoberg, Monmouth ace, for eleven hits.

Oliphant Scores Winning Run on Squeeze Play.

Fayetteville, Ark., April 6.—[Special.]—Northwestern's varsity baseball team today defeated the University of Arkansas in a thrilling twelve inning game. It marked the end of the Purple's spring training trip.

Northwestern scored first in the eighth when Jacobs tripled and Schwartz squeezed him home. After two were out in the ninth, Arkansas tied the score on Crawford's triple and an overthrow by the left fielder. In the twelfth, Oliphant doubled, went to third on a bunt and scored on a squeeze play. The home team threatened but Well came to the rescue of Pyfe and succeeded in retiring the side without damage.

BUCKEYE NINE BEATS OHIO U. BY 7 TO 1 SCORE

Victory Opens Ohio State Spring Card.

Columbus, O., April 6.—Ohio State university baseball team had little trouble disposing of the Ohio university nine in their annual game here this afternoon, the Buckeyes winning by a score of 7 to 1.

Ohio university scored first in the second inning for their only marker of the game while the Buckeyes, aided by seven Ohio university errors, tallied almost at will. Al Hess, Buckeye outfielder, led the home team with three hits, a homer, two singles, and a walk in his four trips to the plate.

The Ohio State nine meets Miami on the varsity diamond Monday afternoon, while Cornell comes here next Saturday. The Ithaca team downed Ohio State last year, 7 to 4, and the Buckeyes will be out to even matters in the return engagement. Miami also held an edge of 9 to 3 last season, so that there is a double incentive for this week's efforts on the diamond.

The golf squad, champion of the western conference last year, will inaugurate an eight match schedule when it plays Kenyon next Saturday at the Scioto Country club. The Cornell tennis team will accompany the Ithaca baseball nine to Columbus for the local opener on the varsity courts adjacent to the stadium, Saturday afternoon.

Ohio Wesleyan will be the track opponent in another Saturday matinee offering. The time of the meet probably will be moved back to 1:30 to permit spectators to attend the baseball or tennis frays. This meet will give local followers of the sport their first glimpse of the 1929 Ohio track team. Every meet during the winter was an out-of-town affair for the Ohioans and this fact will tend to swell attendance in the clash with the Methodists.

The cinder squad has proved its strength in relay meets, but the coming affair offers the first indication of dual meet ability over the outdoor distances. It also gives many field event men their first taste of competition.

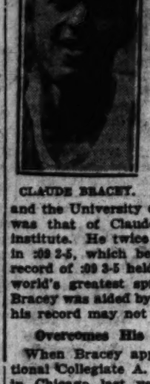
Records Expected to Tumble in Major Relays This Month

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Followers of track and field athletics expect to see world's records shattered when the various sets of university relays are held this month. Performances registered in the relays held in the south last week are indicative of what may happen in the Kansas, Drake, Ohio State and Penn relays.



CLAUDE BRACEY.

Among the outstanding performances in the relays conducted by Southern Methodist university and the University of Texas last week was that of Claude Bracey of Rice institute. He twice stepped 100 yards in :09 2-5, which bettered the world's record of :09 3-5 held by several of the world's greatest sprinters. However, Bracey was aided by a strong wind and his record may not be accepted.

Overcomes His Awkwardness.

When Bracey appeared at the National Collegiate A. A. championships in Chicago last year many coaches said he had more driving power in his legs than any sprinter they had seen. He was awkward and a trifle slow in leaving the mark. In a year's time the Rice institute flyer has learned how to start and use the form which enabled him to shatter the world's record.

"Bracey is one of the most natural sprinters I ever have seen," was the way Steve Farrell, coach of the University of Michigan track team, commented when he first saw Bracey in action. "I don't believe I ever have seen a man with more of a bounding and driving stride. He is a little clumsy in leaving his mark, but in another year you will hear from him."

Thus the prediction of Farrell, one of the greatest sprinters of the old professional days, has come true.

Will Compete at Chicago.

If Bracey does not appear in the Kansas, Drake or Ohio State relays, he will be in Chicago for the National Collegiate A. A. championship games to be held at Soldiers' field June 9. Among the flyers he will meet will be George Simpson of Ohio State and Jack Elder of Notre Dame, who will give him the supreme test.

Another athlete expected to break into the world's record breaking class at any time is Tom Warne of Northwestern. He holds the world's indoor record for vaulting off a dirt floor at 13 feet 7⅝ inches, and is given a good chance to shatter the world's indoor and outdoor record of 14 feet 1 inch made by Sabin Carr of Yale. At the recent University of Illinois indoor relays, Warne barely touched the bar at 14 feet 3 inches.

Rasmus of Ohio State has been flirting with Bud Houser's world record of 158 feet 1⅝ inches in the discus throw. In the Southern Methodist relays last Saturday, the Scarlet and Gray athlete hurled the platter 157 feet. The Ohio performer has been consistent in his last two years of competition.

The outdoor relay season will open April 20, when the Kansas relays will be held at Lawrence. The Drake and Penn relays will be held on the following Saturday at Des Moines, Ia., and Philadelphia, respectively. The Ohio games will be decided in Columbus, May 3 and 4.

Marquette U. Collects Prep Relay Prizes

Milwaukee, Wis., April 6.—First trophies for the seventh annual Marquette university national high school relay carnival to be held in the Marquette stadium Saturday, May 4, have been received, and Athletic Director Conrad M. Jennings, in charge of the relays, expects the most elaborate outlay of awards in the history of the meet.

Marquette will award gold, silver, and bronze medals to the individual members of the teams which place first, second, and third, respectively, in the relay races, and also to the boys who place in the special events such as the dashes, hurdle races, and field contests.

Milwaukee business and fraternal organizations, as usual, will cooperate with the university in offering permanent trophies, cups, shields, and plaques to the winning relay teams, and these are now being received at the gymnasium. A feature of the Marquette relays is that all the awards are permanent.

Barchard Plaque Tops Awards.

First among the trophies received was the John L. Barchard plaque, donated by a local sportsman and former Canadian athlete, which will go to the school winning the most points in the relay races of the national division. While the Marquette relays are not scored, a tabulation will be kept for the purpose of deciding the winner of the Barchard trophy award, which was instituted last year. The scoring will be done on the basis of ten points for first place, eight for second, six for third, and two for fourth.

The Marquette university interfraternity council has donated the first trophy for relay winners, while awards from Milwaukee clubs, civic organizations, and business firms are being recorded.

Keener competition is anticipated in the national championship division of the Marquette carnival since Wisconsin teams, which always abound in the local meet, will throw their full strength into that class. In the past there has been a special division for Wisconsin class A schools, and the Badger preps have been held out for competition in that, as a result of which many high school trophy chests have been enriched. This year the class A schools will compete with the national group, though the Wisconsin class B schools will meet among themselves.

Request for Entry Blanks.

The only other division is known as the private high schools' championship. The competition for academies among themselves has been abolished, and they will enter athletes in the private school division, but must meet all requirements of that group.

Special relays, as usual, will be run off by Chicago Catholic high schools and by Wisconsin Catholic high schools.

Entry blanks for the carnival are now being mailed out to the high schools which have requested them, and registrants will be enrolled until the end of this month. Two Canadian schools and teams from the Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Indiana, New Jersey, Louisiana, New York, Tennessee, Mississippi, Massachusetts, Montana and Oregon have requested entry blanks.

Wright, Sculling Champ, Defends Title in July

TORONTO, Can., April 6.—[Special.]—The Argonaut R. C. will send Joe Wright Jr. to the English Henley regatta in July to defend the diamond sculls he won last summer. Jack Guest, a crew mate of Wright, also will try for the famous diamond emblem of single sculling superiority. The Argonauts' senior eight also will compete for the Grand Challenge cup.

Wausau Beats Kenosha for Badger Title

Madison, Wis., April 6.—[Special.]—A band of fighting lumberjacks tonight brought the city of Wausau its first Wisconsin high school basketball crown, defeating Kenosha with a spirited last quarter rally, 23-17.

Beloit captured its third place game with Oconto without extending itself, 33 to 12.

The championship battle started slowly, with Wausau building up an advantage of one point by means of free throws in the first period, 5 to 4. Jackwhich of Kenosha caged the only basket of the quarter, a long loop from mid-floor.

Wausau Leads at Half.

Wausau collected its first field goal after 14 minutes of play. It was late in the second quarter and Kenosha was ahead, 8 to 7, when Ladusire dribbled down the floor for the bucket. Nurenberg followed with another and the half ended with Wausau ahead, 11 to 9.

After Kenosha took a temporary lead in the third period, this same Nurenberg dropped in a pair of sensational goals to place the lumberjacks out in front once more, 16 to 12.

Franks dribbled the length of the floor for a goal and Kleunder followed to knot the count at 16 all at the beginning of the last chapter. Ladusire came back with two free throws, however, and Radtke dropped in a basket on Laporte's long pass to make it Wausau, 20; Kenosha, 16. There were two minutes left to play.

Nurenberg Gets Another.

Hammond added a free throw for Kenosha, but Nurenberg was left alone under the hoop for a sleeper just before the game ended. Laporte's cool directing of the Wausau stalling game in the last few minutes brought the championship to his team. Wausau caged 10 out of 13 free throws, while Kenosha could sink but 7 out of 14. Kleunder scored three baskets and three free throws for high scoring honors.

With Partch and Smith leading a brilliant comeback in the second half, Columbus won the consolation championship in the afternoon by defeating Platteville, 23 to 10.

Michigan's Golf Prospects Bright; Sophomores Help

Ann Arbor, April 6.—Although the Michigan golf team loses three veterans, Coach Ray Courtright has hopes of moulding a team from sophomores and lettermen that will at least equal the second place record of the team a year ago.

Capt. John Bergelin, Big Rapids, and Arthur Ahlstrom, Worcester, Mass., are the only lettermen available for competition, but a strong group of newly eligible men will offer material of a promising nature. Bergelin played fine golf last year, alternating with Addison Connor, Detroit, captain of the team last year. Ahlstrom saw service in fourth position.

Dave Ward, Big Rapids, former Michigan State amateur champion, is the most prominent of the new golfers, and cannot be omitted from consideration as a contender for the Big Ten singles title.

Indianapolis 500 Mile Race Lures Newcomers.

Brisko will pilot a Miller Special, which has had a speeding career in the hands of Dr. W. E. Shattuck, the speeding physician, and later under the leadfooted foot of Deacon Litz, Du Bois, Pennsylvania's pink cheeked heavyweight contribution to automobile racing.

Began on Motorcycle.

For fourteen years Brisko, still a youngster, has been following in the path of speed. He began his racing pursuits on motorcycles, competing in many events against Ralph Hepburn, the champion, who came to Indianapolis and remained to become a successful pilot of the fastest racing creation here.

In 1926 the late Frank Lockhart came to Indianapolis as an exercise boy for Harry Miller's stable of Miller specials. He was hired to drive the cars over the test laps. When Peter Ivris, one of the drivers on the team, became ill and was whisked away to the hospital, Lockhart was given the assignment. He won the race.

Souders Wins in 1927.

The following year — 1927 — Bill White, youthful racing magnate, brought to Indianapolis, via Texas, George Souders, who was born at Lafayette, Ind., only an hour's fast journey from the speedway. Souders, coached before the race to make a steady drive for place, found himself well up front as the race waned. So he went out and won.

Last May when the stars flashed away as the barrier was sprung, a shy, mild voiced youngster named Louis Meyer also was a starter in a car for which loving friends had hocked a garage in Ohio three days before the race. When the 400 mile mark was reached Meyer was a real contender, and at the finish was the winner.

SCHMELING TELLS N. Y. RING BOARD TO DEPOSE BOSS

BERLIN, April 6. — (AP) — Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, hailed at the refusal of the New York State Athletic commission to recognize the edict of the German Boxing federation and suspend Arthur Bueiow, its deposed manager.

"If the American commission refuses to recognize the German verdict," Schmeling said today, "I simply won't go back to America at all."

On his first trip to the United States, Bueiow filed a contract with the New York commission to conform with American regulations. The commission announced that this document was separate from the original contract Bueiow and Schmeling made in Germany and would remain in force regardless of the German federation's action.

Schmeling recently split with Bueiow and joined forces with Joe Jacobs, American manager.

LOTT TO DEFEND NORTH-SOUTH TENNIS CROWN

Pinehurst, N. C., April 6.—(AP)—George Lott Jr., Chicago, third ranking tennis player of the United States and winner of the north and south tournament last year, must fight his way through a great field of net men in this year's tourney, which begins Monday, to retain his title.

The Chicago racquet stars has notified tournament officials that he will defend his honors. Among the challengers are John F. Hennessey of Indianapolis, Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., and Fritz Mercur of Harrisburg, Pa., youthful American stars, and Takeo Abe, member of last year's Japanese Davis cup team.

Other entries include S. Onda of Philadelphia, A. L. Bruneau, Lou Daly, Beals Wright, and F. C. Baggs, R. L. Baggs, S. Howard Voshell, and G. Carlton Shafer, metropolitan district stars.

BADGERS IMPROVE BASEBALL FIELD; TO RESOD GRID

Madison, Wis., April 6.—[Special.]—Improvement of the playing field of the Wisconsin baseball team at Camp Randall stadium was authorized at a recent meeting of the athletic council. Preparations are being made for reseeding portions of the gridiron where the grass has thinned, and Athletic Director George Little supervised the beginning of the task recently when he put several tractors to work patching up the bad spots on the field.

Aerial Plays a Cinch for This Grid Candidate

Milwaukee, Wis., April 6.—Partly because he is an experienced aviator, Pierre La Casse, Butte, Mont., Marquette university engineering student, thinks he would be good on aerial work on the football field and, therefore, is trying out for an end position in spring gridiron work at Marquette.

La Casse, who is in his first year at Marquette, reported to Coach Frank J. Murray on the first day of spring training. He did not play on the freshman squad last fall.

The young pilot has interested Marquette engineering students in a glider club, and is supervising the construction of a glider for the varsity air organization.

Play in the events of the A. B. C. tourney yesterday with two exceptions resulted in mediocre scores characteristic of the last week of competition. A 1,249 rolled by the Lansing, Mich., team of M. Eggert and A. Gutzki was the best in that event and 659 by C. Lamich of Kenosha, Wis., took first honors in the singles. Lamich's score failed by 38 pins of equaling the 697 total of H. Rowe of Detroit, who holds tenth in the standings.

Eggert and Gitzki garnered their 1,249 tally by bowling 477, 347 and 425. The former shot 231, 189 and 180 in his three efforts. Gutzki bore the brunt of the work with individual counts of 266, 167 and 245.

Judy's Score Week's Feature.

Lamich got his 659 with a 266 followed by a 186 and 207.

Last week's play was featured by Edward Judy's 725 in the singles, which was good for first place. It surpassed by two pins the totals that place Eddie Krems and Jeff Davis, both of Chicago, in the honor berth.

The doubles standings remained unchanged, with the 1,353 of W. Kliecs and P. Butler of Chicago leading score. They have a good chance of resting in that position at the conclusion of play on Tuesday.

The outstanding change in the all events was the entry into first place by Otto Stein of St. Louis with a total of 1,974.

Only Two Team Changes.

The five man rankings saw only two changes last week. A 3,063 by Hendy's Recreation of Menasha, Wis., took seventh place, and 2,998 of George Spring Guth's five of Chicago placed them tenth. Incidentally this score is the only one below the 3,000 mark.

The eight o'clock five man squad last night failed to place a team among the first ten leaders. Not an outfit bowled 2,900 or better. A 2,863 by the Badger Oils of Milwaukee, embracing games of 933, 958 and 972, copped high scoring honors for that particular group. The highly touted W. B. Keshay's No. 1 team of Minneapolis rolled 2,841. A 891, its last effort pulled down the Minnesotans after two first games of 994 and 956 had placed them in a position to top the 2,900 mark.

O. Ostertag of Hendy's Recreation five of Menasha, Wis., was posted in tenth place in the all event standing yesterday with a total of 1,909. He was the only entrant competing in the minor events to roll in among the leaders. He shot 604 in the two man and 648 in the singles. He had rolled 657 in the five man competition Friday night.

COST OF ILLINOIS '29 CAGE SEASON NEAR 9 MILLIONS

1,000 Teams Engaged in Cage Sport.

Illinois paid nearly $8,000,000 for its 1928-'29 basketball enjoyment, and it is estimated the cage game now leads all sports in the number of spectators and players. Each year since the introduction of basketball 20 years ago the growth has been by leaps and bounds, and has reached tremendous proportions, as illustrated by the report of the district, sectional and state tournaments, just concluded by the State High School Athletic association.

There are approximately 750 prep teams, 50 college fives, and 200 independent quintets, or about 1,000 in all. If they averaged 20 games each with an attendance of 500 per game, this would show a total of 10,000,000 spectators. The charge for admission varies, but it is assumed that the total receipts were nearly $4,000,000. The district tournaments, 55 in all, probably drew $150,000. The gate at the Aurora tournament reached $3,636, while Freeport drew $2,470. The eight sectional tournaments and the state event at Urbana brought the total close to $200,000.

While there is no means of accurately determining the total cost for transportation, meals, lodging, equipment, training and other expenses of teams, it probably is fully up to that of the receipts at the games. If the cost of maintaining the gymnasiums aggregates $1,000,000, the grand total of $9,000,000 probably is not far from the annual cost of the cage pastime in Illinois.

Doubtless the gymnasiums devoted to the sport cost as much more, while the salary of coaches also aggregates a large sum. While statistics as to the number of grade schools with basketball teams are somewhat indefinite, it is safe to assume that not less than 50,000 boys and girls compose the many thousand teams that devote on the average three months of the year to this sport.

OHIO STATE, PITT ALUMNI OUTLINE GRID PROGRAM

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 6.—A joint committee of University of Pittsburgh and Ohio State university alumni is working out an elaborate program of entertainment for Ohio visitors who come here for the Pitt-Ohio State football game Nov. 2. At a recent meeting of the committee plans for a two day program, Friday, Nov. 1, and Saturday, Nov. 2, were outlined.

Pittsburgh is looking forward to the Ohio State game as the biggest football attraction ever staged in this city. Although no solicitation has been made for ticket orders, thousands of seats already have been sold for the game. The permanent seating capacity of the stadium here is approximately 65,000, but arrangements will be made for additional temporary seats to increase the capacity to 75,000.

Vance Trap Shooters Will Open Season Next Sunday

Durand, Ill., April 6.—[Special.]—The Vance Trap Shooters' League of Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin will open the season here next Sunday. There will be shoots twice a month until September. Twelve clubs are expected to compete at each shoot.

Beloit's Track Prospects Best in Many Years

Beloit, Wis., April 6.—Track prospects at Beloit college are the best in several seasons, and Coach Fred Schildhauer is looking forward to a strong showing in the six contests scheduled.

Beloit's schedule is:

April 26, Carroll here; May 4, triangular meet with Lake Forest, North Central at Beloit; May 11, Lawrence at Appleton; May 18, Milwaukee Normal at Milwaukee; May 25, state meet at Beloit. Lawrence Carroll, Ripon and Beloit competing; May 31, Midwest conference at Carleton.

Six letter men are on the squad. Capt. Charles Donovan will enter the hurdles and dashes; Pete Allen, dashes; Ken William, 100 and 200 yard dashes; Whitey Hobart, the half mile and mile events; Al Galinsky, the mile and two mile runs, and Leo Knick in the weight events.

In addition there are 25 men working out, many of them star freshmen of last year who should win places and letters.

They got behind the wheel . . got the facts . . and bought BUICKS!

"I have owned fifteen Buicks since 1910—but have never driven any Buick or any other car that compared with this new Buick in power, smoothness and reliability."

Mr. J. M., San Angelo, Texas.
(name upon request)

Among the scores of thousands of men and women who purchase Buicks year after year . . . who know Buick through and through and therefore never think of buying any other automobile . . . there is every bit as much enthusiasm over the performance of this newest Buick as among the thousands who are buying Buicks for the first time!

For instance, the owner quoted here goes on to say: "The way the new Buick climbs the steepest hills and passes other cars is simply marvelous." And this owner of fifteen Buicks adds significantly, "We have not had a minute's trouble with the car, which is typical of Buick!"

One fact is clear—one fact is as plain as noonday: This masterly Buick provides a revolutionary order of performance—embodies elements of power, getaway, swiftness, smoothness and reliability infinitely superior to anything that has gone before.

Prove this to your own satisfaction! Drive a Buick! See for yourself why more than twice as many people purchase Buicks as any other automobile priced above $1200. Then you'll know that you should have a Buick, too!

HORTON SMITH SKYROCKETS TO TOP OF GOLFDOM

Brilliant Winter Campaign Climaxes Rise.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

HORTON SMITH.

Recognized only as one of the many fine young golfers last summer, in the six short months of the winter golf season Horton Smith has risen to the heights of golf to rank along with Hagen, Farrell, Armour and the other stars of the game. This tall lad, lean and lithe as a willow sapling, won't be 21 years old until May 22.

Smith, who is not related to the brothers, Willie, Alex and Macdonald, who have made the surname famed in golf, hung up a winner record unequaled even by Bobby Cruickshank's great series of victories two years ago, or Bill Mehlhorn's great burst and "world's record" of 271. Incidentally, Horton Smith enriched himself something more than $20,000 in prize money.

In nineteen tournaments in the winter season, young Smith won seven, was second four times, third three times and fourth twice. He finished out of the money only once, and only twice has he taken more than 300 strokes for the 72 holes. His average is about even 4's.

Begins Climb at P. G. A.

It takes fine golf to win any big money tournament, but it takes the steadiest kind of fine golf to hang up a record like Smith's. It began with his reaching the semi-finals of the national professional golf championship, in which he lost to Walter Hagen. Since then he has blazed a wide swath through the money tournaments, which resulted in two honors.

First, he was chosen as a member of the Ryder cup team, and, second, signed a contract to tour the country with Walter Hagen on their return from England, the Ryder cup matches, the British and German open championships. Bob Harlow, Hagen's manager, isn't overlooking any bets on keeping up Sir Walter's record as a drawing card, even when he has to sign a lad who gives evidences of rivaling it.

His Average Tops Pros.

Smith, who claims Joplin, Mo., as home in that he's been professional at a country club there, was born in Springfield, Mo., and educated at the Teachers' college in that town. He entered competitive golf in 1924 when he reached the semi-finals of the western junior championship. The next year he left college to become a golf professional. He qualified for the national open of 1927, but got no further.

Last year at Olympia Fields he finished in a tie for 26th, with 306. It wasn't until the P. G. A. that he began to blossom out as a star. Since then in 64 rounds of golf in major winter tournaments he has averaged 72 3-10, leading all the nation's pro's who have played more than 24 rounds. Those figures do not include the Catalina island tournament, which Smith won with a total of 245 for the 72 holes over the short course.

Henry Cotton, British professional, who played the winter circuit, said, "Horton Smith is the greatest 20 year old golfer the world ever has known."

That takes in a lot of territory as Bob Jones qualified for a national amteur at 14, was runner-up when 17, tied for second in the national open when 20, and won the open the next year. There can be a lot of arguments on both sides, and there is no need of inserting them here, but it is true that competition was less strong than it is now.

MISSOURI PROFITS FROM CAGE.

University of Missouri cleared $2,028.39 during the basketball season.

BLACK HAWK

STUTZ

turns the spotlight on performance-with-safety by BLACKHAWK

PRICE REDUCTIONS

mounting to $300

Now the motoring public is doing what great throngs of visitors did at the Automobile Shows.

They're discovering Blackhawk! And they're asking themselves, "Do I dare to buy any car which lacks these safety features?"

Noback—control on hills—the outstanding safety development of the year. Exclusively a Stutz and Blackhawk feature—which automatically prevents unintentional back-rolling without use of brakes—and leaves your feet free to operate the clutch pedal and accelerator.

Low-weighted safety, due to the lowest center of gravity in any American car. The Blackhawk floor line is 20% lower than that of the conventional car.

Side-bumper steel running boards—integral with the strongest frame in any American car.*

Worm-gear drive, which makes Blackhawk safety possible, by permitting a lower center of gravity. Without question, the automobile industry will concede the superiority of this type of drive. On high speed passenger buses, it is delivering hundreds of thousands of quiet, trouble-free miles.

Safety Glass—used by Stutz for years—is supplied in the Blackhawk "all around," as standard equipment, of course.

Transmission with four forward speeds—a quiet "third" for brilliant acceleration on hills and all city driving—a quiet "fourth" for the open road.

The strongest brakes on any car* put the Blackhawk always under safe control.

Weymann bodies—used on such distinguished European cars as Hispano-Suiza, Rolls Royce and Sunbeam—and standard with Stutz for years—at prices lower than any American car can offer them. (See prices quoted.)

WISCONSIN NINE LEAVES TUESDAY ON ANNUAL TRIP

Ten Games Scheduled for Southern Jaunt.

Madison, Wis., April 6.—[Special.]—The Wisconsin baseball squad will start its annual southern training trip Tuesday. Coach Guy Lowman has lined up ten games with the Dixie teams

BO CUISINIER.

The Badgers enjoyed a few days of outdoor practice the last week in March, but were driven inside the gym annex last Monday when they found a coating of snow on Camp Randall, which was anything but the April fool variety.

Experiments with the batting order will have to await the southern trip, Lowman said today. One of the few men certain of a place in the lineup is Bo Cuisinier, the chunky left fielder, who made an ideal leadoff man last season. Capt. Art Mansfield, a .440 batter last year, probably will occupy the cleanup berth.

Ellerman at Second Base.

Either sixteen or seventeen men will make the trip. Mansfield is a fixture at first base, and the same can be said of Harry Ellerman, the Chicago veteran, who plays second. Oswald Knechtges, a Madison boy, appears to have distanced the shortstopping candidates, while Carl Matthusen, Chicago midget, is back for another season at third.

Cuisinier is entrenched in left field. Elgin Hall and Tury Oman, a pair of sophomores, are battling for the center field job. Lawrence Forster, River Forest, Ill., and Ed Mittermeyer, Boyd, Wis., are the best of the right fielders.

A pair of Chicago right handers are Lowman's leading pitchers. Ted Thelander has been a regular for two seasons, and Maurice Farber was the outstanding member of the freshman corps last spring. Ray Ellerman, basketball guard and brother of Harry; Charles Hughes, and Bob Lauson are other flingers who will make the trip.

Three Good Catchers.

Johnny Doyle, another basketball man; Charles Evans of Oklahoma City; and Les De Haven, Fort Wayne, Ind., top the catchers. The training schedule follows:

April 10-11—Butler at Indianapolis.
April 12-13—Vanderbilt at Nashville.
April 15—Washington at St. Louis.
April 16-17—Missouri at Columbia.
April 18—St. Marys at St. Marys, Kas.
April 19-20—Kansas Aggies at Manhattan.

AWARD ALLERTON LETTERS.

Allerton, Ill., April 6.—[Special.]—William Acton of Danville was the principal speaker at the annual banquet this week in honor of the basketball team of the Allerton High school. Letters were awarded by Coach Couts to Smith, Biddle, Read, Hardyman, Turpin, Hanner, and Pilch.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Jack O'Connell, 1 East Erie street, was awarded $5.

The Question.

What recruits do you think will make good with the Cubs and White Sox?

The Answers.

Jack Brown, 1365 West Chicago avenue, printer—For the Cubs I would say Grace, the backstop candidate, has the best chance to make good. He has been hitting the ball hard during the spring season and appears to be of major league caliber. I'm not so well informed about the Sox players, so I won't venture a guess.

Arthur Becker, 3536 West 12th place, advertising — Judging by the reports from the spring battle fronts, I'd say McKain of the Sox and Lautenbacher of the Cubs are likely to survive the process of elimination. Both have been pitching good ball this spring. However, it is difficult to make a snap decision in appraising the various rookies.

A. K. Mueller, 7721 Sheridan road, mechanical engineer—That's pretty hard to answer, for there seem to be several players of both teams who are likely to make good. Grace of the Cubs, it seems, belongs in major league company. Of course, he's yet to get his big test. I'm not exactly a Sox fan, so I'll not make a guess about their players.

J. V. Van Buskirk, 2300 South Western avenue, sales manager—I'm interested in sports, but I can't name the likely looking recruits offhand. Next time you have any questions to ask warn me and then probably I'll be prepared to answer them. You might think I don't know baseball, but I assure you I always see plenty of games and plan to see more this season.

Frank Conte, 7313 Dobson avenue, messenger — I think Grace, who has been doing a lot of catching for the Cubs, will be one of the rookies to stick. Then there are Horne and Lautenbacher to strengthen the Cubs' pitching staff. Of the Sox players Watwood and Kerr seem to be the best men trying for positions.

MICHIGAN SQUAD OF 15 PLAYERS INVADES SOUTH

Seven Games Carded with Four Schools.

Ann Arbor, April 6.—Fifteen members of the University of Michigan baseball team left yesterday on the annual southern trip for a series of seven games with four southern schools.

The following men, in addition to Coach Ray L. Fisher and Manager Melvin Deo, made the trip: Gerson Reichman, New York; Ernest McCoy, Detroit; Joe Truskowski, Detroit; L. A. Kubicek, Chicago; Harold G. Myron, Highland Park; Louis Weintraub, Chicago; Raymond G. Nebelung, Adrian; Donald Corriden, Indianapolis; Harvey Straub, Toledo, O.; George W. Slagle, Dayton, O.; William McAfee, Chicago; Fred Asbeck, Lakewood, O.; Richard W. Montague, South Bend, Ind.; Augustus Kiegler, Honesdale, Pa.; William Campton, La Porte, Ind.

Last Year's Stars Back.

The team largely is composed of the men who helped to win the conference baseball title a year ago. McAfee and Asbeck again will do most of the pitching. Reichman again will serve as regular catcher, although Coach Fisher has Truskowski, football captain elect, who is a capable backstop. Truskowski is playing his first year of baseball at Michigan, but he probably will be a regular before the end of the season because of his hitting ability.

In the infield Weintraub will begin his third season at third base. Kubicek, a veteran, will play shortstop. He was a regular two years ago, but did not play last year. Myron will play second base. He, the first baseman and the right fielder are the only regulars who were not letter winners a year ago. McCoy, will play first base, filling the place vacated by Bennie Oosterbaan.

How Outfield Shapes Up.

The outfield will be composed of Capt. Corriden in left field; Nebelung, center; and perhaps Straub, right field. The team will return here the morning of April 15 in time for the opening of the university.

ILLINOIS SCHOOL FOR DEAF ELECTS THREE CAPTAINS

Jacksonville, Ill., April 6.—[Special.]—Lowell Lowry, star forward of the Jacksonville School for the Deaf basketball team, was elected captain of the 1930 squad at a meeting of the athletes this week. At the same time George Walnoha was chosen leader of the baseball team and George Miki of the track team.

The latter excels in the javelin throw. He won third honors in the district meet last year. George Perry is to be captain of the grid team next fall. Coach Burns presided at the elections.

Of 27 men left on the varsity baseball squad, all except three are Ohioans. Only two southpaws, Marshall Miller, Bedford, and Charles McLaughlin, East Orange, N. J., both pitchers, are on the team. All of the others except two also bat right handed.

Three Eye League Teams to Get First Tests Today

Bloomington, Ill., April 6.—[Special.]—Training of Three-Eye league clubs has progressed sufficiently to permit exhibition games. Nearly all of the clubs have booked contests for tomorrow and during the week. The major league clubs are working their way north and several will stop off at Three-Eye parks preliminary to the opening of the big league season.

The Indianapolis club, which has been in training at Sarasota, Fla., is booked for games at Paducah, Ky., and Springfield, Ill., tomorrow. The Quincy players are training at Paducah, and in addition to playing Indianapolis will meet the House of David nine both in the Kentucky city and at Quincy. It is planned to wind up the training season at Paducah April 13. Several players from the Indianapolis club are to be left with Quincy.

St. Paul to Play Solons.

Springfield has been in training all week and Manager Whitcraft hopes to make a good showing against the visiting aggregations. St. Paul has been booked for Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. The St. Louis Cardinals will play at Springfield Thursday, while the Chicago White Sox will be entertained Monday, April 15. Later Springfield will play Decatur, two games being scheduled on the grounds of each club.

Bloomington will open its exhibition season tomorrow with a team from Clinton. Several games will be played next week with the Illinois Wesleyan university. Next Saturday and Sunday Peoria will be in Bloomington, while on the following week teams from Champaign and the House of David also will meet the Bloomers. Manager Harkins will take his squad to Peoria April 20 and 21 for a return engagement with the Tractors.

Toronto Plays Hubs.

Down in Clarksville, Tenn., the Evansville recruits are working out under Manager Bob Coleman. Toronto will stop off for a game with the Hubs tomorrow and during the coming week, Fort Smith, also in training at that place, will play Evansville. The latter club then returns home and will meet Terre Haute in Terre Haute April 14 and at Evansville April 21.

The St. Louis Cardinals are due in Danville Wednesday. Danville and Decatur opened their pre-league series today at Decatur, the Commies winning, 13 to 6. They also will play tomorrow. The House of David team is due April 17, while on April 20, 21, and 22, Dayton will play a series with the Vets.

Terre Haute has booked Dayton of the Central league for April 16 and 17, while Canton of the same circuit will meet the Tots April 19 and 20.

After the various exhibition games most of the Three Eye pilots will commence reducing their squads. Each will carry about 20 players until the middle of May, when a further reduction must be made. The first Three Eye league games will be played on April 25.

GRAHAM MEETS KID CHOCOLATE IN N. Y. FRIDAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 6.—Jess McMahon, who resigned as matchmaker of Madison Square Garden to promote bouts on his own hook, will open the new New York Coliseum in the Bronx next Friday night with one of the best bantamweight attractions of the year, a fifteen rounder between Kid Chocolate, the Cuban cannonball, and Bushy Graham of Utica, who is virtually the uncrowned champion of that division.

McMahon intends to promote fights at the uptown arena on a Broadway scale, but with Bronx prices prevailing. His plant, formerly the exposition hall of the sesquicentennial exposition in Philadelphia, carted here piece by piece, has a seating capacity of 18,500. If the place is filled, Chocolate and Graham will battle for a percentage of a $50,000 gate.

While the New York state athletic commission refused to dignify the bout with a championship label, the winner will be looked upon generally as the real bantam champion. The class has been without a titleholder since Charley Phil Rosenberg gave up his toga to fight in a heavier division.

IOWA STATE CUTS BASEBALL SQUAD TO 29 PLAYERS

First Game Is Scheduled with Drake April 20.

Ames, Ia., April 6.—Twenty-nine men make up the Iowa State college baseball squad, and this number probably will be carried throughout the season, according to announcement made by T. N. Metcalf, director of athletics, today. The list is the result of the final cut in the squad made early this week.

The roster shows an abundance of mound material with no real stars in the lot. The batting of the squad has been mediocre so far this season.

The first game of the season will be played with Drake university at Iowa State, April 20. This will be the first time Bulldog and Cyclone baseball nines have met.

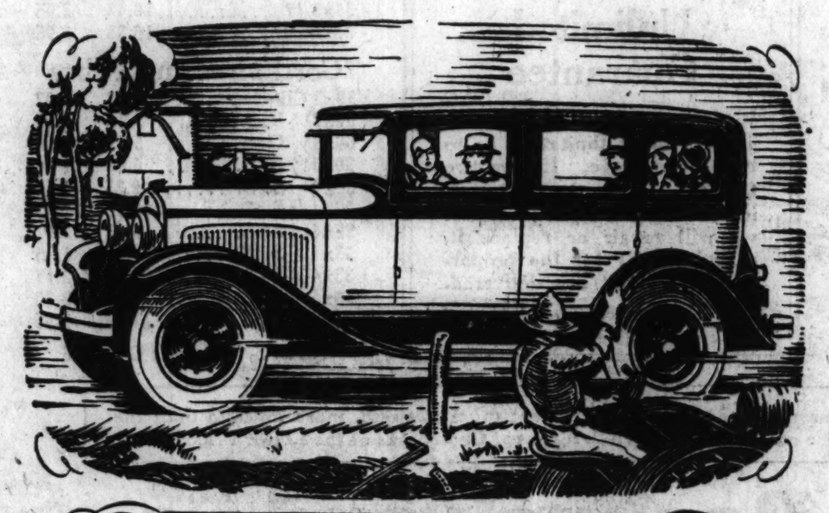
CHRYSLER MOTORS PRODUCT

Quality is the Keynote of what People Say about Plymouth

PLYMOUTH
AMERIGA'S LOWEST-PRICED FULL-SIZE CAR

FULL SIZE



THE SMART FULL-SIZE FOUR-DOOR SEDAN, $695

WHEN people discuss Plymouth, quality is the keynote of their conversation.

They say most complimentary things about its Chrysler smartness, its charm, its slender-profile radiator, its graceful "air-wing" fenders, its arched windows, its chromium-plate bowl-type lamps.

They comment highly on Plymouth's full-size dimensions, its richness and spaciousness, its wide, deep seats, its exceptional leg-room.

PLYMOUTH—product of Chrysler engineering and craftsmanship—has been so named because its endurance and strength, ruggedness and freedom from limitations so accurately typify that Pilgrim band who were among the first American Colonists.

They refer glowingly to the powerful performance of Plymouth's 45 h. p. engine, of Chrysler "Silver-Dome" principle—its speed, its pick-up, its ability on hills, its smoothness, its quietness.

They speak of Plymouth's safety—of its full-size Chrysler weatherproof internal expanding 4-wheel hydraulic brakes, its rugged full-size chassis, springs and axles. They praise Plymouth's amazing economy in fuel, oil and upkeep.

After all, it is only natural that people should talk more about Plymouth's fine qualities than they do about its low price—for the Chrysler-built Plymouth is, first and last, a motor car of intrinsic quality and value.

The Only Speed Truck with Two Complete Power Ranges

This Six-Speed Special Truck will out-pull—out-climb—out-perform any truck in its class under full load

This new 1-ton truck—the International Six-Speed Special—has already rolled up a remarkable reputation, not only in this country but also in Canada and foreign lands.

Sales have been breaking records from the first and the performance of the truck has been setting new records in every kind of hard hauling.

No other truck built is like the Six-Speed Special. It has a 2-speed axle, as indicated in the illustration, giving it six speeds forward and two reverse—making two complete power ranges. A light shift of the auxiliary lever throws from one range to the other instantly. And there you are—as the going demands—fleet speed for the straightaway or ten times the pulling power for capacity loads in the toughest going.

There are four-wheel brakes to balance the speed with safety; every chassis member is designed and built to stand the strain of the tremendous tractive power, and the engine itself demonstrates all-around operating economy.

Come in and see this unusual truck—drive it—try it on your job. And you'll like the low price as well as the truck.

The International line also includes the Special Delivery for loads up to ¼-ton; 4 and 6-cylinder Speed Trucks of 1¼, 1½ and 2-ton sizes; Heavy-Duty Trucks ranging from 2½-ton to 5-ton sizes; Motor Coaches, and McCormick-Deering Industrial Tractors. Ten Reasons why 300,000 careful buyers have chosen the New Chevrolet Six since January 1st

Ever since the date of its introduction, the new Chevrolet Six has swept triumphantly on to greater and greater heights of popularity. Value for value and price for price—buyers have compared it with other cars in the low-price field. And the result has been an overwhelming public preference—over 300,000 buyers since January 1st. And everywhere the enthusiasm is constantly increasing—for the new Chevrolet Six combines, as does no other car in the world, those ten great fundamental factors which careful buyers are now demanding in the cars they buy.

6-Cylinder Smoothness

Due to the finer inherent balance of its six-cylinder valve-in-head motor, the new Chevrolet provides that smooth, quiet, flexible performance which is the distinguishing characteristic of the truly fine automobile. At every speed, the power is delivered easily, freely and without annoying vibration. You can ride and drive for hours without annoying rumble or noise fatigue—every mile a delight for both driver and passengers.

6-Cylinder Getaway

And in sheer brilliance of performance, as well as in smoothness and quietness of operation, the new Chevrolet Six is a revelation. An automatic acceleration pump results in remarkably fast acceleration whenever the accelerator is suddenly depressed. And a new high-compression, non-detonating cylinder head eliminates every trace of "lugging"—even when you have occasion to accelerate swiftly in high gear.

6-Cylinder Speed

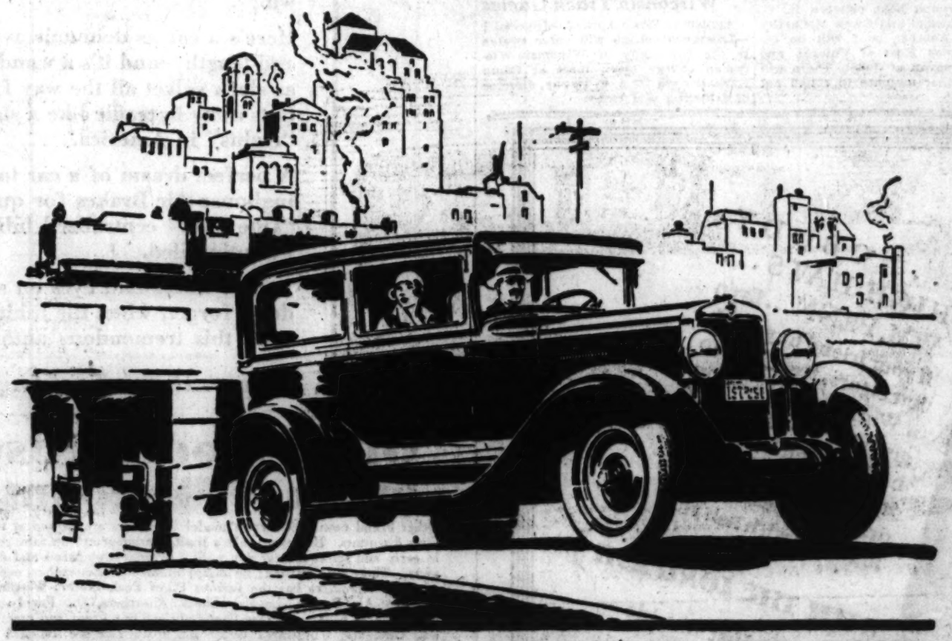
Naturally, Chevrolet's powerful six-cylinder valve-in-head motor might be expected to provide speed in abundance. But even more important than the speed of the new Chevrolet Six is the smooth, quiet, restful comfort you experience at every point on the speedometer. You can open the throttle wide with a feeling of complete security—and you come to the end of a full day's drive entirely free from the weariness caused by engine noise and body rumble.

6-Cylinder Power

The great reserve power of the new Chevrolet Six is a constant delight. The steepest hills are taken with ease. Heavy roads are negotiated without the necessity for frequent gear-shifting. And even at the higher speeds, there is always that feeling of confidence which comes from the knowledge that additional power is at hand . . . instantly available for whatever need may arise.

Modern Safety Features

The new Chevrolet Six is equipped with every modern safety and convenience feature—typified by a full ball bearing steering mechanism, non-locking 4-wheel brakes with separate emergency brake, foot controlled adjustable two-beam headlights, automatic fuel pump, theft-proof Electrolock, electric motor temperature indicator, and Fisher VV windshield and adjustable driver's seat in all closed models. As a result, it is one of the easiest and safest cars in the world to handle.



A SIX IN THE PRICE RANGE OF THE FOUR

Better Than 20 Miles Per Gallon

The marvelous performance of the Chevrolet Six would be considered exceptional in any automobile. But in the new Chevrolet it is nothing short of sensational—for here it is combined with operating economy of better than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline. As a result, those who can afford to own any automobile can afford to own and operate a Chevrolet Six!

Exceptional Riding Comfort

Another vital factor that has influenced hundreds of thousands in their selection of the new Chevrolet Six is its exceptional riding comfort. Built on a wheelbase of 107 inches . . . offering the deep-cushioned luxury of bodies by Fisher . . . and with the entire upper structure cradled on four long semi-elliptic shock absorber springs—it travels the roughest highways with amazing comfort. And its balance on turns and curves is equally exceptional—for the rigid frame and the long springs reduce sidesway to the minimum.

Beautiful Fisher Bodies

The marvelous bodies on the Chevrolet Six reveal, as never before, the matchless artistry that has made the Fisher name renowned throughout the world for excellence in coachcraft. Longer, lower and roomier . . . finished in attractive, long-lasting colors . . . and upholstered in rich deep-tufted fabrics that give to the interiors an air of custom elegance—they introduce into the low-price field an entirely new measure of style and distinction.

Proved Dependability

Before the new Chevrolet Six was presented to the public, it had been tested for more than a million miles on the roads of the General Motors Proving Ground. Never did a new motor car go into the hands of its owners more thoroughly proved in every detail. And now, reports of its performance on the highways of the nation pay glowing tribute to its endurance and dependability.

Amazingly Low Prices

Many people do not realize that this marvelous new six-cylinder Chevrolet is actually offered in the price range of the four. Compare total delivered prices as well as factory prices when determining automobile values. You will find Chevrolet delivered prices include the lowest handling and financing charges available.

HUDSON RIVER OUTBOARD RACE MAY DRAW 200

Albany-New York Speed Test April 20.

New York, April 6.—Officials of the New York Outboard association, under whose auspices the Albany-New York marathon will be run April 20, state that present indications point toward an entry list of 200 drivers for the 136 mile race down the Hudson. Applications have been pouring in from drivers in all parts of the country.

Because of the high speeds which the winners probably will record, and due to the large number of entries who must be started from Albany in groups of approximately 25 each, it is planned to use an airplane to carry the officials from Albany to the finish line at 152d street and the Hudson river.

Will Beat Boats to New York.

By using an amphibion it will be possible for the starter and timers to take off from the same starting point used by the boats and land at the Colonial Yacht club an hour before the fastest boat will have been able to reach New York.

Massachusetts, the home of the hard driving trio composed of J. E. Wilkinson and Al Buffington of Fall River and Ross Maddocks of New York, will send its best. Albany will submit Charles P. Stevens Jr. New York will be represented by J. E. Smith, winner of the Class C races at Worcester last Memorial day, and Kirk Ames, near-winner of the first prize in the marathon of last year.

Eldridge Named Starter.

Long Island will be represented by the Hauptner twins of City Island, Miss Helen Hentschel of Whitestone Landing and Earle Widegren of Locust Valley, winner of the $500 prize a year ago.

William M. Eldridge, one of the most famous motor boat starters in this country, will set the drivers off on the 136 mile grind. Good weather or bad, John W. Griffin, chairman of the race, says the drivers must start on schedule.

MICHIGAN HOLDS STRONG HAND FOR TENNIS SEASON

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 6.—Michigan's tennis team has a majority of last year's first string performers available, along with a number of promising new men.

Horace Barton, Sioux Falls, S. D., twice Wolverine captain, leads the list of veteran performers. In his first year of competition Barton, paired with King Moore, Ann Armor, won the Big Ten doubles crown and played a prominent part in bringing the conference team honors to Ann Arbor.

In addition to Moore and Barton, Kenneth Schaefer, Youngstown, O., another two year veteran, is available. Bacon, virtually a regular last year, will make a strong bid for a position on the team this year, as will Mareh and Lamoree, A. M. A. winners of last year.

The other candidates include Spencer, Beal, Hammer, Dusenbury, Nelson, Nessen, Kramer, Richelson, and Swanson.

W. AND J. COLLEGE IN QUEST OF NEW BASKET COACH

Washington, Pa., April 6.—[Special.]—Washington and Jefferson college's quest for a basketball coach to succeed Andy Kerr, who will confine his efforts to football, has caused speculation as to the probable selection to be made by the athletic authorities. The presidents have lost basketball prestige of former years, the recent season having been the most disastrous since the inauguration of the sport.

Washington and Jefferson's next basketball coach faces a tremendous task, for he will have to rebuild the varsity team. The seven men who were the "first string" will be graduated in June. Two or three substitutes remain, but none is regarded as varsity calibre. The freshman team was above the average, and it is apparent the Presidents must depend upon these recruits next season.

Two U. of Iowa Captains from the Same Town

Iowa City, Ia., April 6.—[Special.]—Joe Crookham of Oskaloosa, recently elected captain of the 1930 University of Iowa swimming team, has been a consistent point scorer in the 50 and 100 yard free style races for the last two years. He teamed with Boyd Liddle, sophomore flash, in sweeping firsts and seconds in these races in several dual meets. He also was a member of the relay teams in a few of the meets.

Crookham is the second Oskaloosa athlete to be honored by a captaincy. Virgil David, elected captain of the basketball team, also hails from that city.

CORONATION OF LIBERTY

Miss Helen Filkey, 21 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Halleck Filkey, 6436 North Damen avenue, track athlete, who holds practically all women's hurdles records, was crowned "Miss Liberty" last night at the Stevens hotel at the fourth annual ball of Woodrow Wilson chapter, No. 4, of the Disabled Veterans of the World War.

Surrounded by a military guard and escorted by a wounded veteran, Miss Filkey led the grand march, participated in by 200 guests costumed in military garb of various countries. She was crowned by John L. Ashford.

Besides dancing, a program which included J. Giuseppe Pellego, tenor, Italian cavalier, who served in the world war, was presented.

Fishing Fever Grips Anglers; Get Your Rods, Becker Urges

BY BOB BECKER.

April is the month during which fishermen should dig into their storerooms, haul out rods and reels and then get busy on the job of repairing, reconditioning, and revamping their "weapons," for the fishing season will open in Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota.

Illinois even is quicker on the trigger than these states, because the law gives little protection to any game fish except the bass. Therefore, weather conditions being right, Illinois anglers will be able to snag a few pickerel, crappies, etc., this month.

The savage, destructive pickerel, which also goes by the more high hat name of northern pike, has decreased in numbers in Illinois in the last 25 or 30 years. In the northern states, it still is plentiful, and the same holds true for many parts of Canada.

Canada Dislikes Pickerel.

The voracity of this species, and its inferior quality as food have brought about attempts to kill it off in some parts of Canada. We have fished lakes in Ontario, where the pickerel was considered a nuisance and a menace, and no one would think of bringing in a specimen on his fish string. Perhaps a few hundred miles away this same fish would be rated high as a game fish.

In our latitude the pickerel spawns in March. One female may deposit as many as 100,000 eggs. The pickerel being such an early spawner, April fishermen during a normal year are not apt to catch adult fish until eggs are laid and hatched.

Light Rod Affords Fun.

When taken on a lightweight rod, the pickerel affords real sport. In the north we have casted in weed beds and around snags for the big fellows weighing 12 to 20 pounds, and using a light bass rod, it was great sport.

In Illinois waters, the average pickerel, while not large, will give many early season anglers suffering from the fishing fever a good run for their money.

IOWA GRADUATE STUDENT GETS COACHING JOB

Iowa City, Ia., April 6.—[Special.]—Joe D. Alexander of Greenville, Tex., University of Iowa graduate physical education student, has received his appointment as director of physical education and coach of football and baseball at Lincoln Memorial university, Harrogate, Tenn. He will take up his duties Aug. 15.

Besides his administrative and coaching duties, Alexander will serve as professor of physical education. He will receive his master of arts degree in physical education here in June.

BARNEY ROSS TO BOX ON JOLIET PROGRAM FRIDAY

Joliet, Ill., April 6.—[Special.]—The talent has been lined up for the boxing show to take place next Friday under the auspices of the De La Salle Athletic club and with Packy McFarland as manager. The headliner will be a ten round bout between K. O. Wills of Chicago and Owen McCarthy of Joliet. Another bout will be between Barney Ross of Chicago and Arthur Donovan of Joliet. There will be three other matches to round out the bill.

COACHES SPEED DRILL OF LITTLE 19 BALL TEAMS

Track Also Takes Place in Spotlight.

Bloomington, Ill., April 6.—[Special.]—With the approach of the baseball and track seasons, coaches of the Illinois Intercollegiate Athletic association have been hard at work whipping their charges into condition. Progress was reported in the various camps during the week.

Four baseball games are scheduled next week, and all the schools swing into action the following week. Carbondale and Charleston clash in a dual track meet at Charleston Thursday, and others are booked for the succeeding week.

Preliminary to the conference season, Coach Leo Johnson of Millikin moved his baseball squad to St. Louis for week-end games with Concordia college. Millikin's first conference game will be played at Decatur with Lincoln Friday. Hankins and Gidcomb are expected to take care of most of the pitching with Terro behind the bat. The infield will be selected from Ingles, Gaines, Corbett, Caywood, and Hankins, while the outfield probably will be made up of Kirke, Resh, and Habekost.

Bradley to Play Lincoln.

Bradley opens the baseball season Tuesday with Lincoln at Bradley. There are seven letter men and promising freshmen material to fill the vacancies. Metzger is expected to do the bulk of the pitching with Batorson and Rice in reserve. The Bradley squad will move to Champaign Wednesday to play the University of Illinois, while Bradley reserves will play the second team there Saturday.

Monmouth went to Iowa City to open the baseball season there, but will not meet a conference team until Macomb furnishes the opposition at Monmouth April 16. Coach Van Antwerp is forced to experiment with untried material. The team appears to be strong in the field, but rather light with the bat.

Aims to Develop Catcher.

Coach Almquist of Augustana is trying to develop a catcher who can handle the delivery of the speedy Mason and Peterson, two promising freshmen. Johnson and Goranson also are available for mound duty. The outfield has a dozen aspirants, and it will be difficult to make a selection. The first game for the Norsemen is April 16 with Macomb.

Coach Horton of the Illinois State Normal baseball team is endeavoring to develop pitchers. The team seems to be well protected otherwise. Forty men are out for the team, and the permanent selections will be made before the opening game with Lincoln April 16.

Drouet to Lead Badger Crew in Hudson Regatta

Madison, Wis., April 6.—Warren Drouet, a junior from Arlington, Mass., will captain the Wisconsin varsity crew when Coach Mike Murphy's eight oared shell rows on the Hudson in June. Drouet was in the Badger freshman shell at Poughkeepsie two years ago and rowed No. 5 in the varsity boat last spring.

Lawrence to Enter 12 in Wisconsin Track Games

Appleton, Wis., April 6.—[Special.]—Lawrence college will enter twelve in the University of Wisconsin-Wisconsin college track meet at Camp Randall April 20, A. C. Denny, director of athletics, said today.

HUPMOBILE

reduces all prices $55.00 to $260.00

To give the motoring public immediate advantage of HUPMOBILE'S new expansion program

Early in January HUPMOBILE acquired a new plant in Cleveland, comprising more than a million square feet of modern and advanced automotive manufacturing facilities.

This was the first step in HUPMOBILE'S 1929 program of expansion, giving HUPMOBILE a doubled production capacity for its famous Century cars.

Now comes the second step; that of passing along to the public the economies which HUPMOBILE'S extended production plans make feasible.

These price reductions embrace all models in the 1929 HUPMOBILE Century Six and Eight lines and range from $55.00 to $260.00.

Consistently, for more than twenty years, HUPMOBILE has won and held its public by fine motor car quality at notably low prices.

But today, in this new schedule of prices, HUPMOBILE excels itself in value-giving.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

OHIO KEEPS LEAD IN AUTO DEATHS AT R.R. CROSSINGS

Protection Campaign Is Needed.

Ohio takes the lead over all other states in the union in the number of persons killed and injured in railroad crossing accidents. This startling statement is made by Charles C. Janes, secretary of the Ohio State Automobile association, and is based on authentic information received from the interstate commerce commission.

That the state bids fair to maintain this lead is shown by the fact that 60 persons have been killed at grade crossing accidents in 1929 in Ohio. This number added to the total killed from 1924 up to the close of 1928 ranging close to 1,561 tells the tragic story of the unnecessary sacrifice of life.

Janes, in discussing the appalling figures, said: "We of the Ohio State Automobile association, speaking for our membership in our 81 associated automobile clubs, think it is high time and important that some steps should be taken by the legislature and other properly constituted authority to take notice of the situation.

Relatives Can't Recover.

"This is especially true in view of the fact that no avenue is left open to recover damages from railroads for lives lost in crossing accidents, as a result of the decision of the United States Supreme court, which places the entire responsibility on motorists for each accident.

"This decision holds that 'the motorist is expected to take every care to learn whether the way is clear, even, when necessary, to the extent of getting out of his car for a look up and down the track.'

"This precaution was taken on the part of the driver of the bus which figured in the accident at Bellevue, O., recently, when many lives were sacrificed, yet the tragedy occurred. In view of this accident it would seem that this precaution on the part of drivers of motor vehicles is not the solution of the problem.

Protection Needed.

"In our opinion it is time that steps should be taken to protect the motorist against himself, and it is believed that some kind of crossing protection is the only solution. This must come either through the construction of overhead crossings, or through several of the less expensive means of protection. Among these, crossing gates operated by a crossing watchman on the crossing or in a nearby tower seems to be the most positive form."

Secretary Janes called attention to the fact that while, strange as it may seem, the building of good roads has contributed materially to the loss of life at grade crossings, statistics, he said, show that there are six times as many accidents at railroad grade crossings where the view is clear than where the vision is obscured by buildings, trees, etc. In the latter situation drivers of motor vehicles are more inclined to be cautious than they are where the view is unobstructed.

Further, records reveal that three times the number of accidents of this character occur during the daytime than at night.

IMPROVEMENTS IN BRAKES MAKING MOTORS FASTER

When a car moving at 75 miles per hour is brought to a halt by braking, a great deal of heat, probably the equivalent of between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000 foot pounds, must be dissipated. The brake drum temperature, under such circumstances, often rises momentarily to approximately 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit and the necessity of rapidly dissipating this heat must hereafter be given more attention than it has received in the past, said William G. Wall, past president of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

The improvement made in brakes in recent years has made faster automobiles possible, and increased decelerating, or stopping, ability has been gained by using larger brake drums and larger braking surfaces, according to Mr. Wall.

When a car that travel at high speed is being stopped, the brake effectiveness often is found to be diminishing during the last part of the deceleration, because the brake drum is expanding. With car weight tending to increase, braking ability must of course be increased.

ELECTRIC DEVICE COUNTS AUTOS IN N. Y. TUNNEL

The electrical traffic checker has taken up its post at the Holland tunnel in New York. At the exit end of one of the two mile tubes under the Hudson river it is faithfully counting, hour after hour, the number of vehicles that pass and the count is registered instantly upon a dial in the New York city administration building of the tunnel commission. At present there is only one experimental unit at work. If the expected results are obtained a complete system of electrically counting traffic will be established.

Automotive Engineers Have Membership of 7,000

Membership in the Society of Automotive Engineers now totals more than 7,000. Since the organization last November of new territorial sections of the society in Toronto, Canada, and at Seattle, Wash., 30 automotive engineers in the Toronto territory, 50 in Washington, 23 in Oregon, and 20 in California have applied for admission. Foreign membership, which a year ago totaled 364, is also increasing.

AUTOS ARE EXEMPTED.

The Canadian department of national revenue has ruled that automobiles entered as settlers' effects into the dominion are exempt from customs duties up to a value of $1,000.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Zac Dunlop, Chicago manager for Durant Motors, Inc., held a dealers' luncheon last Thursday at which F. J. Haynes, president of the new Durant Motors, Inc., and R. T. Hodgkins, general sales manager, were present.

In a statement to the dealers' organization, Mr. Haynes stated that he did not see a dark cloud on the norizon for the entire year of 1929. He stated that effort would count this year in the sale of almost any commodity, particularly automobiles. He also stated that he considers the automobile as the backbone of the American prosperity, namely, that transportation is one of the most important phases of our lives and the biggest factor in business growth. He expects 1929 to be the biggest year in the automotive history.

A squadron of five of six giant Strong monoplanes will leave Chicago Wednesday to bomb Lansing. The ten bombers located in each plane are quite confident, however, of a peaceful victory, as their missiles consist of a deluge of orders for Reo automobiles, probably one of the largest single orders ever received by the factory. The tri-motored planes will leave the Municipal airport, 63d and Cicero, at about 9:30 a. m., arriving at the Lansing airport a little over two hours later. Earl Butler, president of the Butler Motor company, 2251 South Michigan boulevard, Chicago and northern Illinois distributor for Reo, will lead the party of about fifty dealers into Lansing.

A district meeting of the Gabriel triple hydraulic shock absorber distributors was held at the Stevens hotel last Friday. Over 100 distributors from the central west district attended. J. H. Shoemaker, sales manager of the Gabriel factory, presided.

Last month Packard sales and deliveries to customers exceeded 5,000 cars, and established a new high record for any March in the company's history. The record was a result of the price reduction of $160 on all Packard standard eight models on March 4.

The Vikings are coming. The vanguard of this new V-type eight cylinder automobile being introduced by Oldsmobile and General Motors will be on initial public display in the larger cities of the country this week and additional shipments are leaving the factories daily to supply the entire Oldsmobile dealer organization with the new companion car to Oldsmobile Six.

H. R. Baker, for the last seven years advertising manager of the Miller Rubber company, has announced his resignation, effective April 15, to become vice president of the Gardner Advertising company of St. Louis and New York. He will establish headquarters at Akron and have charge of territory from Chicago to Pittsburgh and Detroit to the south.

About this time every year, according to Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car company some one always asks him whether the small producer in the automobile industry can survive. "The answer is so simple," Mr. Jordan says, "that I can give it to you in just a few words —when every woman in this country makes up her mind that she wants to look just like tens of thousands of other women, act just like them, live in the same kind of houses, wear the same kind of clothes, and no longer be an individual, then everybody will go out of business except the mail order houses."

Hupmobile will conduct its greatest single drive-away from the Detroit factory April 17 and 18, when more than 150 straight eights will be dispatched for Chicago territory in the hands of purchasers or their representatives. The Gambill Motor company, Chicago distributor, announces that Hupp will provide some ultra-modern touches for the occasion and shortly will make an important announcement with reference to that company's interest in commercial aviation.

Appointment of J. F. Boyd as district manager for Chicago territory of De Soto, a division of Chrysler, has been announced from Detroit. Mr. Boyd has been associated with the automobile industry for ten years. His offices will be located in the Wrigley building.

Studebaker has produced a movietone, called "Champions," based on a recent 30,000 mile run of a Studebaker President Eight. The picture, which carries all the sounds incidental to the run, including the roar of the motors and the conversation of the racing drivers, was presented to Chicago audiences last week.

GROWTH OF AUTO INDUSTRY SEEN IN R. R. REPORT

Oil Shipments Up 398 Per Cent.

To the motor vehicle are due relatively the largest increases in railroad tonnage in the last fourteen years, is the conclusion of Railway Age in a study of changing railroad traffic. Drawn from interstate commerce commission commodity statistics, the study discloses startling changes in the sources of railroad revenues during recent years, with petroleum and oil tonnage indicating 398 per cent increase in 1927 over 1913, the greatest gain shown by any commodity. This item also heads the list of tonnage produced by manufacturers in 1927 with 53,556,680 tons.

"To the motor vehicle must also, no doubt," says the report, "be largely attributed the increase of 83 per cent in the tonnage of stone, sand, and other like articles (161,782,141 tons), which have been used largely in highway construction.

Road Materials Up.

"No doubt it is further significant of the influence of the automobile in the seven years ending with 1927 that the three largest increases in tonnage of the groups of commodities given in the table were petroleum and other oils, 75.3 per cent; sand, stone, etc., 64 per cent; cement, brick, and lime, 47 per cent. The increase in the tonnage of motor vehicles during this period was 116 per cent."

Railway Age also makes note of the fact that while petroleum and oil shipments were mounting high, due to the demands of the automobile, the fuel for the horse, namely, hay, was registering a decline of 35 per cent. However, according to J. S. Marvin of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, hay was never comparable in tonnage, amounting to only 4,467,863 tons in 1927. Much of it was grown locally, and what did move over the railroads paid very low rates and was troublesome because of accumulation at the markets, which tied up freight cars, blocked the yards, and required frequent embargoes.

Motor Trucks Used.

A decline of 37.9 per cent in household goods and furniture to 1,369,000 tons is thought to reflect the use of other means of transportation, notably, in this instance, the motor truck.

"Even this valuable and interesting study of tonnage changes does not entirely disclose the benefits to railroads, particularly those in the heavy manufacturing districts," said Mr. Marvin. "The great growth of population and employment in cities where the automobile industry has concentrated means that railroads serving them have had corresponding additions to their shipments of fuel, foodstuffs, and supplies. There is also the shipping of materials for parts factories, service stations, and garages throughout the country, which cannot be classified separately and reflected in freight commodity statistics."

20 OUT OF 22 PLANTS SHOWED MARCH INCREASES

Industry Reaches High Point in Selling.

Detroit, Mich., April 6.—[Special.]—Right now manufacturers of automobiles and motor trucks are at the high spot of spring selling. This means not only the present spring, but all preceding early seasons. Capacity output is the prevailing rule in virtually every leading plant. Wayne county, where a majority of the automobiles are produced, shows a remarkable gain in sales for twenty out of twenty-two leading manufacturers.

These increases resulted in placing about 16,000 new cars in Wayne county within a period of 25 days. This particular district is looked upon as the real barometer for the ups and downs of the automobile industry. As goes Detroit, so goes other metropolitan cities.

The Saturation Point.

But little is heard of the saturation point, which in years gone by, was set at about 1,000,000 vehicles for the entire country. Now there are in the United States alone more than 20,000,000 registrations, with an unsatisfied public as is shown by the continual demands being made for new cars, and the steadily growing used car markets.

The thought still vaguely lurks in a great many minds that there must be a point of saturation in the automobile market, and that same vague notion carries with it the thought that the end of the automobile industry will have come. But Col. Sydney D. Waldon, a headliner in the industry, thinks differently. He predicts that in a decade or two an annual output of 10,000,000 will be necessary every year for replacements. Then, he says, the industry will be on its way to the saturation point—but not near it.

Automobile Vacation.

At a recent meeting of representatives of automobile clubs which covers the entire country, it was predicted that something like 35,000,000 persons would take automobile vacation trips this year, and would spend about $3,500,000,000. Detroit already is feeling the effects of international travel into and out of Canada—a popular route from west to east.

A disappointment, however, is the fact that the new international bridge which up to within a week or so ago was scheduled for traffic early in July, will be delayed several months because it has been found necessary to take down and rebuild the cables. Until this long span is completed ferries, which at times means long ferries, which at tmies means long delays because of the congested conditions on both sides of the river.

125 MILE CHINESE ROAD WOULD GIVE U. S. MOTORISTS GRAY HAIR

American motorists, who roll comfortably along on smooth pavement over well marked roads would age considerably in making the 125 mile journey from Pekin to Kalgan. A log of the trip would indicate that only an airplane could negotiate the route.

In following the log of the trail blazers, the driver's hair might stand on end if he glanced down the list of landmarks and found that a "Horses bend around sunken road—and mud" awaited him twenty-five miles out of Pekin. Three lines of trenches are next to be crossed. Then he might bounce along fifteen more miles and find a "Ford—with big boulders—bad place if water is high." At 44.5 miles there is another ford with the instructions "Go upstream a short distance."

100 MILES OF NEW CARS BEING ADDED WEEKLY

Road Building Not Keeping Up with Purchases.

Motor car purchasers are adding to the highway burden at the rate of 100 miles of new automobiles weekly. At the end of 1929 the combined length of trucks, buses, and passenger cars will be approximately 65,000 miles.

In addition to the replacement of about 2,000,000 worn out cars, automobile manufacturers expect to place new cars in the garages of another 2,000,000 owners.

Records kept by state highway officials, park officials, health resorts and countless tourist camps reveal that motor car usage is increasing at an even faster rate than registration figures. This means that the highways are carrying a tremendous volume of traffic that as yet shows signs of lessening its growth.

Seeing the Country.

Last year 44,000,000 people saw more than three and a half billion dollars "seeing the country." Seeing is only a small part of the highway story but it is indicative of the pleasure use of the car. With the use of one company alone [illegible] passengers over routes totaling [illegible] 000 miles, and with bus line [illegible] ments at about the half billion dollar mark, it is evident that commercial motor transportation is more than a mere rumor.

As for the matter of highways over which the nation's 100,000,000 or so rubber tires are running, there are at present no more than 80,000 miles of hard road that can be rated as first class.

Road Planners Fail.

More money must be spent for permanent highway improvements, highway officials and authorities all over the country are pointing out. Better use can be found for funds now being spent for maintenance and construction of roads that cannot cope successfully with the tons of shifting traffic that hurtle over them.

In many instances those charged with road planning have failed to recognize that motor transportation is a permanent thing and that the highway should also be as permanent as possible, else this and succeeding generations will continue to pour money into the sink hole of maintenance and periodical rebuilding.

An automobile mileage of [illegible] does not compare favorably with a first class road mileage of 80,000.

Even the motor-wise are amazed at the difference

DRIVE A CHRYSLER

DURING "Learn-the-Difference" MONTH

Only one week of "Learn-the-Difference" Month—and already new waves of Chrysler enthusiasm all over the country!

People are talking Chrysler as they never have talked before. This difference! That difference! A new surprise here, a new thrill there.

But we want you to do more than merely hear this difference in words. We want you to see and feel and experience it—in facts, in results!

Visit any Chrysler dealer's showroom—let us point out Chrysler's exclusive features—explain its advanced design—demonstrate Chrysler's unmatched performance.

Chrysler is not only different in the big obvious things. It is different in the little things that mean so much in the pleasure and convenience of driving.

In design and construction—Chrysler is far and away the leader—as unlike any other car as day and night.

You have heard of the "Silver-Dome" engine. But do you know the difference between this and other engines—and what that difference means to you in power and speed? See and drive a Chrysler.

The motoring world is singing the praises of the 7-bearing crankshaft. But do you know that Chrysler not only has a 7-bearing crankshaft—which is a vital difference from many other cars—it has a special Chrysler-designed counterweighted 7-bearing crankshaft? See what it does for extra smoothness, extra evenness and extra quiet.

Chrysler has gone farther—much farther—than most other cars in the generous use of rubber. Rubber engine mountings that insulate the engine from the chassis. Rubber shock insulators that replace the old-style metal spring shackles. Hence, a delightful difference in the effortless ease of travel.

We could fill this whole page with type telling why Chrysler is so vitally different. But a five-minute inspection, followed by a brief drive, will tell the story far more graphically—and completely.

That's the reason for Chrysler "Learn-the-Difference" Month. So that you may learn the all-inclusive superiority of Chrysler, see it—experience it——and thereby learn the difference between the Chrysler and any other car in the world.

A Special Feature YOU Shouldn't Miss

It is of particular interest to every prospective purchaser to ask any Chrysler dealer or salesman about the Special "Learn-the-Difference" Gift Card.

GREAT PRECISION NEEDED TO RUN MODERN MOTOR

Engineer Gives Interesting Operating Figures.

The high degree of precision required in present automobile engine ignition systems is indicated by the fact that at 3,000 revolutions per minutes of a six cylinder engine using a six lobe distributor cam, the contacts are opened and closed 150 times per second, remaining each time on contact for approximately .004 of a second. This was pointed out by J. T. Fitzsimmons of the Delco-Remy corporation at a recent national meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

At 4,500 revolutions per minute of the engine the time interval has been reduced to .0026 of a second. During this interval that the contacts are together they must make intimate contact without chatter, as this would interfere with the flow of current through them, thus causing a weak spark at the plug or even a complete miss at high speed. This breaker mechanism must make and break perfectly approximately 10,000 times per car mile, if the engine is to run smothly, or 1,000,000 times in 100 miles.

Performance Becomes Rough.

Under average conditions, a car should run at least 10,000 miles without the contacts needing adjusting, which means that the distributor contacts have closed and broken the electrical circuit at least 100,000,000 times. It is not unusual for a driver to get 15,000 miles, or 150,000,000 operations, without adjustment.

At top speed, on an American eight cylinder car having two plugs to each cylinder, the two circuit breakers must break the primary circuit of each coil 250 times per second. Five hundred and sixty sparks per second are fed into the distributor from the ignition coils, are sorted into pairs, and sent to the spark plugs in each cylinder in the proper order at the correct time. If they fail to do this, the performance of the engine becomes noticeably rough.

Should Be Noiseless.

The foregoing figures, continued Mr. Fitzsimmons, indicate that more is involved in this breaker mechanism than a pair of contacts, one of which may be fastened to any kind of a lever. The lever to which the movable contact is mounted must be rigid and light. It must be free from any period of vibration within the engine speed range, and should operate without objectionable noise. Sufficient tension must be supplied through the spring which holds the contacts together, yet this pressure must not be so great as to cause excessive wear on the rubbing block, which is that part bearing against the cam.

It might be well to state in this connection that lubrication on the circuit breaker cam is becoming more and more important as speeds increase and as the operating temperature of the distributor has been raised. As a wear of .005 of an inch on the rubbing block of a distributor may cause erratic ignition, it is essential that the wear be kept as low as possible.

STEAM AUTO OF YEAR '95 STILL IS ABLE TO TRAVEL

A steam automobile, built in England 34 years ago, when laws were still in force restricting the speed of motor vehicles to four miles an hour, recently drove down a street in Basingstoke, a town west of London. For many years the machine was used in hauling freight and passengers about the town. It was built by the Thornycroft company, which still owns it.

The odd vehicle is a front drive car the front wheels, almost twice as large as the rear ones, are driven by chains and sprockets. Steering is accomplished by a wheel that turns the rear wheels.

Ordinary wooden truck wheels with iron rims were used, says Popular Science Monthly, and the day of the balloon tires and shock absorbers was still a long way off when it was built. The funnel from the steam engine that supplied the power projected through the room of the machine, belching smoke as it moved down the street.

Virginia Reports 15% Auto Traffic Increase

Traffic over the highways of Virginia averaged more than a 15 per cent increase during 1928 over 1927, the Virginia state chamber of commerce announces after a study of the 1928 traffic census. This shows that 11,134 automobiles entered Virginia every day from Washington during 1928, a total for the year of 6,510,140 cars, or enough to transport to the polls all the voters who took part in the last presidential election in the United States. In 1927 the daily average from Washington was only 10,386 automobiles per day, or a total for the year of 3,790,390 automobiles.

700 Mile Automobile Road Opened in Darkest Africa

A new motor road connecting the upper Nile and Congo in equatorial Africa has been opened for general traffic. It runs from Stanleyville, in Belgian Congo, north to Buta and then Rejaf, in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. The length of the new road, which practically once was "Darkest Africa," is 700 miles.

Czech Auto Club Will Erect Warning Signals

Czecho-Slovakia's Automobile club is to erect sign posts and warning signals under an agreement with the ministry of public works, according to the department of commerce. In return the Czechoslovak Automobile club is given a license to place advertisements along the state roads.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

WHAT IS HORSEPOWER?

Chicago, April 2.—Now that we have all had our "tickets" and filled out our applications for city and state licenses, I wonder how many knew what N. A. C. C. and horsepower mean? One horsepower is the ability to lift 33,000 pounds one foot in one minute. So if your car is 25 horsepower it can or is supposed to be able to lift 25 times 33,000 pounds one foot in one minute. The N. A. C. C. horsepower means that the horsepower is fixed by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. This is not the true horsepower of the car. It is just a conservative estimate.

Every car has three horsepowers: the indicated, the brake, and the N. A. C. C. The indicated is the motor's strength if there were no losses in generating the power—the power exerted right on the piston. The brake horsepower is the real power of the engine delivered right at the flywheel after losses have been deducted. For instance, a twelve cylinder car has an indicated horsepower of 100; its N. A. C. C. rating get posted on the right side of Sacra- rating is always between the indicated and the brake—a conservative estimate of its horsepower. FORDE ROPER.

A PEDESTRIAN'S DILEMMA.

Chicago, April 4.—Southbound traffic at the intersection of Palmer avenue and Sacramento avenue is supposed to stop because there is a stop target posted on the right sideof Sacramento at that point, but northbound traffic crosses Palmer at this point at breakneck speed, there being no stop sign. The writer is one of hundreds escaping by inches only, and besides, hundreds of school children are endangered due to pure negligence on the part of the city and careless, thoughtless motorists.

I must cross this spot on an average of six times daily and I don't care to be picked up in pieces. Last week I lost thirty-five minutes during six days at this crossing and my time is worth as much as the hasty motorists'. A survey of this crossing will prove that instant action should be taken. I am not a crank regarding autos. I drive myself. But I respect the rights of pedestrians above all. FRED J. TRENCK.

TAXED BUT NOT BENEFITED.

Chicago, April 2.—Now that the state will start getting gas taxes Aug. 1, I have decided to save my money as fast as I can, buy a home out in the country, and enjoy myself riding around on good roads. Next year, with the amount of driving I do, it will cost me at least $75 in taxes, and all my driving is done in the city. That is what burns me up. How any one who drives in this city as much as I do during the week can go out in the country on Sunday is more than I can understand. And to think I was dumb enough to vote for the taxmakers. Never again!

R. M. LAMBETH.

LOOP TRAFFIC SOLUTION.

Chicago, April 4.—It has been suggested that trucks be kept off loop streets between 4:30 and 6 p. m. I have a better idea: Keep all private cars out of the loop between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m., except delivery trucks and wagons, physicians' cars, cars of the police and fire departments, and such other of the city and county cars as are in actual use for the business of these organizations; also taxicabs except when actually carrying passengers or on their way to or from hotels or railroad stations with or for a fare. No cruising to be allowed.

Individual cars could be driven to the edge of the loop nearest the places of business of their occupants, and, with the then established freedom of the streets they could walk with safety to their destination and have the advantage of the exercise. Also merchants and business men would profit instead of losing, because of the convenience and lack of danger to the public in getting over the streets. There are thousands of residents of Chicago who rarely get down to the loop because of the danger, and do all trading in their own communities.

There is another thing—that is allowing cars to turn a corner when the red light is against them in the way they are driving and to turn with the green light. Cruising taxicabs are the chief offenders in this case. They keep foot passengers waiting on the curb for them to make the turn, which is necessarily slow, and by the time these cars have passed over the crossing the person on foot faces the red light or has to dodge through the traffic, taking chances on his safety.

Since the plan of keeping automobiles out of the loop during a street car strike worked reasonably well, it might not be amiss to test this plan. The safety of all the people should be of more importance than a slight convenience to a few or even a large part of them. CHARLES MCGAVIN.

BLAME FAILING TO SIGNAL FOR 2,000 ACCIDENTS

N. Y. Motor Body Gets Up Statistics.

Statistics of the New York motor vehicle bureau for 1928 show that more than 2,000 accidents happened on the highways of that state because motorists failed to signal. In eleven of these accidents a simple movement of the arm, a wave of the hand or a slight pressure upon the horn button might have saved a life. There undoubtedly were thousands of other accidents attributable in whole or in part to failure to signal or the giving of misleading or unsatisfactory hand signals. The bureau only records cases where this cause has been definitely established.

"The motorist himself must correct this situation," says John H. Wright, president of the New York State Automobile association. "There has been a noticeable letdown of late in the giving of proper signals on the road. An arm protruding from the side of a car may indicate that the motorist is going to turn to the left or to the right, that he is pointing to the scenery, that he intends to back up, that he wants to find out whether it is raining or snowing, that he is hailing a passing friend, that he is going to stop or any one of many other things that motorists do."

Use Three Signals.

Without attempting to set forth or establish any definite formula for signaling, the association points out that the most experienced and careful drivers today use three very sensible arm signals which, if generally observed by the two million drivers on New York state highways, would unquestionably bring about a considerable improvement in the situation.

Each of these three signals is made with the left arm of the driver extended straight out from the machine in a horizontal position from the shoulder. They are as follows:

1. Left arm straight out and index finger of the left hand pointing straight to the left, meaning that the motorist is going to turn left when he can do so safely.

2. Left arm straight out from the shoulder with hand fully extended in the same direction, palm of the hand turned toward the rear, indicating that the motorist is going to bring his machine to a stop.

Look to Rear.

3. With the left arm extended straight out from the shoulder, the driver moves his forearm in a circular motion, indicating that he intends to turn to the right, and therefore, invites the motorist in his rear to draw up and pass him on the left.

In addition the state association urges motorists to always look behind and to signal when driving away from the curb, and never to turn out from the curb unless absolutely sure that no car in the rear is close enough to cause a crash.

HIGH WATER IS FLOODING AUTO ROADS TO SOUTH

Some Main Highways Are Impassable.

Flood conditions, resembling those of 1927, have occurred in the river and creek districts of Missouri, Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky and Illinois.

At the extreme southern tip of Illinois the state highways are under water to some extent, but navigation of them by motor car is possible on the main roads. The secondary roads, of course, are impassable. From the Ohio river south, a survey shows poor traveling conditions.

United States highway No. 60 between Birds Point, across from Cairo, and the ferry landing is under water for a mile. The water is from six to eight inches deep on the concrete, but traffic is going through. The highway department staked off the roadway as a guide to motorists. One way traffic is in force to and from the ferry. To avoid any accident that may occur in trying to drive through the water at night, the ferry boat is operating in the day time only. The last boat leaves Birds Point at 6 p. m.

Holds Up Bridge Work.

Work on the new bridge spanning the Mississippi river at this point has ceased on account of the high water. It is now planned to have the bridge completed and opened to traffic by late summer.

The roadway north out of Memphis is of asphalt to Millington, concrete to Covington, asphalt to Ripley, and concrete to Dyersburg. A short distance north of Dyersburg a detour is encountered to approximately six miles of Troy. This detour is over gravel, and can be traveled in wet weather. From Troy the highway is of concrete construction to Fulton, Ky.

At Fulton, on the Kentucky state line, a gravel highway leads the motorist to Hickman, which town was damaged by the flood waters of the Mississippi river in 1927. This highway can only be traveled for a distance of approximately eleven miles. From this point on to Hickman the highway is under water and impassable.

Missouri Road Impassable.

North of Cairo, Ill., state highway No. 3, or United States highway No. 51, has water standing on the roadway in numerous places, but offers no interference to the motorist. Most of this water is caused by seepage from the levees.

In the northern part of Missouri, United States highway No. 61 is impassable south of Keokuk. The overflow waters of the Mississippi river are over the roadway to a depth of four feet.

In Arkansas United States highway No. 70, the Bankhead highway, is under water and closed to traffic between Brinkley and De Valls Bluff, due to the flood waters of the Cache and the Black rivers, which are out of their banks, and have flooded the lowlands. The Arkansas highway department stated in a report to The 49th State Tour club that it would be several days before the highway would be open to traffic.

FANCIFUL NAMES ON THE AUTOMOBILES OF MANY YEARS AGO

Some fanciful names were given many of the early makes of motor cars. A few of them, long out of the picture, were Autodynamic, in 1901; Buckmobile, in 1903; Brownickar, in 1908; Ben Hur, in 1917; Comet, in 1908; Dixie Flyer, in 1917; Everybody's, 1908; Gasmobile, in 1901; Great Smith, 1911; Gearless, 1920; Mercury, 1904; Motorette, 1911; Mighty Michigan, 1913; U. S. Long Distance, 1903, and Vogue, 1921.

MOTORISTS PAY 1½c PER MILE FOR HIGHWAY WORK

American motorists annually are paying only about one and a half cents per mile of travel for street and road improvements, according to figures compiled by the cement trade.

During 1928, the motor car registration was roughly 24,000,000 the report continues. These cars averaged in the neighborhood of 5,000 miles of travel. A conservative estimate of operating expenses places the 1928 automobile travel costs, which include gasoline, oil, depreciation, taxes, upkeep and so on, at 12 billion dollars.

Of this sum only two billions, or one-sixth, was expended for all road and street improvements.

Must Increase Investment.

"Industrial economists and highway authorities point out that with both pleasure and commercial traffic increasing by leaps and bounds, the annual highway expenditure must be increased. Conservative figures show that the United States, with 78 per cent of the world's automobiles, spends altogether for new cars, repairs, fuel, truck drivers' and chauffeurs' salaries, insurance and other items, no less than 14 billion dollars yearly.

With this overwhelming figure, the investment, to date in dealers' establishments and storage and service garages, gasoline filling stations, and the money invested in cars purchased prior to 1929, reach a total of about 25 billions.

Four Million Participate.

Manufacturing motor cars has for some years been the nation's chief industry. In 1928 more than 4,000,000 people were engaged in one way or another in producing materials and in manufacturing 4,800,000 passenger cars, trucks, and buses, worth in excess of three and one-half billion dollars.

And this tremendous motor industry, which is responsible in large measure for current prosperity, is dependent upon the highway. Investing in highway improvements is not only investing in comfort, convenience, and economy for the car user, but it is also an insurance against the return of those poverty stricken days when shirts with 20 removable bosoms were a godsend.

Auto Deaths in 78 U. S. Cities Increased in 1928

The number of deaths due to automobile accidents in 78 large American cities was 7,615 last year, as compared with 7,084 deaths in 1927. During the last four weeks of 1928 the fatalities amounted to 771. In the same period in 1927 there were 634.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

CHICAGO'S HIGH SPEED HIGHWAYS DO NOT CONNECT

City Encircled by Slow Traffic Zone.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

The high speed motor facilities from the center of Chicago extend outward only part way to the city limits in each direction.

The high speed facilities from the outer limits of Cook county extend inward only to the city limits, and in many cases meet obstacles in the vicinity of the city boundary lines.

Thus there is created a zone of slow traffic between the inner ends of the county's high speed facilities and the outer ends of the city's high speed facilities.

Few Miles of High Speed.

From downtown Chicago it is possible to travel southward at high speed by motor car from Randolph street over the outer drive and South Parkway to 51st street, about six miles; to the north high speed is possible to Montrose avenue on the drive, about five miles; to the west similar speed is possible on Washington boulevard as far as Hamlin avenue from Des Plaines street, a little more than four miles.

In any direction, after that, the going is uncertain; unsafe at high speed because of narrow pavements and turns, cross streets and lights.

There are lights, of course, in the high speed areas of the south, west and north boulevards. They slow up mass movement to some extent, but are perhaps all that can be expected of ground level thoroughfares. The boulevards have the width of pavement and the smooth surfaces. They lack uninterrupted flow. As long as the thoroughfares are maintained on the ground level no material improvement is possible so far as physical equipment is concerned.

Many Impediments.

From Montrose avenue north to the city limits all sorts of impediments exist. A string of single control lights on the otherwise fast section through Rogers Park is an unexplained an almost unbelievable obstruction to traffic flow. Along Sheridan road from Wilson north to Berwyn another section of lights make travel difficult. Sheridan road itself is in poor condition as to width and pavement.

On the south the outer drive halts precipitately at 39th street, and thereafter southbound traffic moves west to Lake Park avenue and south to the park. Traffic crossing the viaduct at 39d street gets a run to 51st on the boulevard and into the park a few blocks farther. South of Jackson or Washington parks narrow roads, poor paving, and many turns and twists pester traffic through to the limits. Toward the west the through highways west of Jackson park have the usual physical defects which slow down traffic. Any way the motorist turns he is faced with a barrier of inadequate thoroughfares.

More People Outside.

Outside the ring formed by 51st street, Hamlin, and Montrose avenues more people reside who own and operate cars and have downtown business than there do within the ring. In fact, much more than half the city's car population dwells outside the high speed area. A material proportion of these live in the area beyond the city limits through which the 40 foot highways of the county system extend. They drive in and out of the city six days a week. They are induced to take up residence in the outer fringe of the municipality by the promise of automobile transportation.

It is obvious, then, in the light of the situation, that the progress of motor transportation facilities has been virtually a series of blunders. Even the downtown high speed areas are only a year or two old. Previous to that no continuity of pavement and boulevard width existed.

And the blunders are not yet over with. Witness the construction of two modern, four lane highways the inner ends of which are fourteen or fifteen miles from the origin of or the destination of the mass traffic of this community. The folly of the expenditure of $2,000,000 to $4,000,000 for these isolated highways may be conceived by a glance at the map accompanying this article.

Needs Do Not Bother Politicians.

There they lie—broad, smooth, straight pavements. One starts at Kankakee, a town of 16,000 and runs twenty-nine miles to within fifteen miles of a city of 3,000,000 of people. The other start at St. Charles, a town of 4,000 inhabitants and runs seventeen miles to within fifteen miles of the second largest city in America. This in the face of the fact that the city of three million is without four lane roads closer in on the state system.

As roadbuilding now exists the political considerations clearly overwhelm traffic considerations. Political power can place a road where no traffic demand exists. The demands of traffic apparently have no weight with those powers which have to do with the designation of highway placements.

Regardless of the ridiculous picture presented by this politically inspired abortion of public affairs, there can be no question that it does exist and there is no indication that it will not go on and on and on. Involved in the political influence which misdirects road building, the "real estate racket" is a dominating element. The "real estate racket" is responsible for more misplaced roads than even political graft. In many cases the real estate slickers have hoodwinked politicians into preposterous acts and in the end have trimmed the politicians out of promised gains.

The Consumer Pays.

Many isolated highways, which do not connect with through, continuous routes of travel, obviously are the result of plots and rackets in which unscrupulous realty promoters are identified. They work upon the politicians with promises of "ground floor" participation. Meanwhile they option property to be passed on to so-called syndicates in which the politicians are given a chance to invest. The syndicate may find that it has been made a goat, and its only way out is to market its holdings by forcing retail sales to simple minded individuals at an outlandish profit. In the end, of course, the ultimate consumer pays the shot.

It would appear a clear proposition, then, with the broken stretches of highways and boulevards existing, that the only sane treatment possible to save the immense public and private investments and expenditures already made, will be to devise ways to connect the fragments into continuous thoroughfares.

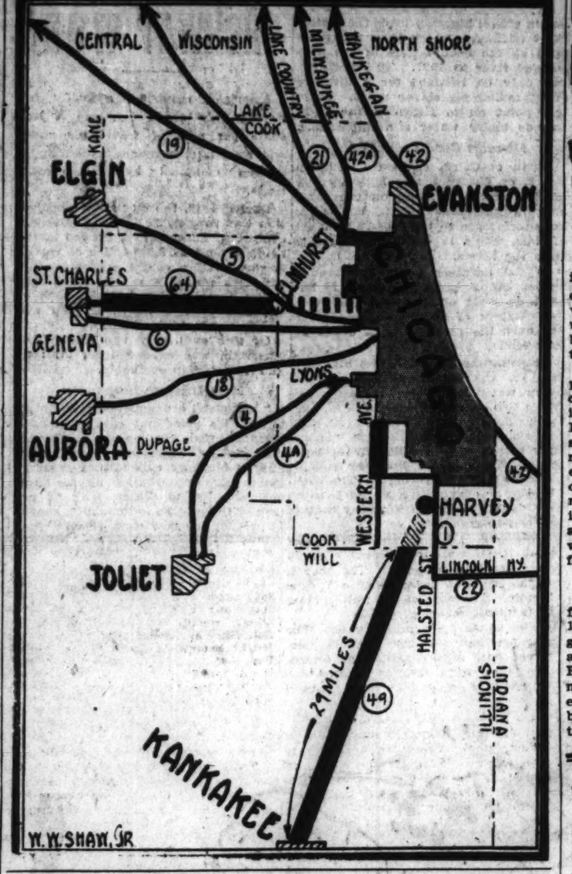
So far as creating continuity between city and county highways goes, it is evident that second level viaducts from the outer ends of the city high speed boulevards to the inner ends of the county high speed highways, offers the most simple remedy.

Elevated Highways.

There has been much talk of these elevated highways about Chicago. Various units have discussed the advisability of building such structures along Avondale highway, along West Monroe street, along Roosevelt road and through the west park district, possibly over Fulton street and Franklin boulevard.

As yet all has been talk and nothing has been done about it. The west park commissioners have come nearer doing something than any of the others. Dr. John Dill Robertson, president of the commission, has been working untiringly for months to get such a proposition put before the people of his district in the shape of a referendum. Much opposition has developed, but most of it has been traced to downtown interests, which, for some reason or another, disapprove of the west side's progressive enterprise. Just how this project will terminate is a matter of conjecture. Dr. Robertson is fighting in all the ways he knows to get it up to a referendum, while opposition is contributing obstacle after obstacle, both in the general assembly and in the west park district itself.

UNCONNECTING ROADS



U. S. BODY SEEKS TO CO-ORDINATE ALL HIGHWAY PLANNING

With the end in view of promoting coördinated highway planning and administration by local and state authorities, the United States Chamber of Commerce has submitted to referendum vote by constituent organizations a series of recommendations bearing upon the whole subject. These recommendations were drafted by a special committee following a survey of the situation regarding local and state road administration.

The committee approves of state highway departments having authority to develop complete road programe and to have advisory or supervisory relations to local authorities in their road work; of bringing local road authorities together to an extent sufficient to justify the employment of expert technical services and the definite planning of local road work, and of coördinated planning of highways in metropolitan areas, and as far as possible the financing of construction as well as maintenance of roads of general motor use by highway users.

TRAINS STOP AT SOME CROSSINGS IN NEW ENGLAND

Grade crossings at towns on some of the less active branch lines of railroads in Massachusetts and New Hampshire are now unguarded without violation of rather strict laws governing the protection of intersections of roadways and railways. Until recently pensioned employes served as gatemen and flagmen at such crossings.

Pedestrians and vehicles no longer need "beware of the locomotive." The locomotive now "bewares" and comes to a full stop before rolling over the crossing.

This practice may cause a few seconds' delay to passengers, but it saves the railroads a considerable amount by relieving them of the necessity of stationing crossing men at points where there are but four or six trains a day.

ELIMINATION OF CROSSINGS NEAR DETROIT PLANNED

Wayne County Undertakes Job on Big Scale.

Elimination of railroad grade crossings upon motor traffic arteries, also of grade crossings of important highways in and about Detroit, is being undertaken on a larger scale than ever before by Wayne county, of which Detroit is a part.

This is the locality which was a pioneer in the laying of cement concrete highways, and is in the lead also in the development of superhighways. It is to make these superhighways safe and capable of handling the maximum of traffic that the grade crossing elimination program is being carried on. As Detroit is served by a large number of railroads, the undertaking is of large proportions. Last year about $3,000,000 was expended on this work, and the plans for this year call for from $3,500,000 to $4,000,000.

Separate Highway Grades.

The size of the program is evident from the fact that at the end of the 1927-'28 construction season twenty grade separations had been completed and seven others were in progress. Five others had been initiated and negotiations are in progress for eighteen undertakings, most of which will be started this year. This makes a total of fifty.

Up to the present only one grade separation between highways is in operation. This is in River Rouge park, at Bonaparte road and River Rouge drive. Another project of this kind has been started, however, at Southfield and Michigan superhighways. This will cost more than $1,250,000.

It involves the separation of grade of two superhighways, each having two strips of forty foot concrete pavement separated by an eighty-four foot space between them, the separation of the Michigan Central railroad tracks and the Southfield superhighway, and the construction of two bridges each having a clear roadway of forty feet to carry the pavements of Southfield superhighway over River Rouge. The project also involves the opening of a new river channel 500 feet away from the existing course of the stream.

The location of the structures and pavements at this intersection are such that left turns are entirely eliminated in the diversion of traffic from one road to the other. This arrangement allows an uninterrupted movement of traffic along either of the superhighways through the intersection.

Builds for Future.

In carrying on this large program of grade separation, Wayne county has not lost sight of the future need of the highways involved in this work. Ample pavement widths, consistent with possible future needs are provided in every case. Bridges carrying railroads over the highways are usually designed to provide two openings for the highway. The clear width of the roadway opening varies from twenty to forty-five feet with the exception of openings for superhighways. At superhighway crossings, such as the Southfield-Michigan separation, the upper roadway is carried on a bridge of four spans. The lower superhighway passes through the two outside openings. The sidewalks also use the outside openings. The roadways have a clear width of thirty feet and the sidewalks ten feet. Corner drives diverting traffic from one superhighway to the other will be paved thirty-six feet wide.

Another notable project initiated last year is that of the Fort superhighway crossing over the Michigan Central, Pennsylvania and Wabash railroads in the section of the city formerly known as "Oakwood." The cost of this project will also be in the neighborhood of $1,250,000. The plan for this structure provides for a viaduct 100 feet wide and approximately one-half mile long.

204 Foot Right of Way.

The structure is centrally located on Fort superhighway which has a right of way of 204 feet. An eighty-foot concrete roadway will be provided on the viaduct as well as two ten foot sidewalks. Two thirty foot concrete pavements will also be provided at ground level to serve abutting property.

The viaduct will be of the deck girder type with seven spans of variable length. The piers will be placed suitable to the location of the twelve railroad tracks passing below and to the extremely sharp skew of the highway with the tracks. The approaches to the viaduct are earth fill between concrete retaining walls running parallel with the highway. The maximum grade of the approaches is three per cent. Ornamental concrete hand rails and lighting standards have been provided throughout the length of the structure.

NEW TRAFFIC SIGNAL WARNS PEDESTRIAN HE CAN BEAT LIGHT

A new signal device, designed to save the pedestrian from being caught in the center of the street as the traffic signal changes from green to red, has been installed at Woodward avenue and State street, Detroit's busiest intersection.

The device, developed by Inspector William L. Potts, head of the signal division of the police department, warns pedestrians that they cannot get across the street before cross traffic will start to move.

A round box, with a glass face on which is lettered the warning in black paint, constitutes the device. Four have been installed at the busiest corner, the warning varying slightly in phraseology. One reads: "Pedestrians: STOP; Too Late to Start." Another reads: "Pedestrians: STOP; You Cannot Get Across."

The signals showing on State street flash their warning nine seconds before the light starts traffic across Woodward avenue. The lights on Woodward, somewhat wider, are timed to give their warning eleven seconds before cross traffic moves.

U. S. AUTO IS STRONG COMPETITOR TO THE BICYCLE IN DENMARK

The American automobile is developing into a strong competitor to the bicycle in Denmark, so popular in that country because of the level character of the land, according to the United States department of commerce.

In the last five years the number of automobiles in Denmark has increased fivefold to 110,000 vehicles, whereas bicycles, whose number is estimated at 1,250,000, about one to every three inhabitants, have been falling off. In 1927 the output was only 45,000, compared with 53,000 in 1926 and 62,000 in 1924. Imports of bicycles have remained steady, however, at about 45,000 annually.

LITZ TO DRIVE 1928 WINNER AT INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The car which Louis Meyer won the thirteenth annual international sweepstakes, otherwise known as the Indianapolis 500 mile race, is entered again this year for the seventeenth running of this greatest automobile race in the world.

But instead of the rather slight Meyer in the pilot's seat the driver changes and at the wheel will be one of the biggest men that ever won places and prizes on the roaring roads of America.

Deacon Litz has sent in his entry, and the deacon is no willow when it comes to aveliteness. He tips the at 1,250,000, about one to every three weight beam at something around 2 pounds, and the cockpit of the car which Meyer drove to victory in 1928 had to be completely altered to permit the Deacon to get his portly frame behind its wheel.

Litz is no stranger to the Indianapolis course, having driven a car in the 1925 race. He has been driving the dusty dirt tracks of the country for many years.

Eighty-five Cities Using Three Color Traffic Lights

Eighty-five cities are using the three-color signal system, of which 76 use the amber after red and green. Eight have recognized the undesirability of using it after the red and consequently use it only after the green is flashed. Eighteen cities use the amber in combination with the red or green. The experts agree that use of the amber in combination with red, as is the custom in Washington and several other large cities, should not be continued. The amber light in such cases is taken as a signal to start, with the result that the intersection is not cleared for the change and collisions result.

CLIFF DURANT TO SEEK SPEED CLASSIC AGAIN

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Cliff Durant, the multimillionaire automobile racing driver who has spent nearly $500,000 in a vain attempt to taste victory in the annual 500 mile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway, will try again.

This information trickles into this community from the sun coated sands of Miami Beach where Durant has been vacationing and conditioning himself for the racing training period which began this week, two months before the big race, which will be held on May 30.

"I'm going to take one more whirl in that race," explains Durant, whose hobby for many years has been automobile racing. "Tommy Milton, the only two time winner of the Indianapolis race and an engineer of unusual ability, now is completing the car which I intend to drive."

Is Growing Fat.

Although Durant has not yet made formal entry, he revealed the fact that he will soon be on the speedway for practice laps. He said he wanted to get in the finest condition of his career for the race.

Durant, who is inclined to be buxom, has trimmed his waistline to athletic proportions during his workout period under the Florida sun. He will continue gymnasium work until he reaches the Indianapolis track and then will continue his training by riding at least fifty miles a day on the two and one-half mile brick and concrete saucer.

Durant, who trades in thousands of shares in the stock market each day, will have a track side broker's office in his garage in the speedway paddock.

Racing Is Hobby.

"I continue to drive each year," explains the multimillionaire, who annually flirts with danger on the race course, "because racing is my hobby and because I am tremendously interested in the advancement of automotive engineering. I am all sold on the ideas that Tommy Milton has woven into this new racing car and we both are interested in seeing it in the best competition in the world."

Milton, the only driver who twice won at Indianapolis, retired from competitive driving two years ago.

ONTARIO SPENDS 30 MILLIONS ON ROADS IN 1928

Highway construction and maintenance has cost the province of Ontario approximately $78,000,000 in three years.

A total of $30,000,000 was spent in 1928 alone, according to a bulletin issued by the department of colonisation and development of the Canadian Pacific railway.

"In 1927 $26,500,000 was spent on the improvement and maintenance of Ontario roads, and $21,500,000 in 1926," the bulletin states. "Various municipalities concerned contributed to the grand total used by the provincial department of highways in road work. An extensive program of road improvement is planned by Ontario for 1929.

"The province's excellent roads are attracting thousands of tourists to Ontario. The provincial government's revenue from automobile license fees and the gasoline tax during 1928 totaled $11,500,000.

"During 1928 sightseers touring through Canada spent an average of $68.49 an hour in the dominion, the year's total expenditures reaching approximately $300,000,000. Over 2,000,000 automobiles crossed the Canadian border from the United States in 1928."

SPIKED MAT FOR BANDITS.

A spiked mat has been invented to be used to stop motor bandits in London, Maryland. It may also be used at traffic crossings to insure against cars crossing into pedestrians.

MAP SHOWS ALL AIR LINES LEAD CHICAGOWARD

Planes Make Midwest Cities Our Suburbs.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

On the color page of the rotogravure section of today's CHICAGO TRIBUNE appears an airways map of the United States showing the routes flown daily carrying mail, passengers, and express. Its colored lines, stretching out to every corner of the map, tells this important story: In the air, all roads lead to Chicago.

Chicago is connected with practically every large city in the country by the web of air lines. Within a radius of 500 miles are Detroit, Cleveland, Akron, Columbus, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Milwaukee — all virtually made suburbs of Chicago by 100 mile an hour service over the air lanes.

Is Junction Point.

Chicago is the junction point for the longest of all air lines in the world, the transcontinental mail route. Here the Boeing line from the west coast ends and the National Air Transport to the Atlantic seaboard begins. Here, too, begin the air trails to the southeast connecting Chicago with Atlanta, Jacksonville and Miami, and crossing the border to Havana, Nassau, San Juan and Cristobal. Chicago is the starting point for the route to the southwest linking it with the Texas cities—Dallas, San Antonio, Galveston, Fort Worth, Waco, Austin—and crossing the border to Mexico City.

The air line hook-ups make Chicago the trading center of 100,000,000 people, all within eight hours of the city by airplane. Commercial planes now fly at an average speed of 100 miles an hour. Two hundred mile an hour speed for commercial aircraft is an early possibility and when this speed is attained it will make neighbors of Los Angeles and New York. New Orleans, Seattle, Miami will be over-night hops.

27,771 Miles of Airways.

Today there are 27,771 miles of airways operating on daily schedule. Of this figure 17,935 miles are flown by mail planes. Over these lines all planes fly daily 56,342 miles, stopping at more than a hundred airports.

A correct presentation of an airway map is almost an impossibility. The lines on the map change over night, some disappearing, others extending to greater distances. Since the preparation of the map which appears today the department of commerce has announced nearly 7,000 miles of new airways scheduled for early operations. Of this figure more than 4,000 miles will be in air mail lines.

Under consideration are air routes from Washington Buffalo, from Louisville, through Nashville and Memphis to Dallas, opening up new areas in the south. Another new line would stretch from Pueblo through Santa Fé and Albuquerque to El Paso. Still another would connect Pueblo with Dallas. A route between Chicago, Memphis, and New Orleans would open a new artery from here to the south. The great northwest territory will be exploited for the first time by a main air route when a mail line is opened from Minneapolis through Fargo and Great Falls to Seattle.

Will Add to Network.

These new air arteries will add materially to the network over which planes last year flew a total of 10,472,000 miles on regular schedule and carried nearly 53,000 passengers and 1,631,050 pounds of air mail. The tremendous strides in air transportation is shown by comparing this poundage with the 1,232,000 pounds of mail carried in 1927. The record of passengers carried that year is incomplete.

Of particular interest is the projected coast to coast passenger service of the Transcontinental Air Transport company which is expected to be initiated by July 1. Traveling on the train by night and on the multi-motored airships by day the traveler will be able to traverse the country from New York to Los Angeles in two days.

Air transportation across the country is a future plan of the T. A. T. which is now being worked out by the company's technical committee, of which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is chairman. Development of this service will not be possible until the airways are lighted and night flying has been perfected to a point where it will be safe for passengers.

Night Service Not Remote.

The development by Anthony Fokker of a 32 passenger, four motored plane, with accommodations for sleeping berths, is an indication that night flying of passengers is not a too remote possibility. At present there are 7,935 miles of lighted airways with 2,975 miles of lighting under contract for early construction. Approximately 2,000 miles more of beacon lights will be installed or contracted for by July 1.

Air operators are turning their attention to better service for the air passenger. Single motored planes are giving way to multi-motored ships equipped with many of the conveniences of a Pullman. Impractical schedules are being dropped and new schedules, devised for practical use, are taking their place. Through passenger ticket office the air traveler is able to secure through passage to any large city in the country.

Here in consolidated form is presented the schedule for flights between the principal cities, the distance, time, and cost one way for each trip:

Line—	Dis. in miles.	Flying time.	Fare.

COAST TO COAST FLYER

QUESTIONS

Questions relating to aviation are answered in this section by Maj R. W. Schroeder, famous world war flyer, who formerly held the world altitude record. Inquiries should be addressed to the Aviation Department, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Q.—When shooting a machine gun from an airplane do the bullets go through the propeller or on the side?—George Hart, Chicago.

A.—On the ordinary pursuit plane the forward guns are synchronized so that the bullets pass between the revolving propeller blades. This is not a complicated process, being similar to timing a magneto. If one blade is in front of the muzzle when the hammer falls it will be safely out of the way and the other blade not around by the time the bullet reaches the arc in which the propeller is turning.

Q.—Please tell me what education is required to become a military cadet of aviation? Is it easy to become one and what benefit will it be later?—Medard Szczepanski, Chicago.

A.—At present the educational requirements are high school training and two years of college. Appointment to one of the army cadet schools will give the student a chance to complete a very thorough course as a cadet, after which he will be commissioned as a second lieutenant in the air corp reserve and will ordinarily be put on inactive duty. He can then take up work in commercial aviation if he so desires. Details as to this course can be obtained from the chief of the army air corps, Munitions building, Washington, D. C.

Q.—Where can I get a picture of Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis" and how much will it cost?—Harold Westervelt, Menominee, Mich.

A.—The Mahoney-Ryan Aircraft corporation, the manufacturers of the ship, could supply you. The address is Anglum, St. Louis county, Mo. The cost should be nominal.

Q.—Why have some airplanes two blades on propellers and others three and four blades and which are better? What causes stalls?—Eddie Lagona, Chicago.

A.—In general the two bladed propeller is most efficient aerodynamically. With very slow speed motors the three and four blade types are sometimes desirable. The design of the ship may be such that the longer two bladed propeller would interfere with part of the structure in which case, of course, another type would be used as each individual blade would be shorter while the whole would still supply the desired amount of efficient surface on the air screw. Loss of flying speed causes stalls.

Q.—Please inform me as to where I can get some information on the following: Size, weight, strength and construction of monoplane and biplane gliders?—S. S. Morgan, Chicago.

A.—Maj. Reed Landis, 26 East Huron street, Chicago, is an officer of the American Glider association, and will be glad to give you full information.

Q.—What is the present altitude record and who holds it?—Wilbur Murphy, Maywood, Ill.

A.—Lieut. C. C. Champion, U. S. N., attained a height of 38,418 feet on July 25, 19277.

Q.—What are the conditions to be fulfilled by competitors for the 50,000 pound prize offered by the British government? Are only helicopters admitted or can it be won by any kind of aircraft?—Albert Wortman, Chicago.

A.—To the best of my recollection this competition has been open for nearly ten years. The prize goes to whoever submits complete designs for a practical helicopter, the winning design, patents, etc., to become the property of the British government. Write to the British air ministry for full details.

Flivver Plane to Change Our Lives—Babson

Roger W. Babson, business expert, foresees the day of the flivver plane drawing near, with vast changes in architecture, home making, and numerious other phases of everyday life. His conception of the practical plan, the "key" that will open the air to all mankind regardless of station or means, is a plane of the helicopter type—a machine that will rise and descend vertically with safety.

Other features of Mr. Babson's flivver plane include folding wings, pontoons for landing on water, and power driven wheels to drive the machine on the street as an automobile. Several of the features he would have in his ideal plane are already in use, and the most difficult feature—ability to ascend and land vertically—is nearly realized in the primary experiments with the autogyroplane.

Great Changes.

"Fundamentally, this is the flivver plane which I visualize," says Mr. Babson in a recent issue of The Forum. "Granting the possibility of such a design, we can foresee an industry of giant size. Moreover, it will have profound effects upon human life equal to or even greater than the vast changes that can be traced to the automobile industry.

"Some houses will have roof garages reached by electric elevators. Once discovered, the roof may be utilized for other purposes in addition to that of garage. Long rows of apartment houses have a roof area that can well be smoothed and generally redesigned to form a landing field. In our big cities there are millions of square feet of roof area that are now an economic waste. We complain about lack of room, but there is still room at the top.

"These changes, however, seem trifling in comparison with other tremendous readjustments in living conditions resulting from the flivver airplane. We get a glimpse of these possibilities by observing what the automobile has accomplished. The automobile has created the suburbs. The airplane will create the countryside. People who used to live in the city now live 10 miles out in the suburbs. People who now live in the suburbs will live 50 miles out in the countryside.

Lift Earth's Face.

"If these anticipations are realized," continues Mr. Babson, "a mammoth and varied volume of construction is on the horizon. The conquest of the skies will result in rebuilding the face of the earth. For example, poles and wires will be recognized as obstructions and they will be removed and placed underground, on the same principle on which we are spending millions to make our roads more clear and straight. Towering smokestacks will be replaced by power-draught systems. The campaign for smoke prevention will gather new force.

"The plane of the future must be able not only to alight on water but to travel on water. The chief passenger traffic on rivers, canals and lakes may not be boats as we know them today, but planes—planes that are at home in the three elements, earth, air, and water."

IRELAND FLYING BOAT BUILT FOR AERIAL TRAVELER

Is Biplane with Pusher Engine.

This is the seventh of a series of articles describing the 1929 line of American and foreign made airplanes. Another make of plane will be described next Sunday.

The Ireland flying boat offers a combination sport and commercial plane of the amphibian type. In its production the Ireland Aircraft company has aimed to meet the requirements of the sportsman and the aerial commuter for a ship easy to handle on water surfaces.

The general design is the biplane well staggered. The single Wright whirlwind motor is mounted aft between the wings, to protect the occupants of the craft, as the propeller is out of the way. The pusher type of engine is used to give maneuverability, as the full power of the propeller air stream is applied directly to the rudder and elevators. The boat can be swung in little more than its own length and can take off from water in 25 seconds with a full load.

The two cockpits, with wide windshields and comfortable seats for pilot and four passengers, are well forward giving clear vision. The forward cockpit, for a pilot and one passenger, has dual side by side control, with right hand or relief control detachable.

Flying control mechanism is out of the way behind the instrument panel, which has indirect lighting. Engine controls are within easy reach of both seats. The rear cockpit seats three passengers and is furnished in leather upholstering.

The hull of the Ireland flying boat is all metal and streamlined, to afford easy handling on water. The boat is of the two step design with a V type bottom. The nose of the hull is clear to facilitate mooring.

The wings are built of wood. The ribs are built up into a truss reinforced with spruce strips and braces. The fabric wing cover is finished with six coats of "dope" and two coats of lacquer.

The struts are of streamline duralumin and the engine mounting is of tubular steel. There are steps for engine repair. Wing tip floats are attached to the end of the lower wing. The oil tank, holding four gallons, is in the top center section. The main fuel tank, holding 60 gallons, is in the hull at the rear of the cockpit, with an emergency gravity tank of five gallons capacity in the center section.

Ailerons and tail surfaces are of welded steel construction. The horizontal stabilizer is adjustable from the cockpit in flight.

The specifications follow:

Span upper wing	40 ft.
Span lower wing	34 ft.
Length overall	30 ft. 6 in.
Hull beam at forward step	5 ft.
Weight empty	2,250 lb.
Pay load	750 lb.
Useful load	1,358 lb.
Normall gross weight, full load	3,608 lb.
High speed, full load	105 m. p. h.
Cruising speed, full load	85 m. p. h.
Landing speed, full load	43 m. p. h.
Ceiling	12,000 ft.
Climb at sea level, full load	650 f. p. m.

Tests on lakes, rivers, and inlets have shown that a 45 minute taxi run on the water develops no excess heat with normal lubrication, according to the makers of the plane.

FLYER LOCATES HUNTING GROUND NEAR TAMPICO

Word of a hunters' paradise was brought to Chicago the other day by Hobert Rentz, pilot for the Universal Air lines.

Rentz located the good game area along the shore of Mexico, north of Tampico, as he flew southward. It ran for a distance of about 250 miles, in which Rentz said he saw only one tent and a light house. There was a great deal of game, including deer, turkeys and geese and big flocks of wild ducks. Out in the gulf waters he saw sharks and other fish.

CHICAGO BOYS' CLUB PLANS 25 NEW QUARTERS

To Expend $8,000,000 in Five Years.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Life is going to be a bit more pleasant for Chicago's boys arriving in families where there is a scarcity of the world's favorite material—plain long green—if a program engineered by the heads of the Chicago Boys' club is carried through to success. This program calls for the erection during the next five years of twenty-five clubhouses in needy and congested districts at a total cost of $8,000,000.

Each clubhouse, with the endowment to keep it going, will cost $350,000, according to George A. Hughes, president of the Edison Electric Appliance club and the president of the boys' organization.

Mr. Hughes, in telling about the club's expansion program, explained that the new buildings will be similar in appearance and size. They will be three stories in height, with every floor above ground to insure as much sunlight as is possible in this somewhat smoky town of ours.

To Accommodate 3,000 Boys.

Hall, Lawrence & Ratcliff designed the buildings, which will be erected under the direction and supervision of John H. Witter, superintendent of the Chicago Boys' club since 1912. We'd like to tell where some of the buildings will be located, but Mr. Witter explains that it's impossible to reveal them now because such information might complicate the securing of sites.

A typical clubhouse will contain 28,000 square feet of floor space and will have accommodations for 3,000 boy members aged 8 to 18. We'll take a look at the insides of one of the clubhouses via newsprint—a safer way, perhaps, for we ex-boys who aren't quite so nimble as we once were.

Most important will be the swimming pool, which will be located on the ground floor. This will measure 75x25 feet and will have the latest devices for keeping it sanitary—though, as a matter of fact, the latter provision wouldn't worry the youngsters so much, if our memory is any good.

Good Sized Gym.

Also on this floor will be found carpentry, photo, and "tumbling" rooms. And there'll be a print shop, storage rooms, and last and just about as important as the swimming pool, the kitchen.

A step or two to the main floor and we'll find a gymnasium measuring 45x77 feet. This will extend up to the floor above, where there will be a balcony. The gym is to have full equipment for the playing of basketball, indoor baseball, and soccer and other indoor sports. There'll be plenty of equipment for youthful turners, likewise.

One feature of this part of the establishment will be a corrective gymnasium which will have special equipment for boys needing corrective physical culture. Included in this class will come the youngsters whose dads constantly tell them to stand up straight or they'll be round shouldered.

Offices, game rooms, social and club rooms, also will be found on the main floor.

On the top floor there'll be more club rooms, art and music rooms, a library and an apartment for the caretaker.

Comments by Hughes.

In commenting on the work of the Chicago Boys' club, which was founded in 1901 in a single rented room on State street, near Van Buren, Mr. Hughes said:

"The arrests for juvenile delinquency in Chicago could be cut from 20,000 per year to less than 10,000 per year in a comparatively short time if there were adequate facilities for providing boys who roam the streets with proper care. It is the purpose of the Chicago Boys' club to bring this about.

"Notwithstanding our advanced position as a city in parks, playgrounds, social centers and clubs, the fact remains that we have at least 150,000 boys here between eight and eighteen years of age who are growing up under vicious conditions. Uncared for and unguided, they are potential recruits for penitentiaries and racketeer mobs. Within five years we will be able to make provision for 50,000 to 75,000 of them."

Three Club Houses Now.

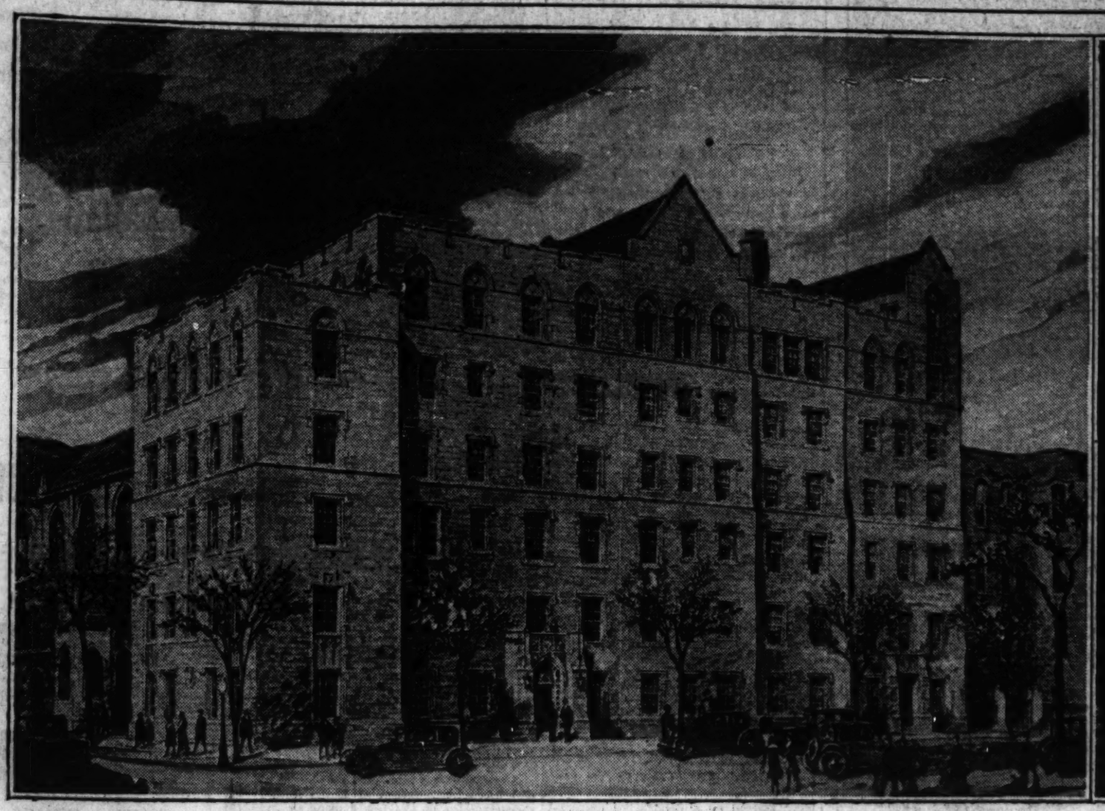
The club now has three buildings located at 1725 Orchard street, 2801 South Ridgeway avenue and 6405 South Hermitage avenue. Last year there was an approximate attendance of 250,000 by the 4,000 members. In addition 1,500 boys were given ten day outings at Winona lake.

Some of the prominent backers of the club are the following: George A. Bacon, W. W. Baldwin, Ames Bell, Frank Barbour, J. Edward Beyer, W. G. Bleed, Dwight S. Bobb, Charles Edward Brown, Paul W. Cleveland, F. Y. Coffin, Charles E. Coleman, J. F. Cornelius, Fred A. Cuscaden, George W. Dixon, George W. Dulany Jr., William H. Dunham, George L. Emrich, Leroy A. Goddard, Jevne Haugan, Marshall Keig, Albert C. Koch, John W. O'Leary, B. E. Sunny, James W. Thorne, and R. L. Whitton.

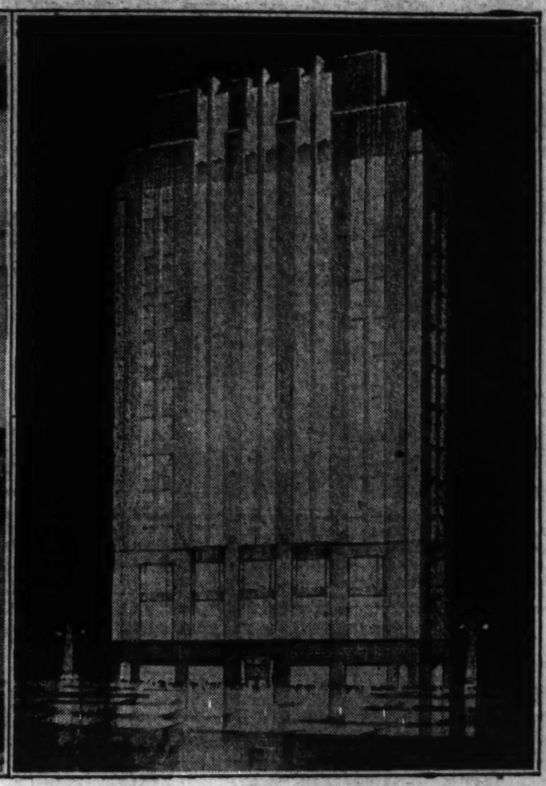
Paul C. Loeber & Co. Made Steuben Building Agents

Paul C. Loeber & Co. have been appointed renting agents and managers of the Steuben building, at the northeast corner of Randolph and Wells.

TWO NEAR NORTH SIDE BUILDING PROJECTS



The new rectory for the Holy Name cathedral, to be built at Cass and Superior streets, adjoining the cathedral, is shown on your left. Joe W. McCarthy is architect and W. J. Lynch contractor. It will house the cathedral offices and provide accommodations for eighteen parish priests. It will be of Indiana limestone and will cost $200,000.



On your right is what may be the world's thinnest office building—a fourteen story structure, designed by Loebl, Schlossman & Demuth. It will front 100 feet on Michigan avenue but will be only twenty-five feet deep. It's to be built directly across Boul Mich from Tribune Tower, at the northwest corner of Austin and the avenue.

Plans 23 Flat Buildings for Vacant Block

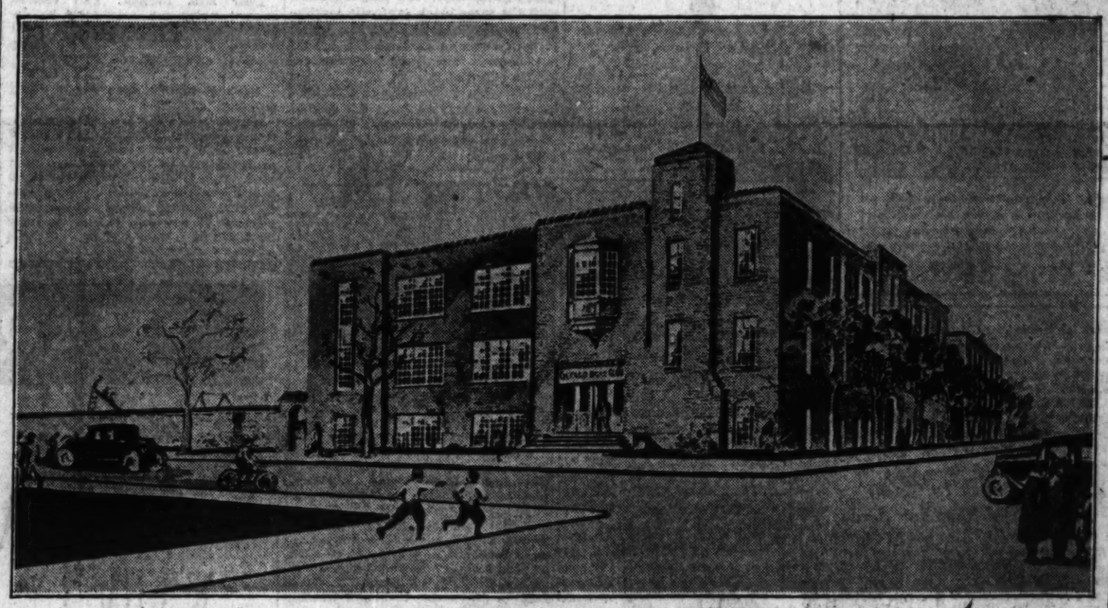
An entire city block is to be improved with apartment buildings costing in the neighborhood of $1,120,000 as a result of a sale reported yesterday by Cramer, Foote & Co. The property contains 1,200 feet of frontage and is bounded by Prairie and Indiana avenues and by East 34th and 35th streets.

This block of vacant was purchased by D. J. Chrissis from a syndicate for which the Drexel State bank was trustee. Mr. Chrissis paid a reported $110,000 for the land.

The new owner has placed the property in the hands of Cramer, Foote & Co., who will subdivide, and at once start a building program which when completed will result in the entire square block being improved. Tentative plans call for four eighteen apartment buildings, one at each corner of the block. In addition nineteen flat buildings, of six suites each, are contemplated.

Charles S. Archer will be the architect for the entire building program. Ground will be broken for the first unit in about thirty days. The block will be called St. Chlotilde manor.

A RENDEZVOUS FOR YOUTH



One of twenty-five clubhouses similar in design and size which the Chicago Boys club proposes to erect during the next five years in congested and needy parts of the city for youngsters between the ages of eight and eighteen. The program will cost about $8,000,000, it is stated. Hall, Lawrence & Ratcliffe are the architects who designed the above building.

POLACCO AND MASON LEASE SUITE IN 999

Maestro Giorgio Polacco and his wife, Edith Mason, both members of the Chicago Civic Opera company, have subleased a furnished apartment at 999 Lake Shore drive for six months, beginning Oct. 1, from George W. Kretzinger. Mrs. Stella K. Polk negotiated the transaction. The suite contains fourteen rooms and five baths. Mr. and Mrs. Polacco now live at 233 East Walton place in a furnished suite rented from Dr. Frederick B. Moorehead.

MORE APARTMENTS FOR AUSTIN

Work has started on the above forty-two apartment building at the southwest corner of West End and Menard avenues from plans by B. Albert Comm. The suites will have three, four, and five rooms. The building will have an elevator, large lobby, and playrooms for both the grownups and youngsters. The site is 52x226 and the reported total investment will be $200,000. Lawrence Monberg made this perspective.

Activity Reported from New Westchester Section

Considerable progress is reported from Westchester—Chicago's new suburb west of the city—where building permits to the value of $169,000 were issued during the month of February. During March George F. Nixon & Co. broke ground for new homes to cost about $36,000, and will enlarge this program shortly. Work on the Roosevelt road viaduct at Westchester is nearing completion.

Empire Products Company Buys Industrial Realty

Charles H. Paschall has sold to the Empire Metal Products company, for whom Wilbur R. Pounder took title, industrial property at 5443 Roosevelt road. The firm is a new concern which will start manufacturing operations shortly. Some $200,000 will be expended in remodeling and equipping the plant acquired. Mr. Pounder is president of the concern. Walter H. Eckert of the law firm of Loucks, Eckert & Peterson is secretary.

Walgreen Company Plans to Build on West 95th St.

The Walgreen company has purchased from Siegfried D. Nagle a parcel 105x109 feet on the north side of West 95th street, 105 feet west of Vanderpoel avenue, in the Beverly Hills district. It is stated the drug store company will erect a building to contain six stores, one of which it will occupy itself and the other five it will lease to chain stores companies.

Real Estate Board to Act on Bargain Memberships

A special meeting of the Chicago Real Estate board will be held next Friday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock to act on the resolution introduced by Edward S. Judd, former president, at the recent merger election held on Wednesday evening. This resolution calls for the reduction of the membership initiation fee from $300 to $25 for the months of April, May and June.

Office Space on La Salle St. Is Near S.R.O.

Renting conditions on La Salle street are extremely satisfactory according to reports from managers of a number of representative buildings on the city's leading financial thoroughfare. A cursory survey of conditions was made following an announcement by John T. Redmond, manager of the newly completed State Bank building at the southwest corner of La Salle and Monroe streets, that this new skyscraper charge of his is more than ninety-nine per cent rented.

The leases taken in the State Bank building are those of the Illinois Manufacturers' association and the Illinois Manufacturers' Mutual Casualty association for approximately 10,000 square feet on the ninth floor. They will take possession May 1.

Mr. Redmond also reports that the National Republic Bank building—for which he is agent—is 100 per cent occupied.

Demand for Extra Space.

"This condition," Mr. Redmond said, "indicates the popularity of La Salle street for offices not only for financial institutions, but for large law firms and commercial organizations. The recent activity in the various markets and the tremendous business handled in so many financial offices has naturally resulted in a demand on the part of these offices for additional space.

"The vacancy in New York's financial district, as of Jan. 1 last, was somewhat less than four per cent, but it would not appear that even this proportion of the total area is available in the La Salle street district."

We'll take up some of the other structures. There's the Rookery—one of the landmarks of the financial district. This noted old building is reported as 100 per cent occupied, with no space available for renting in several years.

Continental Illinois Full.

An official of the Continental Illinois bank, whose building occupies the entire block bounded by La Salle, Quincy, Clark and Jackson, reports his structure as 100 per cent rented with additional space needed for the bank.

The Federal Reserve Bank building across the street is reported as approximately ninety-eight per cent rented. Then the Borland building at La Salle and Monroe is reported as practically full.

Albert H. Wetten's offices report the Metropolitan building as being between ninety and ninety-five per cent rented, with prospects of raising this percentage shortly.

The Home Insurance building at La Salle and Adams is about ninety per cent occupied and the Otis building at Madison and La Salle is about ninety-five per cent occupied. This survey does not attempt to list all the structures, but is given as an indicator of conditions all along the money street.

NEW BUILDING WILL REPLACE COSMOPOLITAN

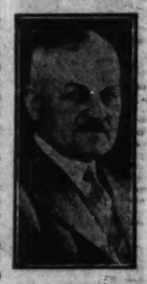
Schmidt, Garden and Erikson are drawing plans for a seven story building to replace the present Cosmopolitan State bank, of which Gustave F. Fischer is president, at the northeast corner of North Clark street and West Chicago avenue. According to Mr. Fischer foundations will be installed for eleven or more additional stories. The present structure is 115x156. Details regarding the cost, etc., are to be made public later.

SLENDER SHAFT WILL BE ONLY 25 FEET WIDE

Maytag Buys Boul Mich Building.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

A silver skyscraper—perhaps the thinnest ever built—the establishment of a new high record for upper Boul Mich property values, and the entry of the Maytag washing machine millions into Chicago real estate on a large scale through purchase of a new Michigan avenue office building are the headliners in today's realty news. And all of this interesting trio of events takes place in the two blocks of Upper Michigan between Austin and Grand avenues.



F. L. MAYTAG.

The entrance of F. L. Maytag of Newton, Ia., perhaps the largest manufacturer of washing machines in the world, into the local realty field is probably the most significant of the day's real estate items. Mr. Maytag has purchased control of the new sixteen story McGraw-Hill building, a $3,000,000 structure now nearing completion at the southwest corner of Grand avenue and Michigan boulevard, by buying a majority of the capital stock of the Michigan-Grand Building corporation.

Mr. Maytag will become president and also a director of the Michigan-Grand building corporation, succeeding Roger Sherman of the law firm of Tenney, Harding, Sherman & Rogers. The name, McGraw-Hill building, and the management, Hall & Ellis, will remain unchanged.

May Be World's Thinnest Skyscraper.

Now to tell about the most spectacular item in today's list—the fourteen story sliver skyscraper announced for the northwest corner of East Austin avenue and the boulevard. This will be one of the thinnest tall buildings in the world, if not the slenderest. It will be only twenty-five feet deep.

Looking at it from the front, it will seem a normal American skyscraper, although more modernistic in its architectural design than customary in new Chicago office buildings. It will have a frontage of 100 feet on Michigan avenue, which will give it an imposing façade.

The boulevard motorist or pedestrian, however, will get a shock the first time he glimpses the new skyscraper from either the north or south. The wide, imposing building goes back only twenty-five feet from the sidewalk.

Other Slim Ones Seem Thick.

For the person to whom figures mean little or nothing we might call attention to the fact that the 333 building, which, seen from Michigan avenue north of the bridge, seems to be and actually is about the narrowest Chicago skyscraper, is almost two and a half times as wide as the "430 North Michigan Avenue building" will be. The 333 tower is approximately 61 feet wide.

The Mather tower, which certainly seems to be unusually slim and tall, is approximately sixty-five feet wide, which is more than two and a half times as wide as the new Michigan avenue skyscraper will be. The Monadnock block, also one of the city's narrowest tall buildings, is sixty-six feet wide.

Loebl, Schlossman & Demuth are the architects of the new north side skyscraper. They state that work will start within a few weeks, with the expectation of having it ready for tenants by the first of next December. The building, it is stated, will cost $500,000.

Establishes New Record.

The 25x100 site is owned by James S. Kirk & Co. and has been leased to the 430 North Michigan Building corporation for ninety-nine years beginning April 1, 1929, at an annual rental of $25,000, or $2,500,000 for the term. Figuring this on a 5 per cent basis, it establishes a record value for upper Michigan avenue—namely: $500 per square foot, or $500,000 for the entire site.

The lessees have a fifteen year option to purchase the property at any time within the first five years for $555,600; for $625,000 within the second five years, and for $741,250 during the last five years.

Plan Lighting Effects.

Now a word about the building's exterior. It will be of imported marble for the first floor. The second and third floors will be of Indiana limestone. The stories above these will be of face brick, with limestone trim on all sides. The structure has been designed for some unusual night lighting effects.

The building, which will be directly across the boulevard from Tribune Tower and just north of and across Austin avenue from the Wrigley building annex, will be built on caissons. It will have two stories below the boulevard level. The Lundell-Bicknell company has been awarded the general contract.

Pauman & Lawrence will be the renting agents of the new building. Sonneneschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson are the attorneys for the lessees. Cutting, Moore & Sidley represent the lessors. The brokers were G. E. Baumbach of Willoughby & Co. and C. J. Hambleton of Broomell Brothers.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

SUGGESTIONS FOR LIGHTING LIVING OR DINING ROOM

Variety of Fixtures from Which to Choose.

[Next week will appear an article on correct lighting for kitchen, bedroom, and bath.]

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

Adequate lighting—correct lighting—artistic lighting; achieve these three essentials in the lighting of any living room and dining room and you have illumination de luxe.

The living room, first of all, should be provided with possibilities for several types of lighting, for it is a room which is the stage for various functions, some formal, others informal, and each demanding special types of lighting fixtures.

For example, overhead lighting is always a wise provision, for there are many occasions—cards, groups of friends, formal and semi-formal hours—when one needs general light from a good ceiling luminaire, properly shaded.

But to provide only one lighting effect is not sufficient. It limits one's possibilities and generally results in dissatisfaction.

The handsome chandelier, wrought in the manner of the period furnishings, throws a pleasant light over the entire room. Wall brackets, shaded, and livening up the walls with their slight touches of light, lend a finishing touch to the whole scheme.

Wall Brackets Useful.

"Shaded" wall brackets are mentioned because wall brackets that are too bright can be a real source of discomfort. Wall brackets, while serving a certain usefulness, are after all vital spots of ornament, and if well chosen can possess as much decorative value as any piece of furniture.

Besides these two types of lighting fixture, there are portable floor and table lamps, colors blending, not struggling for supremacy, and each lamp with its particular field for service; flanking a chair perhaps, setting off an octagon table, hovering over a couch end for reading, and providing twilight and shadows and appealing glow.

There are many occasions when the only lighting of a living room is obtained from the light which escapes upward from lamps open at the top. Many women prefer portable lamps which have closed tops. This type, however, often results in there being insufficient light in a room, sometimes making it difficult to distinguish the faces of those with whom one is talking. When portable lamps with closed tops are used, other soft lighting is generaly brought into play.

Have Numerous Outlets.

Ceiling heights vary, and where ceilings are low fixtures are needed which have their mass as high as possible; otherwise they are in the way.

Convenience outlets should be numerous and where wall space is broken by doors, window seats, French windows and so on, it is a good plan to install one or two duplex outlets between each opening.

The dining room, differing from the living room, is used usually for one purpose, eating. Therefore the table which is the center of interest should have the major part of the lighting directed on it. This is best done by a good luminaire or central lighting fixture.

There are several outstanding styles of luminaries for use in the dining room.

The dome is extremely popular, mounted low that the lamp may be hidden, with the dome bottom some twenty-four inches from the table top.

Candle fixtures, or the candelabra, are much used and if well shaded and well chosen are attractive and efficient.

Shower units, giving direct light, are obtainable in a variety of styles and provide efficient, satisfactory lighting.

Semi-indirect bowls, not so "fashionable" as formerly, give a well diffused illumination, throwing light on the ceiling where it is redirected to all parts of the room. There are still many who prefer this type of lighting.

Brackets are decorative in the dining room as in the living room and if well shaded and provided with small lights, or equipped with bulbs of softened shades, can be made extremely artistic touches.

Convenience outlets are needed in abundance for electric candles on table and for electric cooking devices.

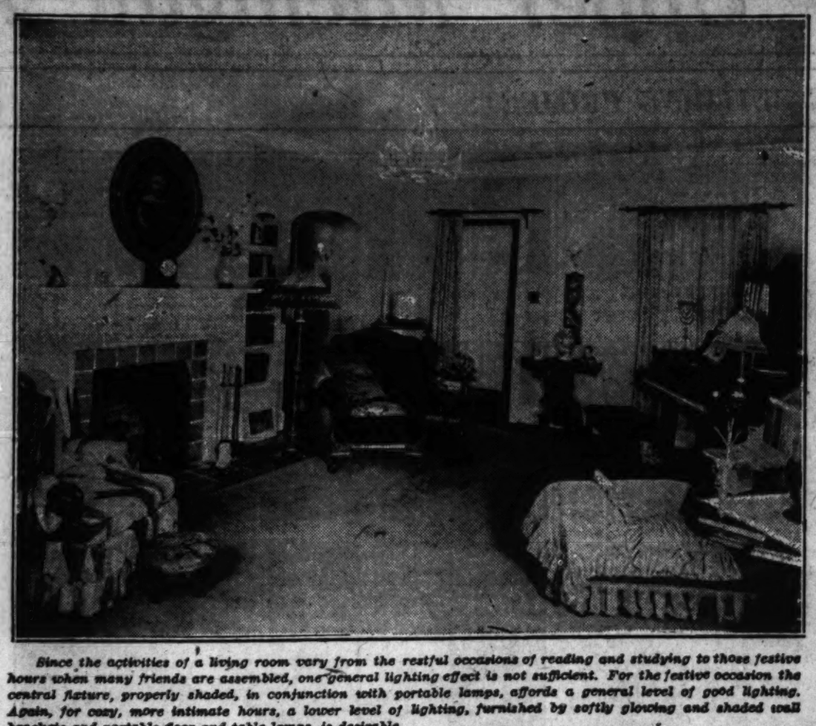
Nor should there go unmentioned the purely ornamental uses of light. American designers have been experimenting and producing very clever examples of these decorative light ornaments.

Some Novel Effects.

Silhouettes, perhaps a ship model, hiding a lamp illuminating a background; translucent vases, fish bowls of special construction, wall plaques of translucent material, with designs etched in low relief, artificial windows, built in to add a touch of interest to a dark hall or flower boxes, mounted above the eye level in the sun room and containing artificial foliage used as housings for cove lighting lamps and reflectors. Gracefully modeled figures holding tiny globes of light or perhaps a charming bouquet of exquisitely designed flowers in the heart of which is a small electric bulb.

There are so many ways of lighting for use and decoration that this subject is well worth serious study and attention on the part of the home owner.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ILLUMINATION



Since the activities of a living room vary from the restful occasions of reading and studying to those festive hours when many friends are assembled, one general lighting effect is not sufficient. For the festive occasion the central fixture, properly shaded, in conjunction with portable lamps, affords a general level of good lighting. Again, for cozy, more intimate hours, a lower level of lighting, furnished by softly glowing and shaded wall brackets and portable floor and table lamps, is desirable.

DECORATIVE WALL BRACKETS

Decorative wall brackets have two definite purposes—to provide an artistic touch of light and color and to illuminate upper sidewalls and ceilings. Here we see them on either side of an effective painting, their shields as large as is compatible with artistic taste and extending far enough on each side so that there is no possibility of seeing the light bulb behind them.

A PORTABLE LAMP

The portable lamp—ever an attractive and decorative feature in the home.

April Is Month to Open Up That House for Birds

How about your bird house? Is it ready for the return of the martins, which takes place usually in April? Bird houses must be cleaned, and if they have been closed for the winter they should be thrown open now.

TEXTILES WHICH SHED WATER ARE USEFUL TO HOME

Wherever waterproofed material is required, silk may be used, waterproofed on both sides without rubber.

Cotton materials may also be used, if they are so waterproofed that the colors do not run.

In the bathroom shower curtains may be used, with window curtains to match, and charming color and lighting effects may be obtained in sun parlor, bedroom, kitchen, or bath—in any room in fact where materials must stand up against conditions of dampness.

These fine textiles are economical because they are not only durable but present no laundry problem. These may be simply rinsed in tepid water and allowed to dry smoothly without any necessary ironing.

MARBLE MADE IN WORKSHOP SAID TO HAVE MERIT

Described as Both Durable and Attractive.

BY HOMER GRANT.

There is a synthetic marble, made by chemists from some twenty balanced materials, which is said to be more durable than nature's product, and, in some eyes, even more beautiful.

Pronounced by leading modernists of France, Germany and this country to be the wall and ceiling material which strikes the contemporary note de luxe, it possesses that rarest of combinations, high quality sanitation and permanence coupled with exquisite beauty of color and texture.

A synthetic marble, unlike natural marble or stone with dignified austerity of coloring, it owns a warmer glowing surface that catches the varying hues of the spectrum and diffuses light agreeably.

Coming out of the crucible it is moulded into slabs of varying thicknesses. These slabs possess a smooth lustrous face of glasslike texture. It may be had in pure white or glistening black or in an infinite variety of color shades—ivory, orchid grays, greens and blues. It is extremely hard and does not chip. Acids do not hurt its surface. A moist cloth is all that is necessary to keep its surface spotless.

Perennially young, there is no upkeep involved since it neither discolors nor cracks, warps nor chips.

Handsome modernistic effects may be worked out with this synthetic marble. Indeed as a decorative material its possibilities are many and it is being found in many fields. Architects use it to obtain modernistic effects.

Take a bathroom for instance. A modernistic effect may be obtained by installing wainscoating of black synthetic marble five feet from the floor. Cap this with a stripe of deep green and above this a margin and ceiling of ivory. The white tub may be faced with the same black synthetic marble, and the floor tiled in black and white. If bath rug and curtains are carried out in green and ivory the color ensemble is complete.

Distinctive decorations of this kind are easily obtainable and the cost of this material is not high; it can be afforded by the owner of the moderate priced home.

MEDICINE CHEST TO KEEP POISONS FROM CHILDREN

Ever worry for fear the children might get into the bathroom medicine chest and drink some medicine or lotion that if not deadly poisonous might make them pretty sick and miserable?

Now we see bathroom drawers appearing, finished in white enamel to match standard white tile, which may be, if desired, painted or lacquered to harmonize with any color scheme. This drawer, of heavy gauge metal, is installed in the wall, together with a metal shell which the drawer fits into. This drawer is equipped with a lock so that medicines, especially poisonous medicines, may be kept away from the children.

It is possible, if desired, to have several drawers placed at convenient spots in the bathroom walls or again they can be arranged in tiers to resemble in style a chest. These drawers are simple to install whether the wall is of plaster or tile.

Answers to Questions on Home Owning

For Rust Proofed House

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Just what is meant by a rust proofed home. We have been advised to use copper, brass, and solid bronze in the building of our new home. Just what items would come under the above head? Would we really save "in the long run"? Where does deterioration first show and what is most important?

Answer—Copper, brass, and solid bronze are enduring materials which, although costing more at the start, undoubtedly save more than the "price difference" over a period of years in their freedom from rust and consequent repair bills. If you wish to equip your house in vulnerable places with these materials you can have specified, copper flashings, rain pipes and gutters, brass piping in the plumbing equipment, bronze weather strips, sash chains, screen cloth, solid brass or bronze hardware, and brass underground service. Plumbing, sheet metal work, roofing, and hardware are among the "vitals" of a building and it is there cost of upkeep, replacement, and repair is heavy unless excellent materials are used.

Wash Off Calcimine

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: We have a library that has been calcimined for a number of years. We want to apply plastic paint on the walls now. Can we apply over the calcimine? A. K.

Answer—No; you had better wash off the calcimine in the usual way.

On Coloring Birch

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Is birch one of the really "hard" woods? What shade flooring can it be obtained in? How about using it with colored enamels? Does it hold the color? Is there any substance in birch to work through and stain? E. W.

Answer: Birch is a hard wood. You can have birch floors in the slightly reddish color of the heart wood or in lighter shades, or the wood can be stained in a color to harmonize with your room decorations. It is an excellent material for enamels, holding enamel well. There is no discoloring substance which will work through the enameled finishes.

Enamel Is Durable

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Can colored enamel finish for woodwork be depended upon for durability? I want something that will last. How many coats of enamel should be used? U. P. T.

Answer—Enamel is a finish which is essentially durable. It is manufactured with varnish as a binder, which explains its resistance against wear. One or two coats of enamel undercoating or flat paint are first used. This is assuming that the wood has never been painted. Then two coats of enamel are given to complete it. If you are only doing some "refinishing" work one or two coats of enamel are needed.

PACKERS BUY PERSHING ROAD-NORMAL CORNER

The Brennan Packing company has purchased the southwest corner of Pershing road and Normal avenue, 297x596, from the estate of Randall W. Burns, for an undisclosed price. The group of one, two, and three story buildings recently were appraised at $135,000 and the ground at $325,000.

The property had been in the seller's family since 1879, having been purchased at that time by John H. Clough, one of the pioneers in the packing industry in Chicago, for $9,500. Naumann & Steuer were brokers for all parties.

FARM AND GARDEN

OLD COLONIAL IS NEW STYLE FOR GARDENERS

Flowers, Food and Fun on One Back Lot.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Scores of home owners interested in landscaping their back yards are standing on the fence and don't know which way to jump. The grass is green in both flower and vegetable gardens. Within the last decade definite influences have been working to lure the prospective gardener first into the vegetable garden and then more recently into the flower garden.

The momentum of war gardening kept up for several years and encouraged many back-lotters to grow vegetables. Frequently they turned their entire lot over to the production of vegetables and neglected flowers.

Then two or three years ago opposite forces set to work. And since then vegetables have been neglected as the flowers were when carrots, peas and beans held sway in the garden. But old colonial patterns in gardening are coming back in style.

The purpose of this article is to show that it is not necessary to slight either flowers or vegetables, and to indicate a plan that is being used successfully to grow both in the same yard. Through all the changes from flowers to vegetables and back again many families have continued with their colonial gardens. In it flowers, vegetables, small fruits, and herbs are all grown around the home.

Colonial Is Ideal Plan.

After all, the colonial is the ideal plan for a great majority of suburban and farm gardens. It is particularly valuable in cities and suburbs, where it is often necessary to utilize every inch of ground.

Gardening is work for the farmer and fun for the average city gardener. Suburbanites would likely care little about gardening if they could walk to a set of electric switches at the corner of the garage and punch a button for each operation in the garden. They get their fun out of digging, drilling, fussing with plants, and fighting bugs. That's work and worry for a farmer, but it is exercise and recreation to the city man. Many a suburbanite would rather hack with a hoe for half a day than to swing a golf club over an eighteen hole course.

It is because gardening takes the place of golf, horseshoe pitching, croquet, tennis, rowing, and swimming that the colonial scheme of landscaping appeals to hundreds. It gives a chance not only to develop picturesque features but has its economic angle, furnishing a place for enthusiasts to try their luck at growing superior specimens of flowers or vegetables.

Acres of ground are not needed for the colonial garden; it fits the average size suburban lot. A back yard 50x75 feet, laid out in colonial fashion, will furnish ample room for the growing of a complete assortment of annuals, perennials, and bulbous flowers and a long list of the common vegetables in addition to herbs and such perennials as rhubarb and asparagus.

Green Center Strip.

In the colonial garden the lawn area is often limited to a sod path down through the center. The area ordinarily left for a putting green, croquet ground, or a place for children to romp is turned over to the growing of flowers and vegetables which may be planted in rows. Under this plan the garden may be regarded as a playground; every member of the family will be able to find something to do. Some of the work of spading, hoeing, weeding, watering, and harvesting can be done even by small children.

The whole garden should be framed with a four to eight foot border of perennial flowers. The width of the border will depend upon the size of the garden. A four foot strip is wide enough for the average city or suburban lot.

On a lot fifty feet wide there should be a five foot strip of grass grown down through the center of the garden. If sod is not available for the making of this strip sow a good lawn seed mixture. It is safe to use a combination of Kentucky bluegrass and redtop, mixed at the rate of four pounds of bluegrass to one pound of red top seed, sown at the rate of five pounds to each 1,000 square feet of lawn space.

Pool at Junction.

The cross path, about three feet wide, may be covered with gravel, brick, or flagged stones.

A water pool may be built at the junction of the paths. Such aquatic plants as water lilies, cattails, and water hyacinths will thrive in the pool.

A seat built under an arbor at the end of the sod path near the back of the garden is effectively framed with climbing vines or roses. The following thrive in this locality: Vines—Clematis, Jackmani; Clamatis, Paniculata; Boston ivy; Matrimony vine, and Virginia Creeper. Climbing roses: Excelsa, red climber; Dorthy Perkins; Dr. W. Van Fleet, and Paul's Scarlet Climber.

There is a long list of perennials for the border. Here are a few: Phlox, larkspur, peony, iris, gaillardia, veronica, shasta daisy, coreopsis, and achillea.

Every good seed catalog lists hundreds of annuals, including such old standbys as these: Ageratum, alyssum, snapdragon, candytuft, bachelor's button, sweet Sultan, chrysanthemum, cosmos, delphinium, garden pinks, four o'clocks, marigolds, mignonette, forget-me-not, petunia, poppy, pansy, phlox, salpiglossis, salva, stocks, sweet peas, verbena, and zinnias. Grow these in rows in the main part of the garden and they will furnish blossoms for cutting and exhibit purposes.

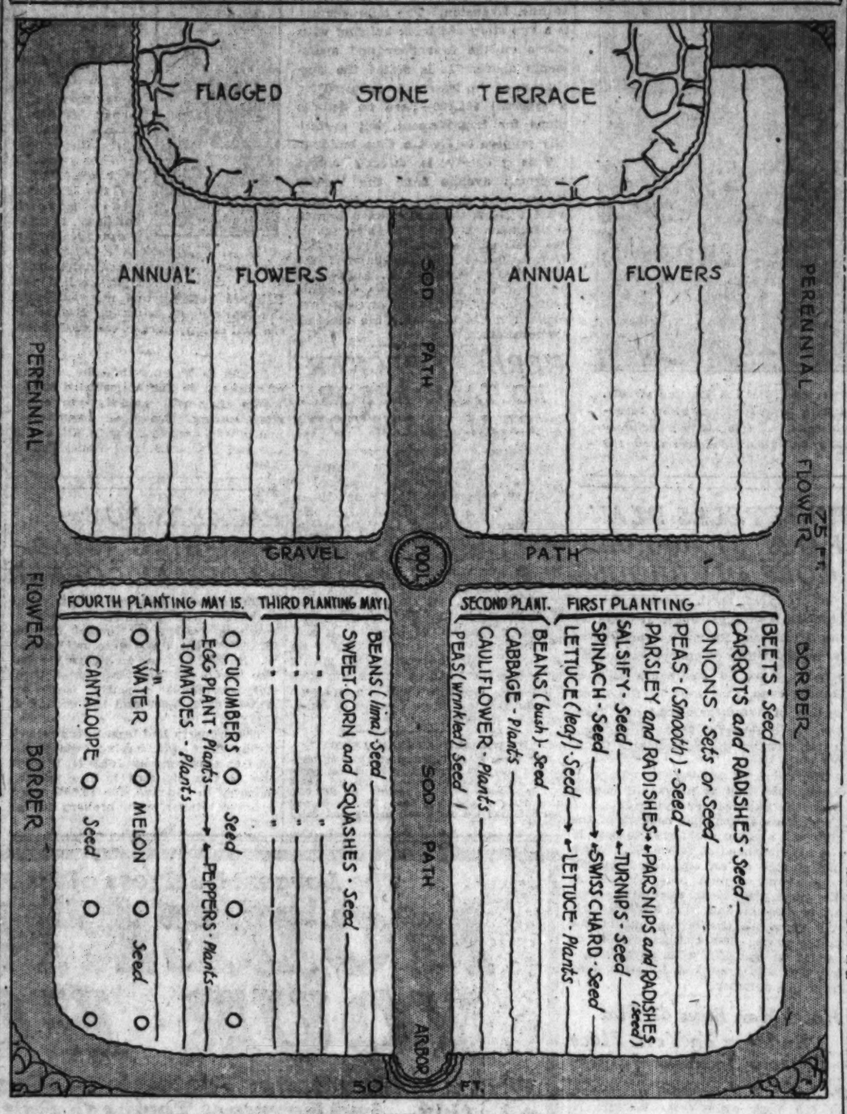
A variety of bulbs and tubers go well in the colonial garden, including tulips, narcissi and gladioli, and dahlias.

Bank of Peas.

Even vegetables are valuable in the garden picture, furnishing a variety of green shades while the foliage is still fresh. They can be planted for their decorative as well as their food value. For example, if rows of garden peas are planted side by side every two weeks they will grow up in stair step fashion and form an attractive bank of light green across the garden.

A wide flagged stone terrace at the back door of the house furnishes a good place for a sun umbrella, comfortable chairs and tables. This gives the family a clear view of the entire garden.

COLONIAL GARDEN PLAN



WHERE EVERY INCH OF SOIL IS KEPT WORKING—Both flowers and vegetables are grown in the colonial garden, roughly sketched above. A clipped privet hedge may be grown around the outer edge. This gives a dark green background for perennial flowers, graduating up from low ones in front to the tallest at the back.

Flowers and vegetables grown under this plan are planted in rows in the four main beds. Aquatic plants may be used in the pool. An arbor with a seat at the rear of the lot makes a good feature if it is covered with such climbing plants as Clematis and Excelsa rose, the red climber.

BREEDERS ASK FOR DUTY ON RABBIT SKINS

Millions of Pelts Come In Free.

Through the American Rabbit and Cavy Breeders' association a movement is being started to secure a tariff on rabbit skins brought into the United States. According to A. Weygandt, secretary of the association, there are from ten to more than twenty-two million pounds of domestic rabbit skins, valued at from $11,000,000 to $26,000,000, imported into this country annually during the last six years.

These skins at the present time are duty free. Mr. Weygandt says that domestic rabbit breeders of the nation feel justified in asking that a tariff of at least 50 per cent be placed on the raw imported rabbit skins.

"We feel that by doing this it will not only protect and encourage more breeders to take up the raising of domestic rabbits, but it will bring into the United States a revenue of several million dollars annually," he said.

The tariff demand is expected to have the backing of association members who are raising rabbits for fur and meat in every state in the union. There are 6,000 members of the organization. It also has among its members rabbit and cavy raisers in Canada, Cuba, Hawaiian Islands, Mexico, South America and Spain.

The rabbit men are encouraged in their effort to get tariff protection because, they point out, that the silver fox breeders were able to secure a duty on raw pelts coming from foreign countries.

BEETS FOR WINTER STORING.

What is the best time to plant beet seeds here in central Illinois for a crop to be stored in the fall for winter use? Please give me the name of a good variety. L. L. R.

REPLY.

Beets may be planted as late as the last of July. They can be planted almost any time after the ground is dry enough to work. For the late crop of beets it is well to remember that it takes from 60 to 75 days for the beets to mature. Seeds planted as late as the last of July would normally have plenty of time to mature for winter storing.

Crosby's Egyptian is a good beet for canning. The Detroit dark red is one of the best varieties for main and late crops which are to be stored. Beets that are to be stored should be given plenty of room to develop. Thin the plants to stand 4 inches apart within the row. Allow at least 12 inches between the rows.

CALLA LILY HAS TWO SPADICES.

I have a yellow calla lily that has two spadices. In this common in the calla? How should I care for calla lily bulbs after they have bloomed? F. S.

REPLY.

In the calla lily one spadix is normal; a flower with two spadices in it is not common. Where more than one appears it is considered a malformation. If your calla lily plant produces flowers with two spadices for more than one season it would be worth while to save it.

The calla is a house plant but is usually kept outdoors in the summer, and in the fall the plants are taken up and repotted indoors. In the summer some gardeners turn the pots down on their sides in a shady place, where they will not need any attention until repotting time—when it is time to start growth again.

THINNING TREE THAT SHADES LAWN.

I have a large tree in my yard that causes so much shade the grass will not grow. Would cutting off some of the large branches cause any damage to the tree? Is the spring of the year the proper time to do this? A. C. N.

REPLY.

If the branches are properly cut off and the wounds painted to prevent drying out and decay, the tree would not be harmed. Pruning should be done as soon as possible before growth begins in the spring. Perhaps the shade from the tree could be reduced by thinning out some of the smaller branches, without cutting off any of the large ones. Winter or early spring is a good time to prune shade trees.

NEWSPAPER IS WORTHLESS AS GARDEN SOIL MULCH.

1. Can newspapers be used as a paper mulch in growing vegetables?

2. How is paper mulch held in place? A. M.

REPLY.

1. No. Newspapers are too frail to be used as a paper mulch. A special paper, impervious to water, is used in mulching gardens to smother weeds and save the labor in cultivation.

2. The paper may be held down by the use of stakes, stones, bricks, and clods.

Farm Management Plan Suggested by Iowa Expert

W. G. Murray, farm management professor of the Iowa State college, Ames, Ia., thinks a farm management association, operated on the same principle as the cow testing associations, would be of value to farmers.

Similar to the cow testing association, twenty-nine or thirty farmers would be included in such an association, and the accountant would spend one day on each farm. The two plans are so similar that Murray suggests one man could handle the work for both associations on the same visit to the farm.

A little foresight will mean a finer garden

THERE is a surprise when you first taste the melting sweetness of Ferry's sweet corn. It is not ordinary sweet corn by any means. Nor is a plump, red, smooth-skinned Ferry tomato like an ordinary tomato. Nor are the Ferry's Seeds that grow these like ordinary seeds.

Remember that when you buy Ferry's purebred Seeds, you buy inherited quality. Quality is bred into the seeds. A careful up-breeding of vegetables and flowers has been going on in the Ferry trial gardens for 51 years. This means that the Ferry's Seeds you can plant today came from parent plants and grandparent plants that were themselves purebred. Sixty thousand tests are made annually in the Ferry gardens for germination. Thousands of other trials are made for size, form, color, resistance to disease. So far as is humanly possible, we determine that every crop will meet the Ferry standards.

Ferry's Seeds are easy for amateurs to make grow well, and are naturally the choice of professional gardeners. They are fresh for planting now, at the "store around the corner." No packet of Ferry's Seeds is ever carried over by the dealer for sale the second season. Send for the Ferry's Seed Annual. It is more than a catalog. Address D. M. Ferry & Co., Dept. H, Detroit, Michigan.

ENTER REALM OF DORIS BLAKE AND MAYBE WIN $50

Offer Prizes for Telling Ideal for Home Mate.

A little first hand research work into the realm of affairs ruled over by Doris Blake will win for some woman and some man a prize of $50. Two prizes of $50 each are being given by the Own Your Home exposition to the woman and the man who best tell the qualities of the opposite sex essential to the establishment and maintenance of an ideal home.

Here are some of the questions asked as a help to contestants.

What kind of people make a home enterprise successful?

What traits of character in a man or woman make a happy home?

Do strong, domineering men who budget the icebox get more coöperation in paying off the mortgage than their weaker brothers? Does a man about to lay down the first payment on a bungalow prefer a clinging vine to decorate it or an efficient business woman to run it. Or are beauty and brains both necessary?

Qualities for Success.

What kind of men and women are most likely to emerge successfully from the many sacrifices—big and little—that often must be made in order to achieve a home of the first class, and will these same attributes remain the home through the years?

Men competing in this contest must submit an analysis of the ideal home woman, and vice versa. In other words, men will not be permitted to advise the ideal man, as this would destroy the purpose of the competition, which is to get the "low down" from the other side.

"We mean this contest seriously," said Robert H. Sexton, managing director of the exposition, in announcing the competition. "It is altogether fitting that in urging home ownership upon the public, we take some means of also calling to their attention the kind of attributes that go to make the home successful. People might visit our exposition and buy the best materials and equipment and put up a fine home, but if the right spirit is not behind it the venture is likely to fail.

"This is particularly true for people of small incomes, for where there is little money to spend the human factor becomes very important. Such people must work together and bring the right qualities to the undertaking."

Rules of Contest.

The winning definitions will be painted in letters of gold in a conspicuous place in the exposition hall as models for visitors of both sexes.

The rules of the competition follow:

1. Competitors must limit their analysis to 100 words, though they may be as short as desired.
2. Name, address, and telephone number must be written clearly in upper right hand corner of all papers submitted.
3. All papers must be in the hands of the judges by 6 o'clock p. m. on Thursday, April 25.
4. Men must submit descriptions of women, and women of men. No deviation from this rule will be permitted.
5. Papers are to be addressed to the Judges of the "Own Your Home" Exposition, 111 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Three well known women will judge the entries submitted by men, and three prominent men will judge the entries submitted by women.

Announcement of the winners will be made on May 2, at the exposition which will be held on the city water works property on Chicago avenue and Pearson street just east of the Michigan avenue water tower, from April 27 to May 11, under the auspices of the Chicago Real Estate board.

NORTH AVENUE AND TROY STREET

Loewenberg & Loewenberg designed the above structure, which is to occupy the northeast corner of North avenue and Troy street. There will be eight stores on the ground floor, and the upper stories will be divided into small apartments. The owner is the North Troy Building corporation, in which the following are the principals: I. Campbell, Carsfield Collins, and Nathan Schwartz. The Garard Trust company is financing the enterprise. Charles Morgan did the rendering.

A permit has been issued for the erection of a fifteen story office building by W. D. Boyce at 34-38 North Dearborn street and an addition to the present building at 30-32 North Dearborn. The cost is placed at $700,000.

The former residence of Charles Hosmer Case at 218-28 Ashland boulevard, just north of Jackson, a residential landmark of that one time fashionable street, has been conveyed by Frederick Pope to Adolph Germer for a reported $25,000. The lot measures 112x200 feet and the eighteen room house was erected about thirty years ago by Mr. Case at a cost of around $75,000.

Dodge & Ascher Rent Shop in the Pure Oil Building

Dodge & Ascher, Inc., manufacturing jewelers, have leased the shop just east of the Wacker drive entrance to the Pure Oil building, for a retail store. Callistus S. Ennis & Co., agents of the building, negotiated the lease.

To April 7, 1909; 20 Years Ago Today

Record was made of the sale by Michael Cudahy to Albert Fuchs of the former's residence at 3128 Michigan avenue for $65,000. Mr. Fuchs gave in part payment his equity in the Netherlands apartments at Kenmore and Lawrence. The Cudahy residence has a lot 75x190 feet and the house is a three story brick structure containing twenty rooms. It will be conducted as a musical conservatory for pianists exclusively by Mr. Fuchs' wife, Mrs. Fanny Richter Fuchs, the pianist.

MRS. FANNY RICHTER FUCHS.

Edward H. Thomas purchased from Edward S. Whitrieg the property in Sheridan road, 200 feet south of Rosemont avenue, 95x200 feet, for $17,750.

The property at 1577-79 West 13th street, 50x125 feet, south front, with brick improvements, has been sold by Charles Boy to Meier Ladon for $22,000, subject to $11,000.

The apartment building at the northwest corner of Wrightwood and Clark, 123x149 feet, has been conveyed by Eva B. and Frank D. Turner to Fritz Karste of Sheboygan, Wis., at a consideration of $150,000, subject to $100,000.

CHARLES H. WACKER.

Mrs. Adele F. Adams has sold 150x120 feet at the southwest corner of Jefferson and Van Buren streets to Joseph Downey for $67,500. Mr. Downey will erect a nine story manufacturing building on this property covering the entire lot.

The McCormick Harvester Machine company has bought the block of land fronting in Blue Island avenue, extending from Western to Oakley avenues, from several owners.

BERWYN BANK TO ERECT $400,000 FIVE STORY HOME

To Be Situated Opposite Burlington Station.

Berwyn's trim little business district opposite the Burlington passenger station is to have an important improvement in a five story building which the Berwyn State bank will erect at the southwest corner of Oak Park and Windsor avenues, adjoining its present home, which has been outgrown.

Designed by Charles O. Liska, the structure will be faced with Bedford stone. It will be of conventional bank building architecture and will be of fireproof construction.

Following the new trend in outlying bank planning, the banking quarters will be located on the second story, with stores and shops on the ground floor. It is explained that this procedure is being followed to help the district, as bank quarters at night, unlighted and not in use, make a blank space of no use in attracting potential customers to shops in the locality.

Will Use Two Floors.

There will be a grand stairway to the banking quarters, which will take up the second and third floors of the structure. A mezzanine floor around the main floor will provide office space for the officials of the institution.

Negotiations are now in progress for leasing the fourth and fifth floors to single tenants.

The bank's present building at 6303 Windsor will be remodeled to conform architecturally with the main structure and likely will be occupied by a department store.

Will Cost $400,000.

The new building will occupy a lot 94x110 feet and will represent an investment of about $400,000. The Berwyn State bank was organized in 1909 and has been at its present location since 1913. It is the largest of the seven banks in the suburb. Edwin L. Wagner is president, Clayton B. Mead is vice president, and Robert W. Teeter is cashier.

Work is expected to start on the new structure about July 1 and it will be completed about the first of 1930. In the same block new buildings are being completed for Woolworth and for the Loblaw Groceterias. And finishing touches are being put to an arcade building for Appleton Brothers.

SUBURBAN FINANCIAL HOUSE

Charles O. Liska designed the above building which will be erected at the southwest corner of Oak Park and Windsor avenues, Berwyn, opposite the Burlington station, for the Berwyn State bank. The structure will cost $400,000.

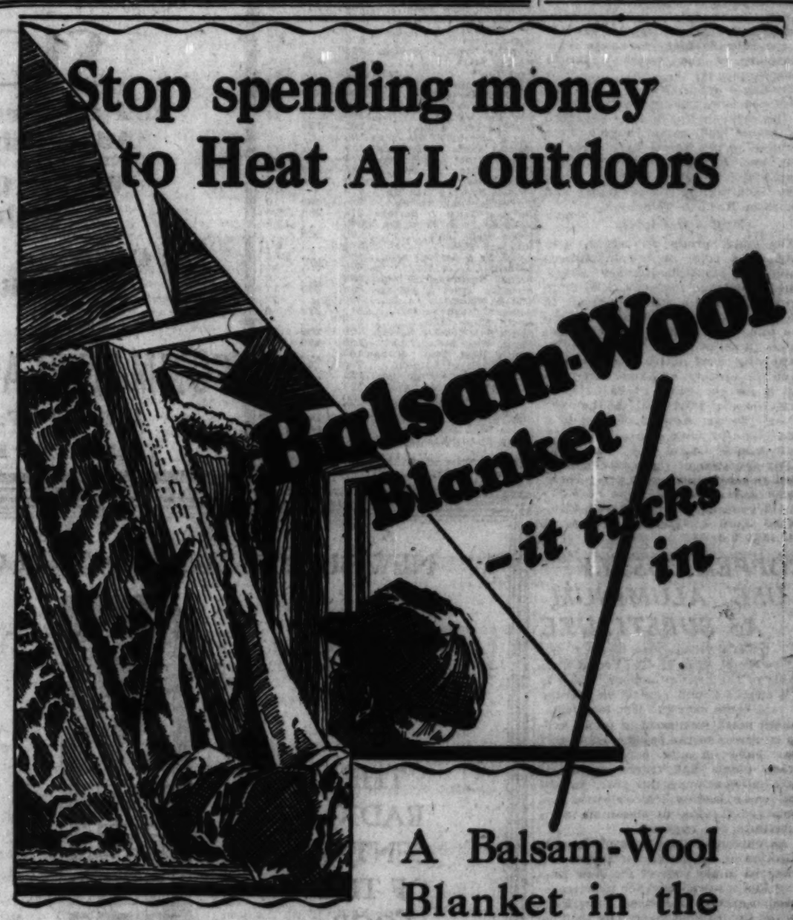
The Kramer company now controls the entire block on Loomis street to 21st place and the entire block on 21st street to Throop street. Stop spending money to Heat ALL outdoors



A Balsam-Wool Blanket in the attic keeps the heat IN . . makes the house livable

DO YOU realize that out of every dollar you spend for fuel at least 33 cents is wasted? A third or more of the heat you pay good money for is wasted—and most of it goes out through the roof.

Stop this costly waste. Make your heating equipment complete and modern—a heat saver as well as a heat maker.

Make your home more livable—warmer in winter, cooler in summer—with a blanket of Balsam-Wool in the attic.

Balsam Wool is TRUE Insulation

Balsam-Wool is flexible. It tucks into every crack and cranny—keeps the heat in and the cold out. It is thick and efficient—is true insulation—and nothing else. Not to be confused with rigid boards made to serve two or more purposes.

Pays for Itself

A Balsam-Wool Blanket pays for itself very quickly in fuel saving. The results are really remarkable—savings of one ton of coal or one gallon of oil in four are not at all unusual.

Any Carpenter Can Install

Any good carpenter can install Balsam-Wool in your attic. Call one in and let him figure the cost, or phone your lumber dealer. You will find it just about the most satisfactory investment you ever made.

BENDIX STOCK MAKES UP 1-3 OF CHICAGO SALES

Due to Hookup with G.M.C. in Aviation Plan.

Active buying of Bendix shares buoyed up the Chicago stock market in the week-end trading yesterday. Bendix soared to 128 from a low of 119 and closed at 127½, up 7 points on the day. Transactions in this issue exceeded 24,000 shares, or more than a third of the total turnover of 70,000 shares.

The movement in Bendix resulted from reports of progress in the formation of a $100,000,000 aviation corporation to be controlled jointly by the Bendix and General Motors corporations. Vincent Bendix and other officials of both companies are in New York working out the details, which are expected to be announced this week.

May Split Stock.

Reports coming to Chicago were that the Bendix corporation will split its present stock on a two-for-one basis, with the stockholders retaining one share in the present corporation and exchanging the other share for a share in the new aviation company. It also was said the Stromberg Carburetor company will be taken into the aviation company by a share-for-share exchange.

While the new corporation is expected to start out as an airplane accessory company, there were reports that eventually it may branch out and become a big factor in the airplane building industry, thus affording the General Motors corporation an aviation division to correspond with the Ford airplane enterprise. It was reported the Bendix-General Motors interests had purchased a half interest in the Scintilla Magneto company, a subsidiary of the American Brown Boveri company.

Trading in other Chicago stocks was quiet and price changes were limited. In the radio group, Steinite advanced 3¼ points and gains ranging from fractions to two points were made by Erla and Raytheon. But Grigsby-Grunow declined 2¼ and smaller losses were incurred by U. S. Radio and American Radio & Television.

Most Active Issues.

The motor group was lower, with losses of a point or two in Auburn Auto, the Houdaille-Hershey issues, Allied Motor and Perfect Circle. Borg-Warner declined a small fraction. In the general list, the Chicago Corporation and Utilities & Industrial issues closed practically unchanged.

The fifty most active stocks traded in on the Chicago exchange last week had a market value of $907,316,120, compared with $899,279,317 at the close of the previous week, according to a compilation by Lage & Co. This is an increase of $8,036,803 or 0.89 per cent.

Only eighteen of these stocks were listed and traded in a year ago. These stocks had a market value of $511,854,622 yesterday compared with $370,366,593 April 5, 1928, an increase of $141,488,029 or 38.2 per cent.

COPPER COSTLY; USE ALUMINUM AS SUBSTITUTE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 6.—The recent high levels of the price of copper, which is 24½ cents a pound, against an average of 14½ cents over the last few years, caused much discussion in public utility circles as to the possible effect this may have on new construction of power plants and transmission and distribution systems this year. In several cases leading hydro-electric systems are turning to aluminum as a substitute for copper.

An outstanding instance of the substitution of aluminum for copper has occurred in the case of the New England Power association for their transmission system at Fifteen Miles Falls on the Connecticut river. The 220 kilovolt lines which will radiate from this power site will use 750,000 circular mils aluminum a. c. s. r. transmission lines, comprising 54 aluminum and 7 steel strands, provided by the Aluminum Company of America.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Stockholders of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation will vote at the annual meeting in May on a proposal to increase the authorized common capital stock from 5,500,000 shares to ten million shares, according to present plans of the management. Common stock now outstanding reaches the figure of 5,375,000 shares.

The United Carbon company is offering stockholders of record April 30, rights to subscribe to additional stock at $50 a share in ratio of one share for every 8½ shares held. The rights are worth around $1.05 a share. The additional stock will be represented by voting trust certificates.

THE TRUTH about NEON TUBING

Competitive manufacturers of Neon Tubing have been for some time past busily engaged in patent litigation.

In the meantime, many people interested in buying signs made of Neon tubing have been disturbed and harassed by having the question of patents and lawsuits injected into the talk of Neon salesmen.

This announcement is published solely for the purpose of simplifying and clarifying decision on the part of the man who is considering the purchase of a Neon sign.

The real truth—the actual facts are herewith set forth so that you may decide your purchase without the element of fear or threat entering into the matter.

Statements that it is impossible to build a Neon tube which is not an infringement of adjudicated patents will not bear the light of investigation.

The legal side of the situation need concern you only as it concerns protection of your purchase.

Q. R. S. Neon Tubing is made under our own and French inventions, for which we hold exclusive United States rights.

Our patent counsel go on record as follows:

"Any statement that there is an injunction against the manufacture of Q. R. S. Neon Tubing with your present electrodes is false."

To the sign buyers of this city, we, the Q. R. S. Co., a million dollar corporation, backed by over two decades of fair dealing, say to you that we assume the entire responsibility for everything we manufacture.

We have a legal right to make and sell all the Neon Tubing we desire and our policy of defending the rights of ourselves and our customers is fixed and firm and set.

The sign buyer who will take the trouble to investigate Q. R. S. reputation and finances, will realize that he gains full protection when we assume responsibility and give our written guarantees.

—we make what we firmly believe to be the best Neon tubing available in this country—and are making it under our own patent rights.

—now—we further guarantee and protect the buyers of our Q. R. S. Neon tubing against loss through so called patent infringement.

—you are free to make your own comparisons of Q. R. S. Neon tubing, quality and performance and select on that basis and that alone.

—make the man who tells you otherwise put it in writing—and send the "writing" to us.

CONFIDENCE OF LONDON MARTS SHOWS REVIVAL

Money Situation Eases Outlook.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 6.—Despite the Easter holidays intervening, with a consequent slacking of business, a revival of confidence is developing in the stock market here due to the Wall street break tending to ease the outlook regarding the money position, though an even more potent influence in this connection has been the success of the Bank of England in adding to its gold stocks during the last few weeks.

Stock exchange interests express themselves as well satisfied with the course of the markets under the recent conditions, though renewed liquidation of popular speculative counters would not create a surprise, considering Wall street's recent fluctuations.

With the budget and the early prospect of the subsequent general election, the market considers it unlikely that there will be any pronounced revival of speculative interest, although conditions generally certainly appear to be in a position to readily respond to any favorable influence. The New York position is now causing little anxiety to market interests. There is now less apprehension of adverse effects here from untoward developments in America, although the fact that no settled policy is observable regarding the credit situation in the United States does not reassure city circles here. Odds are now being rather freely laid against the rise of the New York federal reserve rate in the near future.

Show Less Activity.

New issues show considerable less activity with the advent of the Easter vacation, while the recent experience of underwriters is also tending to restrict the appearance of new speculative flotations.

The feature of the money market in the last week has been the very extensive movements of credit, arising mainly out of the operations of the government connected with maturing treasury bonds and the receipt of the final installment of eighty-nine per cent on one bond issue of last November. The April interest dividend disbursement was also large, while calls upon new capital issues outside government loans were heavy. The market was not unduly disturbed, however, the position not being strained at any time.

The position regarding gold remains satisfactory, a further substantial addition to the Bank of England gold reserve having occurred from arrivals of bar gold from South Africa. Large consignments of the metal are arriving from the Cape in the next few weeks, and the Bank of England is expected to continue its policy of bidding for new supplies. The general outlook of the money market indicates a more confident feeling, although the position of the United States remains far from clear.

American Buying Aids.

Funding loan has also risen to 87⅞, aided by American buying, while conversion loan 3½ per cent shows a pronounced rally at 76 15-16. India stocks also joined the upward movement.

The foreign bond section shows uncertainty, Chinese bonds reflecting the fresh outbreak of hostilities, while Mexican bonds are steadier despite the recent political unrest. The recent forced selling of Brazil and San Paulo loans diminished, but Peruvian corporation issues are weaker on the reported decline in traffics.

PARIS BOURSE STAGNANT

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 6.—The moderately cheerful reopening of the Paris bourse after the Easter holidays rapidly degenerated into utter stagnancy.

The market was entirely devoid of activity Thursday, with practically no buying. Lack of response to selling orders proved sufficient to drag down the entire list, including rentes, for which there was no logical reason for a decline. Most banks likewise suffered, although the Banque de Paris and Banque de France managed to hold their ground.

The reopening of the bourse Tuesday was characterized by firmness, although outside of settlement there was not much activity. Thursday's session of the market was slack. Rio Tintos and other coppers are due for a drop.

Cites Trend in Removal of City Plants

BY SCRUTATOR.

Some small cities, according to the people who keep track of such things, are helping along the often discussed process of decentralization of industry with cash gifts.

Several Indiana towns recently have lured plants to locate with them by raising cash. One purchased $65,000 worth of stock to get a factory after the concern's lease had expired in Chicago. A Wisconsin town is reported to have subscribed $25,000 toward taking another.

In the past some communities in southern Illinois followed the same line and found it profitable. Others didn't do so well with their plants, however, and the buying of an industry in the hope that the pay rolls would take care of the investment and yield a community dividend is not as popular in this state as it was.

In general the cash bonus system to the new concern in town has elements of danger. The money may bring in something for which the vicinity is not naturally suited. Still, the town can seldom be blamed for taking a chance. Often it is a matter of getting something to accommodate a labor supply, with the alternative of seeing a shrinkage in population and business.

Gives an Example.

An instance of the working of economic forces that drive to these lengths was given the writer by a Chicagoan several days ago.

"A certain town in southern Illinois had 500 men employed in mines," he said. "The owners of the mines found that it would pay to put in labor saving machinery. This was done, with the result that the number of miners employed fell to 165. Something had to be done to keep the other 335 men and their families, who supported a considerable part of the retail business. Under the circumstances the townspeople who had money were quite willing to aid in financing anything that promised to employ the local labor."

Decentralization, it may be said, is taking place. But the term is used rather loosely and there is doubt that it will take the form of a general exodus from crowded centers to villages or small towns. Detroit is still the center of automobile manufacture, although assembly plants are being established, or have been established, by the larger companies in many localities. Usually these assembly plants are in communities that already are of considerable importance industrially. A smaller proportion of cars will be completed in Detroit, but the places to gain pay rolls include cities like Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Atlanta, and Los Angeles.

Extent of Expansion.

The evidence at hand so far points to a continued growth of metropolitan areas and the establishment of more industries in them. One Chicago real estate man has figures to show that the number of plants established in the city and suburban areas in the last two years averaged two a day, far more than enough to counteract such movement as may have occurred to smaller communities.

Big cities grow bigger, but not necessarily more congested. It has been noted that the tendency of such communities is to spread out. The Chicago industries have been reaching toward the boundaries of the switching district. Residence suburbs grow faster in population than city residence districts. Decentralization, possibly, will mean smaller plant units—there is a well founded belief that many are already too large for efficiency—and more loosely knit metropolitan areas, rather than a Begira of industry to the real country.

U. S. TRADE WITH SOUTH AMERICA EXPANDS 60%

Washington, D. C., April 6.—(AP)—An increase of 60 per cent in South American purchase of American goods as between February this year and the same month a year ago was indicated today by commerce department figures. The expansion of the American exports this year in nearly all parts of the globe was disclosed by the department's calculation of trade by countries, but European and other world purchasers did not equal the great stride of the export figures for South America.

February exports to Great Britain were $69,629,140, against $68,924,123 last year, and imports were $25,494,810, against $28,798,970. To Germany exports were $34,529,556, against $37,424,206, and imports were $21,482,360, against $19,226,904.

Exports to France were $24,407,710, against $15,757,898, while imports were $13,798,776, against $13,918,267. Canada remained the greatest individual trader with the United States on the month's figures, exports being $71,000,180 against $60,783,518, while imports from Canada were $36,982,847, against $36,369,941.

O. K. MERGER IN VAN SWERINGEN RAILWAY PLAN

Marquette-C. & O. Deal Allowed.

Washington, D. C., April 6.—(AP)—Permission to complete the merger of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway with the Pere Marquette system on terms satisfactory to the Van Sweringen interests was granted today by the interstate commerce commission.

The Chesapeake and Ohio company was given authority to pay $133.33 a share for all Pere Marquette stock held by the Nickel Plate railroad, to pay that price for any other Pere Marquette stock obtainable during the coming year, and to finance the transaction by selling $30,000,000 of its own common stock to its present stockholders at par.

Dominate Affairs.

The decision cleared away several obstacles to the merger of the two roads, and complied with petitions presented in behalf of the carriers and in behalf of O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen of Cleveland who dominate the affairs of all three systems.

By the commission's original decision, the Chesapeake and Ohio, whose common stock is now selling above $200 a share on the open market, would have been required to finance its Pere Marquette acquisition by selling 200,000 shares of its own stock to its stockholders at $150 a share.

The road protested the fixing of a price above par and today's order will allow stockholders to acquire 300,000 shares instead of 200,000, of new Cheasapeake and Ohio stock and to pay but $100 per share for it.

Further the Chesapeake and Ohio will be allowed to purchase 174,900 shares of Pere Marquette common stock from the Nickel Plate railroad, which now owns it, for $133.33 a share, the previous decision having limited the figure at $110. The Chesapeake and Ohio also was given authority to pay $133.32 for any other Marquette shares that might be available.

Commission Not Impressed.

The commission in rescinding the order fixing $150 as the Chesapeake and Ohio stock price declared that it was "not greatly impressed with the advantages of issuing new stock at par rather than at $150 per share," but that "latitude in action must be preserved to private management."

Commissioners Eastman, McManamy and Taylor dissented, Eastman declaring himself "somewhat at loss to know what it is thought will be accomplished in the public interest by this transfer."

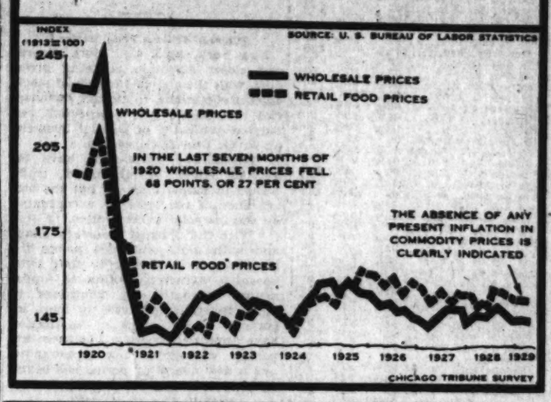
The General Level of Wholesale and Retail Prices Has Varied Little Since the Big Post-War Deflation



CHICAGO BANK STOCKS ARE LOWER DESPITE GENERAL ACTIVITY

Although Chicago bank stocks were fairly active last week, the general trend was toward lower levels.

Shares of the new Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company were in good demand, closing 675 bid, 680 asked. Central Trust Company of Illinois forfeited its gain of last week, receding to sales at 558 to 562. State Bank of Chicago was likewise lower at 790 to 800. Chicago Trust held steady at 560 to 565. Northern Trust company was again under pressure, being in supply at 340, with best bids at 320.

First National was also heavy and lost 7 points at 897 to 902. Five hundred and twenty-five was bid for Peoples Trust and Savings, but sellers were not apparent. Foreman National was wanted at 990, with offerings at 995. Union Bank of Chicago was again in supply at 440. There were a few reported transactions in Straus National at 385.

A lack of buying interest in National Bank of the Republic caused this issue to drop from early sales at 248 to a close of 242 bid, offered at 244.

Gains and losses were fairly well distributed in the industrial group. Aviation Securities continued to advance and on a large turnover gained 2 points, closing 26½ to 27. Elgin National Watch was 3 points easier at 59¾ to 60Q, while Davis "B" was 2 points higher at 9 bid, offered at 9½. Jenkins Television reacted from early sales at 13¼ to 12⅛ bid, 12½ asked. Chicago Title and Trust showed a better tone, being lifted 10 points to 605 bid, offered at 610.

Pyle National continued in demand at 30, while the preferred was wanted at 106½. Greenebaum Sons Investment company showed a better tone, rising from early sales at 42 to closing transactions at 43¼.

Week's Debits Increase Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Chicago Federal Reserve bank for the week ended April 3 by 249 banks in 38 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district aggregate $1,967,439,000, an increase of 10.3 per cent compared with a week ago ($1,783,824,000).

ELECT CUTTEN TO BOARD OF C. G. W. RAILROAD

Arthur W. Cutten was elected a member of the board of directors of the Chicago Great Western railroad at a special meeting held yesterday. Mr. Cutten was the third new member elected to the board last week.

At the annual meeting held earlier in the week John W. O'Leary, president of the Chicago Trust company and Patrick H. Joyce, vice president of the Standard Steel Car company were elected to the board. Both men were recently heavy purchasers in the common and preferred stock of the Great Western. Although it is not believed that Mr. Cutten is closely allied with the O'Leary-Joyce interests his election is interpreted as a recognition of the Detroit and Cleveland interests which are said to have bought a block of the railroad's stock.

Mr. Cutten succeeds George H. Prince was was reelected at the annual meeting, but resigned shortly after.

"I know nothing about railroading," Mr. Cutten said following his election, "and I intend to look into it."

Trading in Fresh Meats Quiet, Armour Reports

Armour & Co. in its review of general packing house trade conditions says: "Rather quiet markets tending to be unsatisfactory characterized most of the leading packing house lines this week. Smoked meats, however, offered a somewhat brighter picture, moving fairly well on a generally firm market."

Offerings of Bond Issues Show Increase

(New York bond list page 8.)

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 6.—With new financing at a standstill except in the state and municipal group and two industrial issues, a total of $62,980,000 of new bonds was offered in the week ended Saturday as against $42,109,000 last week and $228,576,000 in the corresponding week of last year. Activities were held up chiefly by the uncertain credit outlook and the irregular course of the stock market throughout the week.

The offerings by groups of this and last week follow:

	This week.	Last week.
State and municipal	$43,880,000	$7,459,000
Industrial	19,000,000	2,150,000
Public utilities		30,000,000
Railroad		1,500,000
Investment corporations		1,000,000
Total	$62,980,000	$42,109,000

Activities in the state and municipal field were on the largest scale since the week of Nov. 23, 1928, when a $55,000,000 New York City offering helped to swell the total for the group to $89,000,000.

The largest issue this week was $28,000,000 of State of Arkansas 5s, awarded to a syndicate headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., Lehman Bros., the Chase Securities corporation, and William R. Compton company.

Fourteen other individual state and municipal issues were brought out for amounts ranging from $191,000 up to $2,500,000, the larger borrowers including Nassau county, New York, the state of California, the Chicago Lincoln park commission, and the township of North Bergen, New Jersey.

The only industrial financing of the week consisted of a $12,000,000 issue of one year notes by the Fox Film corporation and $7,000,000 of 6 per cent bonds by the Warner corporation.

Engineering Construction Outranks Same 1928 Period

New York, April 6.—(AP)—Engineering construction in the United States in the first three months of 1929 exceeded that of the same 1928 period by $331,200,000, or 42 per cent, totaling $1,122,000,000, against $790,800,000, says Engineering News-Record. Nothing has happened, the publication adds, to warrant fears that stock speculation would react on the availability of money for construction.

Surplus Cars on March 15 Gain Over Previous Week

Class I railroads on March 15 had 238,518 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service. This was an increase of 12,553 cars compared with March 8, at which time there were 225,965 cars.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 6.—Professional traders pushed and hauled the stock market around today, while the so-called public sat on the sidelines. So the Wall Street boys alternately bid prices up and knocked them down and in the end didn't get much of anywhere.

Bear traders launched a vigorous drive in the first half hour on various issues which have had a large public following. But the big and little speculators throughout the country declined to be scared into liquidating their holdings. So bull traders had their inning in the second hour and staged several demonstrations and caused prices to bounce back.

Star Performers.

The net result of the two hours of trading was that final quotaitons were irregular. While gains and losses were about equal numerically, the gains were larger. Trading was moderate in volume, with total transactions of 1,612,100 shares, or at the rate of more than 4,000,000 shares for a full five hour session.

The "blue chip" issues again were the star performers. Adams Express scared 35½ points, National Surety mounted seven points and Otis Elevator and U. S. Express jumped five points each. On the other hand, Case Threshing dropped 19⅜ points and losses of three or four points were incurred by Baldwin Locomotive, International Telephone and Porto Rican Tobacco A.

The railroad group made the best showing, particularly the Van Sweringen issues. Chesapeake & Ohio jumped six points, Chesapeake corporation advanced 3⅜ and Alleghany corporation rose 4¼ points. At the same time, net gains ranging up to nearly four points were made by Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, St. Paul preferred, Rock Island, Northwestern, Delaware & Hudson, Erie, Great Northern preferred, the Missouri Pacific issues, Nickel Plate, New York

ANOTHER BARGAIN STOCK

WE have now uncovered another bargain stock which bids fair to result as successfully for our clients as did our recent recommendations of ANACONDA, NATIONAL CASH REGISTER, ATLANTIC REFINING and others. This new bargain stock:

Could logically advance 50 to 100 points without over-discounting its long pull possibilities.

During the last quarter for which figures are available earnings increased 106 per cent.

Is expected to earn substantially more in 1929 than in any previous year.

Has always shown splendid profits for our clients whenever recommended and is now in a better position than ever before.

The company has reported large increases in earnings but has not yet scratched its ultimate possibilities.

Has valuable and protected patents which are revolutionizing the industry of which it is a part.

Has unusually small capitalization, which condition is likely to cause a sharp run-up in price as earnings improve.

The company is very closely affiliated with other important concerns and several mergers may result in further improving its position.

Is still selling at bargain levels.

Obviously, this stock should be bought now—for a substantial advance. Most likely it will not long be available at its present price.

The name of this bargain stock will be sent to you free of charge and without obligation. Also, free specimen copies of all our current Stock Market Bulletins which fully discuss the profit and loss possibilities in over 50 different securities.

McFADDEN RAPS RESERVE BOARD'S CREDIT POLICY

Philadelphia, Pa., April 6.—(AP)—The efforts of the federal reserve board to restrain speculative loans were criticized tonight by Chairman McFadden of the house banking committee in an address in which he declared the reserve board "should not concern itself about the condition of the stock market or the security loan market."

Speaking before the Five O'Clock club here, Representative McFadden said that the federal reserve management by such action could easily "produce a business slump without really intending to do so." He added that "the public had best be informed that the management of its credit system are determined to restrict credits for the purpose of deflating the stock market."

"If the present restrictions that are being applied," he said, "are continued, the high interest rates may make it too expensive for corporations to finance themselves. There is also grave danger of loss of confidence on the part of the public who may become afraid to buy stock issues. The federal reserve management cannot prevent a corporation or the public from loaning money on call or buying or selling stocks."

Chairman McFadden said that he viewed the duties and responsibilities of the federal reserve board "to be supervision of the total volume of credit and protection of the gold reserve." He declared that he did not consider the recent increase in the reserve banks' loans to stock brokers endangered the gold reserve, nor was there any indication of a general rise in commodity price levels "which is the main indication of inflation of credit."

FRESH STRENGTH APPEARS IN U. S. BOND ISSUES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 6.—Fresh strength in United States government securities due to the easier money conditions now prevailing was the feature of the bond market today. The government list has been on the upgrade for the last two or three days.

The heavy tone in some of the popular stock issues today had an adverse effect on convertible bonds in which there were moderate losses.

Anaconda Copper 7s declined 5½ points on small transactions. The largest volume of trading was in International Telephone 4½s which were offered down 1½ points with some sign of support around 125 which compares with the high of last week. Commercial Investment Trust 5½s selling was again sufficient to keep these bonds around their recent low level. There were quite a number of declines in foreign issues on small offerings.

TRADE TRENDS COMING BACK INTO SPOTLIGHT

Public Interest Wanes in Speculation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 6.—"More general and closer attention is being given now, with the changed aspect of stock market conditions, to strictly commercial movements and prospects," the current summary of general business by R. G. Dun & Co. states.

"Speculative phenomena have for a long time overshadowed trade trends in public interest, but the significance of the latter is accentuated by the financial uncertainties.

"With the unusual monetary phase and with more unsettled prices for securities it is reassuring that business has numerous points of fundamental strength and continues to make favorable progress in most instances. Some signs of hesitation have appeared recently, but these are neither widespread nor pronounced, and a new quarterly period has begun with various promising indications.

Stability of Commodities.

"That there is no tendency toward inflation of commodity quotations as a whole is evidenced by the latest monthly index number, and the comparative stability in this field remains a bulwark in the economic structure. A large aggregate of transactions at small profit margins on individual commitments is the dominant note in reports from the principal centers, and recessions in volume in certain lines are outnumbered by gains in other channels.

"The augmented activity of retail distribution under the stimulus of spring demands is a prominent feature now, while major industries conspicuous for their buoyancy retain this characteristic. A new high record in steel output in the three months lately ended could not have been achieved without an upturn in manufacturing enterprises which are heavy consumers of this material. The importance of this single fact in connection with employment of labor and increased buying power is obvious.

Failures Reduced.

"If further proof of the encouraging commercial situation were needed it could be found in the reduced total of failures, the first quarter's statistics being the best for the period in three years. Despite problems and drawbacks, business has manifested underlying solidity, although its extensive ramifications naturally lead to irregularities and contrasts."

Convertible Securities.

During the last year many issues of convertible securities have been put on the market. This is a common form of financing during periods when the general trend of prices is upward.

Convertible securities are issued to attract a certain class of investors who demand a degree of safety combined with an opportunity to participate in possible future prosperity of the nation as a whole and the issuing company in particular.

The popular belief is that such securities enable the purchaser both "to eat the cake and have it." That belief may be justified in some cases, but as a general rule the buyer, in return for the promise of a slice of possible future profits, sacrifices some margin of safety on the bonds that he holds while he waits for better days.

The charge sometimes made that only second rate corporations issue convertible securities is not at all true. Many first rate railroads and public utility companies as well as high grade industrial concerns have put out such securities.

Often Unsecured.

Generally, however, securities of this type are not secured by mortgages. They are most often debentures or unsecured notes. It is necessary, therefore, to be extremely cautious in selecting them. Companies whose credit is wabbly are quick to take advantage of the popularity of convertibles.

The investor should be very careful to choose only those bonds which have real value, regardless of the speculative feature.

There are several reasons for a corporation's issuing bonds which may later be exchanged for stock. When business is good and earnings are high there is a ready market for a corporation's stock. At other times the public will buy only bonds if they buy at all, and the corporation can raise new funds only by the sale of bonds. In order to prevent a permanently excessive ratio of bonds over stocks the bonds may be made convertible.

Why They Are Issued.

The company with few bonds or none at all can weather periods of depression much better than a company which has a large funded debt. In bad times stock dividends can be passed, but defaulted bond interest may mean a receivership. For that reason the conversion of bonds into common stock is often favored by the company.

Then, too, it sometimes happens that a company needs additional funds at a certain time, but does not want to issue common stock at that time because those who hold majority control are temporarily not in a position to buy a sufficient number of new shares to retain control. In that case, bonds may be issued convertible at a later date when those in control believe they will be able to buy in enough shares.

Another reason for issuing convertible bonds may be a desire on the part of the company to protect the stockholders against a depression in the price of their stocks that might result if a large block of new shares were suddenly put on the market.

Stock Purchase Warrants.

There are many other ways in which the principle of conversion is employed in financing. Frequently the sale of an issue of bonds is stimulated by attaching to the bonds warrants which will give the holder the right to buy stock at a certain price during a given period of time. The bonds themselves in that case are not convertible, but the warrants may be sold at a profit when the stock sells on the market at a price above that guaranteed on the face of the warrant.

Being a hybrid, the convertible bond has some of the characteristics of both stocks and bonds. In periods of declining prices the conversion privilege means little and the price of the bond depends on the ordinary factors that determine bond values. When prices are bound upward the possibility of participating in future prosperity boosts the price of the bond.

In purchasing a convertible bond or debenture, it is very important to know the beginning and end of the conversion period. Likewise, every stockholder should know the time when convertible bonds may come on the market. Wholesale conversion of bonds into stock might have a depressing effect on the market price of the stock already outstanding.

RAILROAD NOTES

Erie railroad has ordered 2,530 cars, including 1,000 steel hopper cars, from the Standard Steel Car company, 50 steel automobile cars from the American Car and Foundry company, 500 steel box cars from the General American Tank Car company, 250 steel gondola cars from the Greenville Steel Car company, and 250 steel gondolas from the Bethlehem Steel company.

Unfilled orders for locomotives at the end of March at principal manufacturing plants of the United States were the largest in several years, totaling 488, according to reports received by the department of commerce. This compares with 339 at the end of February.

Week Sees Decrease in Banking Settlements

New York, April 6.—Some irregularities in banking operations, due to the interruption of the Easter holidays, resulted in a slight reduction in the volume of bank settlements this week. Total clearings for the week at all leading cities in the United States, according to Dun's Review, amount to $13,206,838,000, a decrease of 2.0 per cent from those of the corresponding week last year. At New York City, clearings of $9,317,000,000 are 2.1 per cent less than last year's, while the total for leading centers outside of New York of $3,889,838,000 is 1.7 per cent below that of a year ago.

How to Invest $5,000

WE have been asked by many clients to recommend an investment policy for those to whom current income from investments is of no consequence but to whom appreciation in value over the next few years is important. Allied with this have been requests by those who wish to lock up a few shares of stock for their children which may be expected to be worth a good deal more over the next ten to twenty years, as the children grow up or become of age.

Contemplation of what has happened in the last twenty years to many securities which were considered a generation ago to be high grade investments must naturally make one modest in his claims to predict the future of any individual security so far in advance.

An investment of this nature must be well diversified because the farther in advance predictions are made the greater is the liability to error. Another consideration is that the securities chosen must represent lines of industries which, while sufficiently far advanced to indicate their soundness, must be still subject to great growth and expansion. With this background we have prepared a suitable investment for the purpose outlined on the basis of $25,000.

If you have $5,000, this program will meet your requirements.

There are some copies of this bulletin, issued recently to members of McNeel's Service, available free and anyone interested in this investment program may receive it merely by signing the coupon below.

CURB EXCHANGE MAY BAR A STOCK OF FORD MOTOR OF CANADA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 6.—The curb exchange is likely to bar from trading the A stock of the Ford Motor company of Canada, according to Wall street talk today.

This move would be taken despite unofficial reports that the class A stock would be listed on completion of the recapitalization plan by which twenty shares are to be issued for every one share of old stock. Should such A stock be barred, it would deprive Ford Motor company of Canada of a New York listed market for nineteen-twentieths of its capitalization, since in all probability the stock exchange would not sanction its listing there. The curb yesterday admitted Ford Motor of Canada B stock.

The B stock carried full voting power and the 1,900,000 shares of A stock have no votes. The curb has, it is understood, against the listing of nonvoting stock.

A heavy undertone, due to realizing on purchases during the rallying periods of the last week, was noticeable in today's abbreviated curb session.

The selling represented largely the usual week-end adjustments of accounts by professionals who helped to support prices on the recent break.

Interest converged largely again on Ford of Canada "B" new, which fluctuated wildly. It advanced almost 20 points from Friday's closing price in successive leaps of 2 to 4 points, while the old stock also established a new high close to $1,200 a share. There has been a curious mixup in the new issue because of a misunderstanding with respect to the voting privileges carried by the certificates.

DIVIDEND NEWS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 6.—Archer Daniels Midland declared a quarterly dividend of 50c a share on the common stock, placing it on a $2 annual basis, as compared with $4 paid prior to the payment of the 100 per cent stock dividend. The regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share was declared on the preferred.

The Fenton United company declared an extra dividend of $1 a share on the common stock, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $1. The regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the preferred was also declared.

The Citizens National Trust and Savings bank, of Los Angeles, declared a quarterly dividend of 5 per cent. The previous quarterly payment was four per cent.

The New Jersey Cash Credit corporation announced an extra dividend of 15 cents a share on the preferred stock in addition to the regular dividend of like amount. A stock dividend of 1-100 of a share of stock was declared on the common. The Connecticut Cash Credit corporation declared similar disbursements on the preferred and common stocks.

The Pennsylvania Cash Credit corporation declared an extra dividend of 15 cents a share on the preferred, in addition to the regular dividend of the same amount.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, April 6.—Rumors from Washington that the house ways and means committee had decided on an import duty of $2.40 per 100 lbs on Cuban and of $3 on sugar from other countries, compared with a rate of $1.76 on Cuban at the present time, brought in buying in the nearby deliveries, and they gained 1@2 points, while the deferred futures were dull and finished unchanged. Better classes of hogs finished the week on the upgrade but still show 30@40c loss since the high time last Tuesday. Fancy light topped at $11.80, with general average 5c under Friday, due partly to quality on the week-end session.

With 6,400 of yesterday's 8,000 hogs being directs, hardly enough of the fresh supply remained to establish prices. Most of the holdover from Friday are being carried for next week's trade. Only two packers entered the market. Shippers bought only 500.

Shuts Off Supply.

Although the hog market was extremely erratic during the last week, the general average at $11.60 stands within 10c of the highest since early last September and $3.30 above a year ago. A break that carried the top down from $12.15, the season's peak, to $11.55 in two days, almost shut off the supply late in the week and about half of the loss was recovered.

Outsiders during the last two weeks bought only 20 per cent of receipts. A year ago shippers were taking 31 per cent and two years ago 25 per cent. Eleven leading markets so far this year show a total of 8,590,000 hogs, against 10,659,000 a year ago. Weights, however, are running heaviest since early last September and 5@10 lbs heavier than a year ago. Local packers and butchers last week bought 59,800 hogs at Chicago and received 36,400 direct.

The smallest cattle receipts of the year boosted last week's general average price to $13.15, equal to the highest of the year. Prices the previous week averaged $12.65 and a year ago, $13.25, with the five year average at $10.85. Nearly 1,000 steers sold at $14.25 and above.

Only one load brought $14.25 and above the preceding week and 333 head two weeks ago. Prime 1,693 lbs beeves reached $14.75, highest of the year for the weight. Total arrivals at 35,500 compare with 46,277 the previous and with 48,622 a year ago.

Lambs in Demand.

A sharp rise in temperature last week switched more demand to lamb in preference to other meats, as usual in warm weather, resulting in higher prices in face of increased sheep receipts.

Arrivals at 67,200 were third largest since January. Yet prices averaged $16.90, within 15c of the highest since last June. Matured stock averaged $8.60, highest since June, 1928. The year to date total at 20 markets stands at 4,090,000, against 4,030,000 a year ago. Supplies last year were largest since 1919, yet lamb prices since 1927 have been among the highest on record.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 45,000 hogs, and 16,000 sheep, against 11,714 cattle, 32,785 hogs, and 9,601 sheep a week ago, and 12,089 cattle, 21,729 hogs, and 13,365 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 40,000 cattle, 105,000 hogs, and 62,000 sheep, against 40,567 cattle, 109,336 hogs, and 49,925 sheep, a year ago.

Cigaret Production Exceeds 100 Billion Mark

Cigarette production in the United States during 1928 exceeded the 100 billion mark for the first time in history, and set a new high record for the seventh consecutive year. The current United Business Report states that actual output amounted to 105,915,000,000 cigarettes compared with 97,176,000,000 in 1927. Manufacturing schedules for the first quarter of this year are well in excess of 1928, with still further gains in prospect. The cigar industry has not kept pace with the cigarette manufacturers. About 65 per cent of the total production is in the brands of large companies and their production of machine made cigars has steadily increased.

PROXY BATTLE NOW LOOMS OVER CONTROL OF R. R.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 6.—An appeal to the preferred and common stockholders of the St. Louis Southwestern railway for proxies to be exercised at the annual meeting of stockholders of the road to be held at St. Louis on May 1, has been sent out by Walter E. Meyer, chairman of the St. Louis Southwestern stockholders' protective committee, representing the minority interests opposed to the control of the road by its competitor, the Kansas City Southern.

The letter to stockholders charges that the Kansas City Southern has exercised control over the Southwestern in its own interest and "has in many respects damaged the property and good will and impaired the earnings."

On Feb. 14, 1928, the interstate commerce commission instituted proceedings under the Clayton act against the Kansas City Southern to compel the company to divest itself of the 135,000 shares of the Southwestern preferred stock held. The Southwestern was one of the roads included by Leonor F. Loree, then head of the Delaware & Hudson, in his western trunk merger plans in 1927. In May, 1927, however, the interstate commerce commission denied Mr. Loree's application to merge the Southwestern with the Kansas City Southern and Missouri, Kansas & Texas.

The committee in its communication states that it is already assured of proxies representing more than 40,000 shares of stock, and hopes to substantially add to this total in its efforts to elect an independent board of directors. The committee goes on record as favoring the immediate initiation of a "liberal" dividend on the common stock.

S. P. R. R. INCOME IS LARGEST IN HISTORY OF CO.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 6.—Total railway operating revenues of the Southern Pacific lines and affiliated companies in 1928 amounted to $300,104,027. This is the largest sum in the history of the company, according to Henry W. De Forest, chairman of the board, in the annual report to stockholders. The previous high record was in 1926, when the total was $1,303,029 less than in 1928. The 1927 revenues were $2,358,621 less than in 1928, according to the report.

Mr. De Forest attributes the increase in 1928 to a gain of 3.71 per cent in the volume of freight carried by the lines, resulting in an increase in freight revenues of $5,744,246 compared with the preceding year. This increase was offset in part by a decline of $2,887,296 in passenger revenue, "due principally to automobile competition," and to a net decrease of $498,329 in other operating revenues because of a decrease in the earnings of the company's tank steamers

Investments Abroad Set New High Record

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 16.—A new high record for foreign investments by Americans was established last year, when the total reached $15,601,000,000, compared with $14,500,000,000 in 1927, and $2,625,000,000 in 1913, according to a compilation by Dr. Max Winkler, director of the Atlantic & Pacific corporation. Dr. Winkler estimates that our foreign investments are increasing at an annual rate of about $1,000,000,000. One striking feature is the increase of investments in South America, which totaled $2,513,000,000 in 1928, compared with $100,000,000 in 1913, Dr. Winkler said.

FORD COMPANIES PLAN FINANCING DRIVES ABROAD

Find Eager Market Awaits Stock Issues.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 6.—It has been estimated by bankers who have handled the subscriptions in this country and by curb brokers who specialize in the day to day dealings in the shares on the New York curb market, that of the 2,800,000 shares of Ford Motor Company, Ltd., of England offered in London four months ago, about 2,500,000 shares have gravitated to this country, and are now held here, the majority being in small blocks and by investors who have literally "put them away."

This, however, by no means represents control of the company, since Henry and Edsel Ford and the Ford Motor company retained and own 60 per cent of the total of 7,000,000 shares which were issued at 1 pound per share, and which now are quoted in the New York and London markets at about $20, or four times the subscription price. The American investment in the Ford enterprise abroad represents, therefore, an investment of about $50,000,000.

Delay in Offering.

There has been some delay in the offering of Ford shares in other nations, but most of these will be formally made during 1929, and in most cases it is expected that these offerings will be confined to the nationals of each particular nation. No such reservations were made with Ford of England, however, and the American response to his offering abroad is reported to have even surprised the American motor manufacturer.

Ford Motor Company, Ltd., will hold 60 per cent of the capital of the various companies to be formed in the continental countries, thus retaining and securing complete control for Mr. Ford and his family. Before the ambitious financing scheme is completed 40 per cent of the shares of each of the following companies will be offered to the nationals of each country at par:

Automobiles Ford, S. A., of Paris, France.

Ford Motor company, A. G. of Berlin.

Ford Motor company, D'Italia, S. A., of Trieste, Italy.

Ford Motor Company of Belgium, S. A., of Antwerp, Belgium.

Ford Motor Company of Barcelona, S. A. E., Barcelona, Spain.

M. V. Ford Motor Company of Rotterdam, Holland.

Ford Motor company, A. S., of Copenhagen, Denmark.

Ford Motor company, A. B., of Stockholm, Sweden.

Ford Motor company, O. Y., of Helsingfors, Finland.

New Financing Scheme.

The Ford scheme of financing abroad is something entirely new in the financing of automotive companies, and was made possible by the fact that Mr. Ford already had secured a foothold abroad, that his name was well known there and that any securities he sponsored were looked on favorably by investors of all classes. It is to be doubted that such an ambitious plan would be so successful with any other motor company. Mr. Ford hardly calculated, however, on the tremendous interest which these offerings abroad would arouse here.

One of the complaints which have been aroused among many people who have subscribed to the shares of these particular foreign companies has been heard frequently in Wall street of late. Fearing a very heavy over subscription prospective investors who wanted say 100, 200, or 500 shares have entered their subscriptions for say ten or twenty times that amount, in the hopes that in the subsequent allotments, they would get about the number of shares wanted.

Charge Funds Recabled.

In such cases the cash, which sometimes ran up into large amounts, has been sent by the subscribers to the bankers for the company abroad. Delays in offerings and allotments have occurred and it is the charge of some of the subscribers that their funds, deposited by the banks abroad for subscription on the new Ford units have been recabled here by the foreign bankers for temporary use in the call money market at the recent high rates.

BEARISH WHEAT NEWS BRINGS ON NEW LIQUIDATION

Corn Declines; Oats Show Independent Strength.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Breaking of the drought in the Canadian northwest with rain and snow over a wide area, precipitated another wave of scattered liquidation in the grain market yesterday with wheat at the inside off 1⅞ cents from the close on Friday, May touching $1.16¼, or within ⅛ cent of the lowest figure of the crop.

Short covering and week end evening up made a rally of 1¼@1⅛ cents from the bottom, with the finish at net losses of ⅛ cent, May being $1.17⅛@1.17⅝; July, $1.21¼@1.21⅝; September, $1.23⅝.

Corn declined ¾@1 cent with wheat, but was only ¼ cent lower at the close with May, 90⅛@90¼ cents; July, 91⅝@93⅛ cents, and September, ¾ cents. Oats developed independent strength, and gained⅛@⅜ cent, May being 46½ cents at the last; July, 45⅝ cents, and September, 43⅜ cents. Rye was weak and ⅝@1⅜ cents lower, with May closing at 99⅛ cents; July, $1.01¼, and September, $1.01⅞.

General liquidation was on in the grain markets during the last week, with September corn, and July and September rye selling at new low figures for the season, and the markets failed to show much rallying power, with the exception of oats. At the last wheat was off 2⅞@3¾ cents; corn, 1⅝@4¼ cents, and rye, 4⅜@5½ cents from the previous week, while oats were unchanged to ⅜ cents lower. Lard lost 17½@22½ cents, and bellies, 17½@32½ cents for the week, with ribs, 10@15 cents higher.

Winnipeg Weakens.

While comparatively little wheat selling has been done in the Canadian northwest, the dry weather talk from that section of late has brought in buying orders, and the heavy snowfall over a wide area had considerable influence on sentiment, and more than offset the reports of high winds in the southwest, and a resumption of complaints of a lack of surface moisture. Winnipeg was weak and had some effect here, but that market was off only ¼@⅝c for the day. Liverpool was ⅛@1d lower for the day, with Buenos Aires ⅝@1c lower.

Foreigners show more disposition to buy cash wheat as the result of the decline, and while messages from the seaboard claimed sales of 500,000 bu in all positions, including Manitobas and hard winters, there were intimations that business was in excess of the figure given, with further bids in the market close to a working basis. The weekly forecast suggest precipitation over the entire grain belt. Lags in May wheat continue to liquidation, and replace by purchases of the deferred deliveries.

Local Trade in Corn.

A good part of the trade in corn was of a local character, with the late strength in wheat causing the rally from the inside figure. Charters were reported for 270,000 bu to an eastern lake port, and it is expected that liberal shipments will be witnessed with the opening of lake navigation.

Purchases of 40,000 bu were made to come here, mainly from other markets. The spot basis was steady.

Cash interests were on the buying side of May oats, and there was buying of all deliveries that was regarded as closing spreads with corn, and also spreading between the various deliveries. The early break was short lived. Unfavorable weather is forecasted for the week which may retard field work. Seeding is practically completed in parts of central Illinois.

A house with eastern connections was a persistant seller of rye, and the market showed a heavy undertone throughout the day, although the early seller turned to the buying side toward the last. Scattered liquidation was in evidence with stop loss orders caught on the way down.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of 500,000 bu Manitoba and hard winter wheats were reported in all positions, and it was claimed that the distressed hard winter had been cleaned up. Foreign demand generally showed improvement. Some oats business was indicated at the seaboard. Local handlers sold 3,000 bu wheat; 49,000 bu corn, and 57,000 bu oats to the domestic trade. Deliveries on April contracts were 15,000 bu wheat.

Cash wheat basis was steady. No 2 red, 8@10¼c over; No. 2 hard, ½c over to 1c under; No. 1 northern, 2@3c under May. Corn in good demand and basis firmer. Discounts, as compared with May, follow: No. 3 mixed, 2@3c; yellow, ½@2c; white, ½@1¾c; No. 4 mixed, 4@5c; yellow, 3½@5c; white, 3@5c; No. 5 mixed, 6@6½c; yellow and white, 5@6c; No. 6 grades, 7@8c. Oats basis slightly easier. No. 2 white, 2½@3½c over; No. 3 white, May to 2c over.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 41 cars; corn, 143 cars; oats, 33 cars; rye, 14 cars; barley, 13 cars.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

A decline in grain prices to the lowest on the present break with the lowest close of the week, was no particular inducement to those favoring the constructive side of the market to increase their committments. The sentiment remains as bearish as it has been and all markets are said to be oversold, and in position for a good rally should bull news develop unexpectedly and start an active covering movement. At this season weather conditions are uncertain, but they have little influence on those who are bearish.

Houses with eastern connections were good sellers of May corn and rye nearly all day and at the last turned to the buying side of rye. It looked as though eastern longs were getting out of their rye below $1 for May, yet the market had a rally at the last.

Cash and commission houses are buying May oats while commission houses in general have been buying September oats for a week past. Their buying of the latter is said to be against sales of corn at about 50c premium. So far the spread has been profitable as it has narrowed 10c in about a week.

"Naturally, in crop making seasons, fluctuations in grain prices are bound to be erratic," says Thomson & McKinnon, "but we anticipate renewed liquidation on worthwhile rallies in wheat."

Cash corn men estimate that there is 2,000,000 bu and possibly more corn under charter to load within the next two weeks for eastern lake ports. One boat was loading with 250,000 bu yesterday, and another is expected to load on Monday. It is estimated that close to 4,000,000 bu corn will be moved out of Chicago by lake within the next 35 days. There is 500,000 bu oats afloat at Milwaukee to be moved when navigation opens. Reports from Georgian Bay said it was free of ice. Navigation on the lakes is expected to open around April 15.

To provide for wheat coming to Chicago from the southwest there has been storage room for 480,000 bu declared "regular" in Calumet elevator "B," operated by Rosenbaum Brothers.

Wheat stocks at Minneapolis decreased 315,000 bu for the week while Duluth increased 665,000 bu. Kansas City decreased 96,000 bu. Chicago should show a small increase.

"Outside of unseasonable weather in parts of Europe suggesting delayed spring and of increasing necessity for thorough general precipitation in our western winter wheat areas and throughout Canada, developments in wheat suggesting quick elimination of depressing influences remain conspicuously absent," said George E. Saunders of J. S. Bache & Co.

Cash interests and speculators who have surplus money are buying May and selling September wheat at around 6@6¼c spread, regarding it as a most profitable investment for their money. Also buying of May and selling of July as speculative holders of both deliveries liquidate. These carriers take advantage of liquidating sales in May on breaks and put out their deferred deliveries on bulges.

H. C. Donovan, the Logan & Bryan crop expert, says, during the last ten days western Canada has been barely getting an average amount of moisture, due at this season of the year, while day by day the season is advancing toward the period of general seeding time, with a shortage of subsoil moisture more acute at the start of the spring than it has been in the last twenty-eight years.

PROVISION PRICES WEAKEN

Moderate liquidation by holders of nearby contracts of lard coupled with fair changing from May to the deferred futures by carriers and covering by shorts, made aggregate trading in lard futures of fair volume yesterday, with a narrow range of prices. At the close prices were 2½c lower to unchanged. There was no cable from Liverpool that was readable. Exports of lard were 428,400 lbs. Short ribs were unchanged to 10c lower, and bellies 7½c to 10c lower, with liberal liquidating sales a feature. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were larger than the previous week.

Hog values were strong with fair receipts and a moderate run predicted for the week. Prices follow:

COTTON AVERAGED LOWER

There was nothing in the cotton trading or the news yesterday to create any thrills. Weather was favorable over the greater part of the belt. Liverpool cables were 4 to 6 points higher at the start and finished 1 to 2 points higher, with the spot market slow and sales 3,000 bales. Heavy liquidation was on during the week and prices are down to 25 to 30 points lower than on March 28. Evening up for the week-end was a feature of the trading.

The May position, which is used by the mills to fix their prices for goods, was stronger than other deliveries.

The close was 6 to 8 points lower, with other markets 7 to 13 points lower. Spots in New York lost 10 points to 20.55c, with sales light. New Orleans, 5 points lower at 19.40c and sales 400 bales; Galveston, 19.75c, with sales 632 bales, and Houston, 19.65c and sales 2,502 bales. Prices follow:

CHICAGO, THE AVIATION CENTER

This map of the principal air transport lines of the country shows Chicago's preeminence as the natural aviation center of America. The story of Chicago's importance as a commercial flying center appears in the aviation page of today's Tribune. Main lines operating in and out of Chicago, with their equipment and routine business, are indicated on the map by numbers, as follows:

2—Universal Air Lines, Chicago to Cleveland, Twin Cities, St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha; 8 tri-motors; 12 single motored planes. Passengers and mail.

3—Boeing Air Transport, Chicago to San Francisco and the west coast; 4 tri-motored planes; 29 single motored. Passengers and mail.

4—Embry-Riddle Co., Chicago to Cincinnati; 8 single motored planes. Passengers and mail.

5—Northwest Airways, Chicago to Twin Cities and to Green Bay, Wis.; 2 tri-motors; 8 single motors. Passengers and mail.

6—Stout Air Lines, Chicago to Detroit; 3 tri-motored planes. Passengers only.

7—Thompson Aeronautical Corp., Chicago to Bay City and Muskegon; 4 single motored planes. Mail only.

8—Western Air Express, Los Angeles and San Francisco by rail and air to New York, with air transfer junctions to Chicago at several points. Equipment not completed as this page went to press. Passengers and mail.

9—Interstate Airlines, Inc., Chicago to Atlanta, Ga.; 4 single motored planes. Passengers and mail.

Other colored lines indicate commercial and mail airplane routes in other sections.

PICTURESQUE CHICAGOLAND has a new meaning for disabled veterans at the Forty and Eight cabin in the forest preserve in Orland Park, Cook county. From the camp the convalescing soldiers look across this romantic sweep of woodland. The camp was built and is being maintained by the proceeds from The Tribune's Golden Gloves boxing tournament. WHAT WESTINGHOUSE IS DOING TO MODERNIZE THE WORLD

Electricity gives a building life

Imagine a modern skyscraper without electricity. A towering mass of steel and stone; dark, cold, unventilated, inaccessible!

Only by electricity can such structures be transformed into luxurious hotels and apartments, efficient offices, modern hospitals and theaters. Co-operating with architects, contractors and builders, Westinghouse engineers have played a prominent part in making this transformation possible.

Ingenious Westinghouse switchboards distribute through a nerve-network of miles of hidden wire the electric current that gives a building life.

Water flows hundreds of feet above surrounding levels, heat and fresh air circulate to inside, windowless rooms—because electric motors energize these important services. Westinghouse lighting equipment replaces darkness with day-time brilliance; accentuates with flood and ornamental lights, the architectural beauty of the building by night. The swift, automatic elevator service of today has been made possible by Westinghouse motors and control apparatus. Even the huge steel skeleton of the building itself can now be knit silently and economically by Westinghouse arc-welding devices.

These are spectacular achievements of Westinghouse in the electrification of today's super-buildings. But in millions of homes, as well, these and other developments contribute daily to the comfort and convenience of living.

For any building, anywhere, of any size or type, the Westinghouse organization supplies complete electrical equipment.

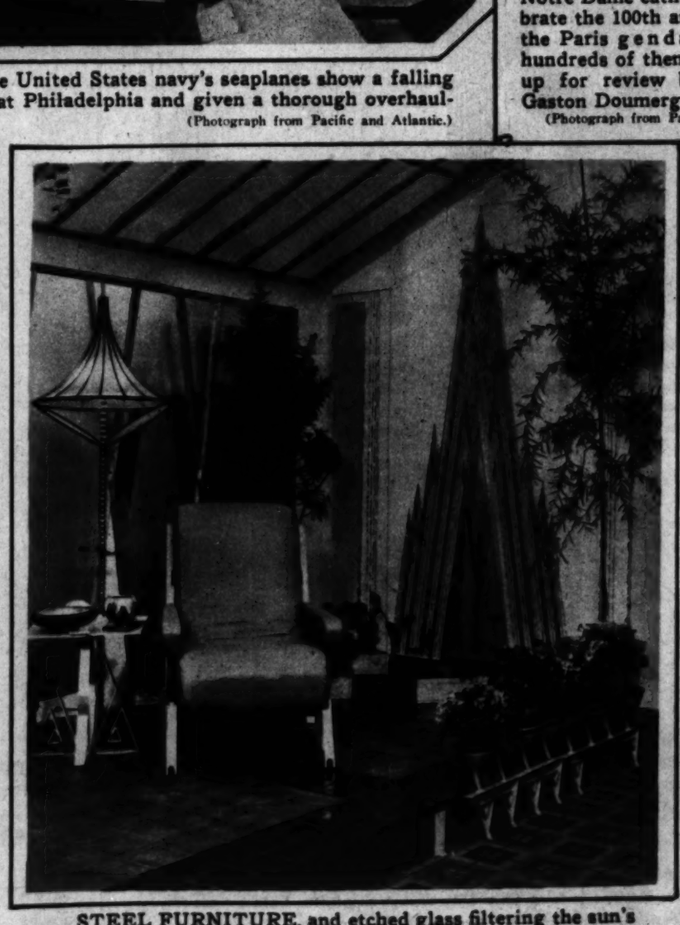
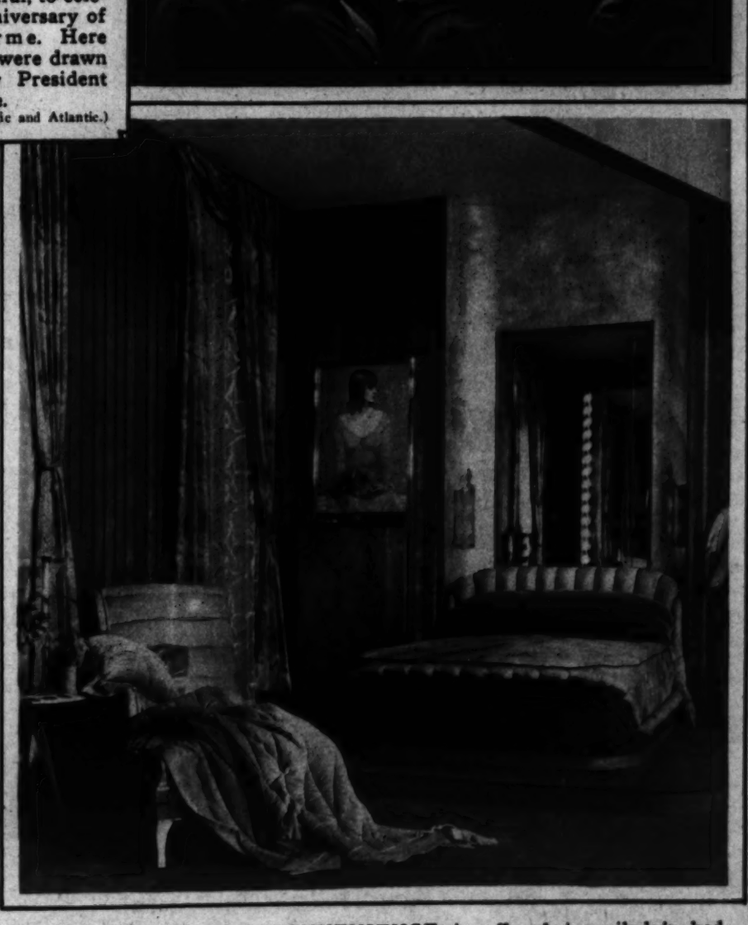
MODERNITY IN A MAN'S DEN—The mirror and wall are flat, but the use of straight lines and angles gives an effect of great depth. The detail is by Joseph Urban, and is a part of the current American industrial art exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.



STEEL FURNITURE, and etched glass filtering the sun's rays, feature this conservatory lounge. The Metropolitan museum's exhibit is to present the latest ideas of convenience and art in one's surroundings, both in business and private life.



EVERY MODERN CONVENIENCE is offered in milady's bedchamber. Amid surroundings of dainty loveliness the mirrors are lighted from behind through etched glass. (All photographs from Metropolitan Museum of Art.)

When laughter gay is heard along the Boulevards of Paris

A BOULEVARD CAFÉ IN PARIS

L'Heure de l'aperitif—tea time in Paris—throngs of men and women on the terraces of the cafes . . . the orchestra within playing pleasant Austrian tunes . . . and often Americans hear a familiar word uttered in piquant French accents, "Zhanzhair Al"—ginger ale. With "Voici, M'sieur," the waiter places a glass of "Canada Dry" before a Parisian.

The wonderful, distinctive flavor of "Canada Dry" has a universal appreciation

And from the new Ambassador Hotel on the Boulevard Haussmann to the Café du Dôme near the Luxembourg on the Left Bank, you'll find gay crowds discussing "le debt," "le sport," greeting their friends, and many of them drinking "Canada Dry."

This fine old ginger ale has won for itself a truly international appeal. Its wonderful flavor—as distinctive as vermouth-cassis or pernod—as delicious as some rare old wine—is appreciated in Paris or the Riviera as it is in New York.

The piquant, stimulating flavor of "Canada Dry" gives you vigor and refreshment. Its delightful carbonation, delicate and uniform, makes drinking it a sparkling thrill. Cool as a mountain stream . . . pure as the air which blows across a snow-field . . . this is the quality of "Canada Dry."

Careful methods of making give you a purer, finer, mellower beverage

No accident has won it the approving nod of connoisseurs, for "Canada Dry" is made from the finest ingredients and manufactured with skill. Absolutely pure ingredients—the highest quality of Jamaica ginger—give it basic excellence. Then an expert and exact process of blending and balancing, combined with a secret process of carbonation, produce that distinctive ginger ale which you know as "Canada Dry."

When you enjoy the thrill of drinking this better, finer, purer beverage, you'll serve it always. For its sparkle gives zest to a meal. It simply belongs with dinner. It is good for the stomach and is really good for you.

Its gaiety makes the pleasure of meeting old friends more pleasant. Its mellowness is simply delightful. Such joyousness, such bubbling good spirits, such refreshment—these can you find only in "Canada Dry."

"Coward!" screamed Sally. "I'd never thought you was a coward, Ned,"

Then Ned's seaman's instincts got back in time. "Draw up," he ordered. "I'm going home. There's a sea running on the beach." Sally, the landlubber, had red hair—and Ned was possessed of a quick temper. When they were engaged, trouble was prophesied by the villagers. But no one knew that a great white bull and a whirling black sea brought Sally and Ned close to death—and to a realization of themselves.

IT CLEANS

. . where the toothbrush cannot reach

The test of a toothpaste, say dentists, is "How well does it clean?"

And when a dentist says "clean" he means not only the outer tooth surfaces but the tiny crevices where, experience has taught him, food particles lodge and where decay starts.

He knows that no toothbrush can reach these hard-to-clean places. They must be cleansed by the dentifrice.

Hence the real test of your toothpaste is its ability to get down into these crevices and cleanse them thoroughly. A recent scientific test proved that Colgate's has a greater penetrating power than any of the leading toothpastes on the market today. This is the secret of Colgate's superior cleansing power. It cleans where the toothbrush cannot reach.

When brushed, Colgate's breaks into an active, sparkling foam. This foam possesses a remarkable property (low "surface-tension") which enables it to get deep down into every minute pit and fissure. There it softens and dislodges the impurities, sweeping them away in a detergent wave.

In this foam is carried a fine chalk powder . . . a polishing material prescribed by dentists . . . which polishes the enamel safely, brilliantly.

Think what this means to you . . . By using Colgate's you can clean your teeth thoroughly, scientifically, exactly as your dentist would have you clean them . . . restoring the natural loveliness of teeth and gums.

If you have never used Colgate's you will be surprised and delighted with its wonderful cleansing action. Mail the coupon below for a generous trial tube and an interesting booklet on the care of the teeth and mouth.

Economical!

The famous 25c tube of Colgate's contains more toothpaste than any other leading brand priced at a quarter. This is because Colgate's is the largest selling dentifrice in the world.

How Colgate's Cleans Where the Toothbrush Cannot Reach

Greatly magnified picture of tiny tooth crevice. Note how ordinary, sluggish toothpaste (having high "surface-tension") fails to penetrate deep down where causes of decay may lurk.

This diagram shows how Colgate's active foam (having low "surface-tension") penetrates deep down into the crevice, cleansing it completely where the toothbrush cannot reach.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty.

To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE even in South Africa. And in the evening, with patterned chiffons, the little Casino Coat of Transparent Velvet is indispensable.

A Guide for Tourists

By W. E. Hill

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

San Francisco girls are intensely sensitive about climatic conditions and resent having a visiting New Yorker or a Chicagoan mention rain and California in the same sentence. "Rain? My dear," she will say, edging away, "you should know that May of this year is one of our rainy seasons!"

Just a humble member of the Beverly Hills film colony giving the haughty glance to a party of tourists who have positively identified her as either Mary Nolan, Dolores Costello or Lois Moran. The pitiless publicity of the film world is terrible for a sensitive girl—but try to take it away from her!

Hollywood mothers have to keep their offspring dressed pretty cute, for there's no telling when a director will take a fancy to Bessie or Bebe, and make a second Baby Peggy of her.

The sweet sixteens of Los Angeles, with Hollywood right around the corner, are bound, more or less, to reflect the film industry. And with all these college life scenarios cluttering up the theaters, the Los Angeles beauties are getting more and more collegiate—especially from the knees down.

Cafeteria waitresses out Hollywood way are very scenario conscious and will say "One order of chicken livers en brochette," in rich, throaty, Ethel Barrymore tones in case a casting director for a talkie may be out gunning for a type.

Pasadena girls are very proud of the Rose Bowl, the Shakespeare club and the Wrigley mansion and are great boosters for the crown city of the Pacific slope. There are more Spanish grills in Pasadena than in all of Spain and the daughters of Pasadena, being very public minded, take great pride in the fact. There is always something doing, either a lodge picnic near the Rose Bowl, a lecture on the more refined bird calls of Lower California in the Shakespeare club, or an earthquake, so that a Pasadena girl is nearly always busy about something.

"See what General Motors is doing today." Mrs. Derondo Pelf and Mrs. Hortense Scrimmage are members of Santa Barbara's winter colony and will soon depart for the effete east, leaving the patios of the hotels and the gift shops to get along without them. They are busy with the market reports this evening, pending a table of bridge.

"Land sakes! Why I used to live right next to Hattie Frisbie in Lima, Ohio, and old Dr. Frisbie looked after my inlay work for years!" Many Californians are easterners who "just couldn't be hired to go back even for a visit," and yet when two from the same home town come together there's a regular celebration.

Californians dearly love a good, wholesome pageant. When spring comes and the blossoms begin to burst forth, Santa Clara valley will call up Los Angeles and before you can say Jack Robinson a troupe of classic dance experts from a Los Angeles art colony will be on the spot, giving a pageant to celebrate the birth of the quince blossom, or the legend of the irrigated lemon grove in one of those unnatural outdoor theaters. There will be special poses of Ramona and her escort of beauty for the rotogravure sections, and everybody will be happy.

Miss Dolores Del Arroyo, the Mexican flapper, and her ma out shopping in San Diego at the local 5 and 10 cent store for an extra yard or so of pearls and a barbecue sandwich. Her boy friends all tell Dolores in their quaint Mexican way that she is the spitting image of Colleen Moore, which pleases Dolores greatly.

Two Types of Lubrication Service—and

POLARINE

ISO-VIS

IN these days of faster driving speeds, high compression motors and congested traffic, engines necessarily run hotter. This has brought about a new set of conditions which the lubricating engineers of the Standard Oil Company [Indiana] have met.

In Iso-Vis and Polarine you get the last word in lubricating efficiency. These two rich, sturdy motor oils are the answer of the Standard Oil Company [Indiana] to the lubricating problems of today. Both Polarine and Iso-Vis do a thorough lubricating job.

Polarine, the standard motor oil, has been tried and proved and praised by the motorists of ten states during a long period of years.

Use Polarine. Change the oil every five hundred miles and you will give your engine the lubrication it needs for a long smooth life.

Iso-Vis, the new type "constant viscosity" motor oil, will not thin out nor break down. With Iso-Vis in the crankcase, frequent changes are unnecessary. You are always sure that your engine is adequately protected by proper lubrication every mile of the way.

Iso-Vis wears and wears and wears!

These two rich, sturdy motor oils represent the most advanced refining practice. They are different types but they offer a lubrication service equally dependable. You can stake the life of your car on either.

At any Standard Oil Service Station and at most garages.

CHICAGO VETERANS PAY TRIBUTE TO FOCH—American and allied officers gathered last Tuesday at Holy Name cathedral, where Cardinal Mundelein occupied the throne at the right of the sanctuary during memorial services for the supreme commander of the allied armies. Saluting are Brig. Gen. Casper H. Conrad, Brig. Gen. John J. Garrity, Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, Brig. Gen. Abel Davis, and Lieut. Robert Coube and Lieut. A. Soriano, representing France.

EASTER FOLLIES OF 1929—In New York's parade up and down Fifth avenue, but not part of it, was this squad of top-hatted, cane-swinging down-and-outers, led by Mr. Zero, friend of the friendless. WOMEN WHO CAN LAUGH AT THE PASSING YEARS

THERE is a compelling, magnetic charm about the glow of unimpaired vitality! The woman who possesses health's sparkling eyes, pure complexion and dazzling smile need never consider the passing of the years. For her, life will always be well worth living.

Many realize now that to preserve youthfulness it is health that must be guarded. And so they pay meticulous attention to diet . . . exercise. . . .

. . . and particularly mouth hygiene. For your well-being has no more treacherous enemies than decaying teeth and irritated gums. Think of it! To lose life's most precious gifts through neglect of proper mouth hygiene.

One of the principal causes of tooth decay is the fact that no tooth-brush can reach into all the pits on the grinding surface of your teeth, or into the tiny V-shaped crevices between your teeth at The Danger Line—where teeth and gums meet. As a result food particles collect there. They ferment. Acids are formed. Unless these acids are neutralized, they cause decay or dangerous gum infections.

Squibb's Dental Cream contains more than 50 per cent of Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, long recognized as a safe, effective antacid. So, every time you use Squibb's it neutralizes the dangerous acids in your mouth. And enough remains to protect your teeth and gums for a considerable time after every brushing.

Squibb's Dental Cream is effective—it makes teeth lustrous—it is pleasant. But it is also safe. It contains no grit or astringents to harm the delicate mouth tissues—no soaps to irritate them. It is safe to use on the gums and in the tender mouths of children.

SQUIBB'S MILK OF MAGNESIA, from which Squibb's Dental Cream is made, is a pure, effective product that is free from the usual earthy taste of other products. Its unsurpassed antacid qualities and mild laxative action make it one of the most valuable products in your medicine cabinet.

Use Squibb's regularly and visit your dentist twice a year. You will then be doing everything possible to safeguard your health and beauty against the dangers of tooth decay and gum infection. A Famous Author..an Adored Stage Beauty.. a Society Girl Florist use this "flattering" new Cutex Liquid Polish

"The new Cutex Liquid Polish flatters the hands!" says Anita Loos

Charmingly straight forward and unspoiled, Miss Loos has great brown eyes and the lovely mouth of a little girl. She is amazingly petite and has a bewitching habit of emphasizing her brilliant sallies by graceful gestures with her well-formed, perfectly groomed hands.

The delightful author of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" says:

"I can not seem to talk without making motions so, of course, everyone notices my hands and I don't dare to neglect them.

"The new Cutex Liquid Polish keeps them looking nice. It flatters the hands and I love flattery.

"A Cutex Manicure Set goes with me on all my trips. I never let a week go without using the Cuticle Remover and Cream. They bring out the half-moons."

"Tending flowers . . . potting plants . . . Cutex protects my nails," says prominent woman florist

Miss Bond loves flowers and caring for them, so she does everything herself in her charming corner shop on Madison Avenue.

"All day," Miss Bond said to us, "my hands are wet. My fingers are constantly digging in the soil. No occupation could be harder on the hands.

"So each evening I spend a few minutes with my Cutex Set—the Cuticle Remover, the Nail White to whiten the tips, and the Cuticle Oil to soften the cuticle. And I never fail once a week to apply the new Cutex Liquid Polish. It gives the delicate lustre that flatters the tiredest hands."

For Gleaming Finger Tips . . . use these three simple steps

First—the Cuticle Remover to remove dead cuticle, to whiten the nail tips, soften and shape the cuticle, and bring out the beauty of the half-moons.

Second—the Polish Remover to remove the old polish, followed by flattering Cutex Liquid Polish that sparkles undimmed for a week.

Third—the Cutex Cuticle Cream or Cuticle Oil around the cuticle and under the tip to keep the cuticle soft . . . Cutex preparations 35¢ each. Polish and Remover together 50¢. Northam Warren, New York, London, Paris.

Billie Burke says, "It gives such a flattering sparkle . . ."

Piquant Billie Burke is the darling of the public. At a Palm Beach fancy dress ball or at her stately country house, she is just the golden-haired merry young woman who married Florenz Ziegfeld. And, as every one knows, Ziegfeld's plays assemble the most beautiful women in America.

Ever charming, always lovely, she is a constant source of delight to the theatre where her gracefulness makes every gesture a telling one.

"I love the stage," says Billie Burke, "but I also love simple country things—gardens, woods, tramps—dogs! What terrible things they do to one's hands!

"I find the new Cutex Liquid Polish protects the nails from stains and dirt and gives them such a flattering sparkle.

"In fact, I adore all the Cutex preparations—the Cuticle Cream—and the Remover. All my friends say, 'What lovely half-moons you have!'"

Smart women everywhere use the flattering new Cutex Liquid Polish—on sale everywhere.

CRASHING through in the middle of a violin concert, these words ring over the air from W-G-N . . . into a million homes, and to the loud-speakers of Chicago police squad cars. Another announcement: "Three men in black Chevrolet touring car held up drug store at 1321 East 57th Street." Silence. Through the research and experimentation of W-G-N engineers, with the co-operation of the police department, each of the high-powered cars of the detective bureau has been equipped with a radio receiving set, built to fit into the car without inconveniencing the men.

When word of a robbery, murder, or other crime comes to police headquarters, the news is sent at once to W-G-N, and broadcast to squad cars throughout the city. In the New Shows

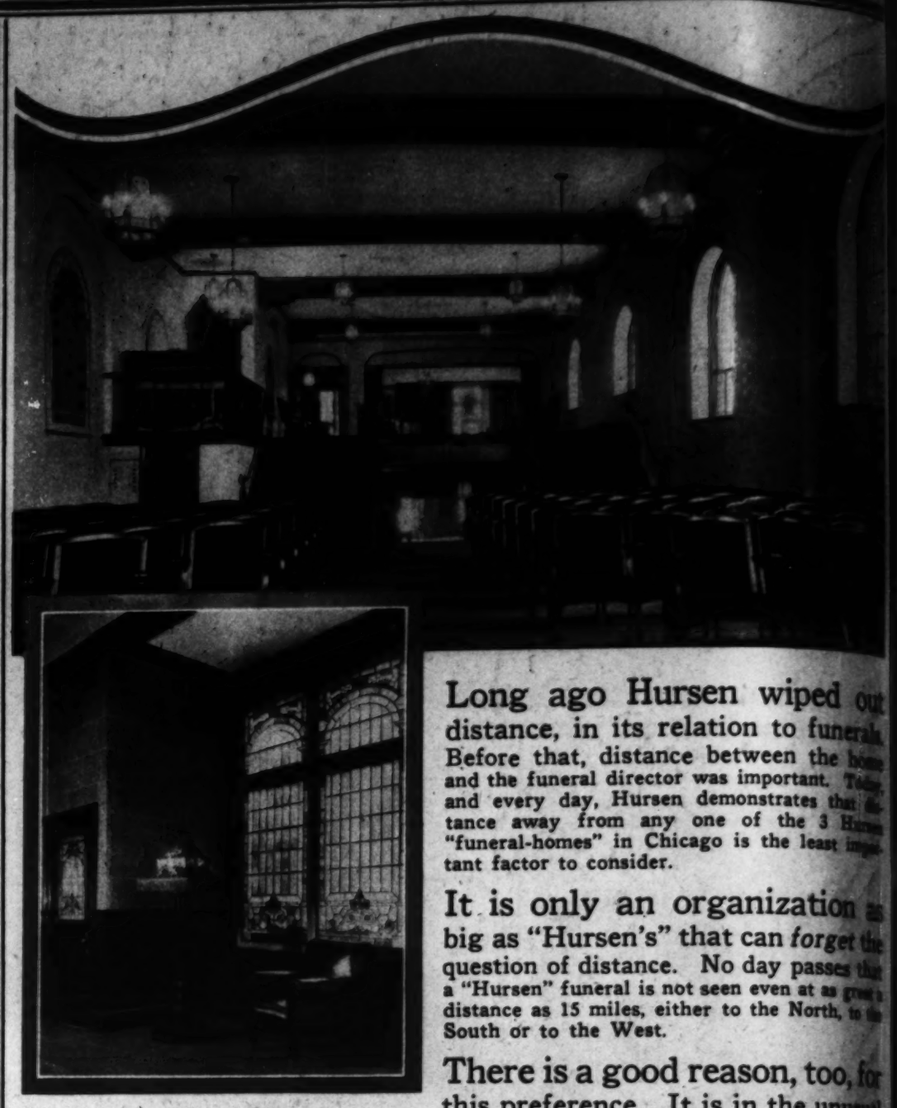
MISS NANA BRYANT, as Morgan le Fey, and William Gaxton, as the audacious American, in "A Connecticut Yankee," which opened last Sunday in the Garrick theater. It is a song-and-dance piece based on Mark Twain's comic tale about King Arthur and his court.

MOSS AND FONTANA, whose dancing is so far from the conventional "adagio" stuff that they have made a hit entitling them to black type in the ads of "This Year of Grace." The revue, headed by Miss Beatrice Lillie, comes next week for a long engagement at the Majestic theater.

MISS JEANETTE MACDONALD, here last summer in "Sunny Days," who is to return this month with Frank McIntyre in a new song-and-dance piece, "Boom-Boom," in the Great Northern theater. She is held to be one of the beauties of the American stage.

BERNICE AND EMILY, a "team" of youthful Chicago dancers who are credited with an outstanding success in the ninth issue of George White's Scandals, which opens tonight in Cohan's Grand Opera house. They are from Miss Abbott, who trained Miss Mary Eaton, Miss Barbara Newberry, and Miss Harriet Hoctor.

MISS DOROTHY PETERSON and Raymond Huntley in a scene from "Dracula," a dramatization of the late Bram Stoker's long-popular "shocker." The play is in the Blackstone theater.



Long ago Hursen wiped out distance, in its relation to funerals. Before that, distance between the home and the funeral director was important. Today and every day, Hursen demonstrates that distance away from any one of the 3 Hursen "funeral-homes" in Chicago is the least important factor to consider.

It is only an organization as big as "Hursen's" that can forget the question of distance. No day passes that a "Hursen" funeral is not seen even at as great a distance as 15 miles, either to the North, to the South or to the West.

There is a good reason, too, for this preference. It is in the unusual elegance of all Hursen funerals. It is in the unusual method, in the unusual generosity of service, in the unequaled specially designed Hursen-Lincoln passenger automobiles and limousine-hearses that Hursen funerals excel, no matter whether the funeral will be large or small. It is also in the fact that in each of the 3 Hursen funeral-homes there is an Organ-Chapel which for size and beauty is not equaled anywhere in America. There is absolutely no charge for the use of any one of these chapels.

There is another important factor. The cost of Hursen funerals is invariably less than the charges made elsewhere. Yet, quality is never sacrificed for price. It is this policy of giving the most for the least that has made "Hursen's" the largest and the greatest funeral establishment in America today. So, call Hursen, of course!

$150

At this price you can now buy a 9 x 12 ft. American Rug that has the luxurious sheen and beauty of a true Oriental. and which makes over any room into a dream of beauty.

WHY envy her Oriental rugs?

You can now have the same luxurious beauty upon the floor of your home! That beauty which is the pride of the world's most distinguished hostesses.

That same silky sheen which has said "Oriental" to visitors to wealthy homes for hundreds of years. That same rich, heavy pile lustrously shimmering in lamplight and shadow!

But the Oriental beauty of Gulistan de Luxe is made in America on the American loom and is therefore available at the prices of fine American rugs.

This striking achievement comes from the one manufacturer you would logically expect such a triumph from . . . the House of Karagheusian.

Karagheusian, the largest makers of genuine Persian and Chinese Rugs, have long tried to create a rug in America as beautiful and lustrous as the rugs their own native weavers make in the Orient and China for the world's wealthiest homes.

After years of effort in their American plants, they have succeeded. Gulistan de Luxe is the result . . . and in one brief season it has started a complete transformation of everyone's ideas about floor coverings.

Visit any home that has been converted into a dream of beauty with Gulistan de Luxe . . . and then return to your own home and try to feel contented with old-style domestic rugs of any kind. They seem flat.

Think of it—Gulistan de Luxe is truly Oriental in every respect save that it is machine-woven . . . the designs are from the co[ll]ection of Orientals, the wools are picked wools imported from the Orient, and they are loomed by America's largest maker of genuine Orientals, with all the transplanted skill of the Far East.

See the Gulistan de Luxe in many sizes, patterns and color combinations. Eighty-eight Chicago stores are showing them now. (Sizes from 27" x 54" to 11'3" x 21').

The Geometric Theorem Still Proves Good

Hiplines are Molded and Accented by Curves and Angles.

By Lolita.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—I am almost too happy about the new spring hats to write about the new spring frocks. To think that my brow—my Botticelli brow—is being pardoned out for good behavior after its long penal servitude! To think that it's going to feel the air once more after all this time of being cooped up without any ventilation!

Undoubtedly the off-the-face movement which began this winter has been gathering momentum. Today turbans, which are set well back on the head, are only one of the many shapes enrolled in the uplift movement. There is the so-called fisherman's hat, with its brim turning back in front and slouching down in the back. There are the bicornes and tricornes which are so well established as social favorites. And finally, we find all the numerous small fitted shapes which have had side wings added to the original structure.

This enfranchisement of the brow is due largely to the two-tone idea prevailing in every type of costume. In order to show that contrasting material or color which faced the brim, the hat simply had to fall back. It goes without saying that this two-tone and two-fabric theory is still one of the smartest. Witness one of Patou's favorite models—a black balibuntl faced with black felt and bound around the crown with black ribbon that falls in loops in the back. This hat, a medium sized shape with turn-back front and drooping back, has been chosen by several fashionable Gothamites.

We have lifted the ban on brows—yes! But we have not lifted the turban. Stroll about upper Fifth avenue and on Park avenue, these days, and you will be able to collect satisfactory statistics on the subject. The chic world is just filled with turbans—especially those made of black satin or black belting ribbon. Also are the models of wool tricot holding their own. In saying this, however, one must remember that the present day turban has had all the 1929 patents installed. It has got to look wide—at least accented—at the side or it might as well be somebody's old sunbonnet. If it does nothing else it shows a loop or a bow at this lateral section. Witness to this is found in the model of black satin made in bandana style, which is sketched in our left hand panel.

Now, to touch upon the real theme of this letter. We have illustrated today some of the daytime models by which a woman may prove that she is not wearing last year's daytime models, for they are different. Even your husband or brother will be able to gather that information, and the change overspreads both material and contour.

As the season develops it becomes clear that there is one silhouette of dominating importance. The raised waist, the molded line to the knees, the flare below—this is the triumvirate that rules the summer season of 1929. Its authority may be more obvious in the new evening gowns, but there is no daytime model of importance which does not reflect in more subtle manner—well, you'll just have to have some new clothes—no use talking.

In putting on this drama of clothes, the yoke of the skirt gains a new importance. Do not misunderstand me. The yoke is not always corporeal. But always the spirit is there. By some curving line over the hips; by means of adroit geometric manipulation; by the favorite "step" treatment in which a skirt is administered at different levels—in some way or other the molding of the hips becomes a salient feature.

All of our models illustrate this tendency, but suppose that we begin with the one at the right of our center panel. Here is a model from the comparatively new but impressive house of Maggy Rouff. It is made of beige crêpe satin and the lustrous side occurs only as those inset bands which lend the gown its entire atmosphere of novelty. Compare the back view with the front view and you will see that the geometric course of that inset band over the hips is diverted into devious by-paths. For instance, there is a diamond shaped design on one side of the skirt and the satin band then takes up the business of bordering a bolero appearing only in the back.

The completing touch of the costume is a plaited jabot of cream colored satin allying itself with the gold and steel buckle, finishing in such original fashion the stitched inset belt. The shoes are of beige kid and the hat of brown felt is finished with beige satin ribbon.

Equally suggestive of the trend of present day styling is the Patou model of lightweight black woolen at the extreme left of our center panel. In this case the emphasis of the molded hip is assigned to two curving inset pieces of self material which are released to form graceful diagonal draping.

This model does more than to draw your attention to the silhouette. It shows you what has been going on in the great world of lingerie finishes. Regard the scalloped line of white pique finishing the neckline and allowed to lapse into rippling folds at the terminus. Consider this in connection with the scalloped cuffs of pique on the sleeves and those plaited pieces that have the effect of sprouting above the cuffs. When you have done this you will realize that there are many new avenues of lingerie expression and that is only one of many smart experiments.

Not the least arresting feature of Patou's frock is the side panel extending from under the right arm to the hem, for this, striking enough in itself, is made more so by the use of white pearl buttons repeated on the sleeves. The hat completing this costume is an Agnes model of black and white felt. The pumps of black patent leather are worn with hosiery in one of the sunburn tones and the beads are a dull white mixture to carry out the idea of the black and white.

The last witness we shall call in the interest of the molded hip line developed into a flare below is an ensemble, the coat of which is presented by the seated figure and the accompanying frock by the lady with the tea cup standing nearby. This ensemble, also from Patou's atelier, is achieved by green flat crêpe.

The interest of the frock of this costume depends largely upon an ingenious employment of stitched bands. These encircle the bodice and effect a definite skirt yoke. On the skirt vertical bands applied at different levels emerge finally as plaits to mingle freely with the inverted plaits set between such bands. Here again sleeves and neck finish supply food for thought. These details are of vanilla colored crêpe treated to hemstitching, and the manner in which the contrasting touch is applied to the sleeves with their stitched bands is of particular moment.

The coat of today's ensemble is variable. Sometimes it seems wedded for keeps to the accompanying frock and at other times—well, the best we can say for the alliance is that it is a companionate marriage. In this ensemble the relationship indicates a lasting bond, for the coat is given the same effect as is the skirt, a fact which you may deduce from their back views sketched third and fourth, respectively. Applied bands are the feature of this coat and they are used both horizontally and vertically.

Now, as to the materials chosen for these daytime frocks. Flat crêpe, of course! But this season there is a great deal of marocain, and satin back crêpe is not given a chance to mope by the fireside. Among the lightweight woolens we find etamine being featured by many of the smartest French houses and this, like so many other of the new fabrics, often shows an admixture of rayon. For example, Gyptiana, a new fabric, is in reality a crêpy etamine.

Among the lightweight woolens with rayon influence Asperic continues in the foreground and so does a more recent advent in the rayon family, a flat weave called Nickly.

As a last word concerning the frock of this genre which we show today, do not forget the ribbed weaves, for these are in better standing than ever before. Also moire.

CENTER—That dress theories tend more and more to become dress theorems is indicated by our first model at the left, a lightweight woolen in black from Patou. Observe the curving geometric lines of inset pieces over the hips and admit that this is true.

Next the coat of an ensemble in green flat crepe, also from Patou. The coat, by means of applied bands of self material, achieves the same silhouette as the accompanying gown shown on the third figure. Here the applied bands are stitched and on the skirt some of them merge into plaits.

Last, a Maggy Rouff frock of beige crepe satin shows geometric inset bands of the lustrous side, a jabot of cream colored satin and buckles of gold and steel.

LEFT—A bandana turban of black satin is followed by a bag of soft beige leather with great tortoise shell rings for handles. The shoes are a combination of light beige and rose tan.

RIGHT—A fox scarf in blue tone is followed by a necklace of flat silver alternated with jade beads. The silver design is exceptionally interesting. Below are the accompanying ear-rings.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

PATTERNS by CLOTILDE

THIS lovely design made of a printed silk crêpe will be most useful for daytime occasions, and you won't find the pattern, No. 2607, at all difficult to use. It is cleverly designed to conceal overweight, with the long waisted bodice with the Vionnet neckline and the attached hip yoke, split at the center front to insert a circular godet which combines with the circular side front sections to achieve a dipping front hemline. The back is trim and slender appearing, while the full length, close fitting sleeves finish the dress perfectly.

Waist, skirt, and hipyoke are cut separately. After the pieces have all been cut out and all marks, whether perforations or notches, transferred to the material, the bodice or waist can be basted together and tried on. French seams will make a good finish, especially if you put the first seam in by hand, then turning to the wrong side, baste the seam carefully, keeping the sewed edge exactly on the edge. Then stitch on the machine, not making too narrow a seam.

The hipyoke should be carefully fitted, and while it should fit well don't make it too tight. Make wrong side seams and press them open flat. The directions that come with the pattern show [illegible] how to put the skirt together, [illegible] after this is done the lower yoke edges should be turned in and the piping of a contrasting color basted carefully in place. Then the upper edge of the skirt is set under the edge of the yoke. Pin the skirt to the yoke before doing any basting, pinning it to the side seams, the center front and back, and then in between. Baste the skirt to the yoke and stitch on the machine, stitching first close to the edge, then one-quarter inch in from the edge. After this is done, the basting removed, and the pressing done it will be a good plan to put in a yoke lining, cutting it exactly like the outside, seaming together on the sides and pinning it in place before any basting is done.

If you prefer binding instead of piping the yoke edge and neck that will be equally pretty looking.

The long sleeves are made close fitting by means of a dart and the sleeve may be faced and finished without trimming, or a binding or piping may be used, matching the rest of the dress. The dress at the bottom, for size 36, measures about 2¼ yards. Any of the usual crêpes, sheer woolens, crêpe Elizabeth, or georgette will make up beautifully in this design.

Pattern No. 2664 is for one of those delightfully pretty overblouses that are such a necessary part of every woman's wardrobe, these days. The deep V neckline is universally becoming, and the trimming pieces that are attached at the left shoulder and waistline add to its attractiveness. The pattern is in two pieces, front and back, and these are slashed in from the underarm seams, front and back, and the upper slashed edges are gathered and stitched to the lower edges. This gathering gives a becoming fullness at the waistline. The chic one-sided effect is shown here in the slightly draped lower blouse edge that is finished at the left side by the trimming pieces, topped by a fancy buckle. The long, close fitting sleeves are finished at the wrists by small cuffs of the contrasting material that is used as a right side facing at the neck.

Georgette crêpe, lamé, printed silk crêpe, chiffon, and flat crêpe are interesting suggestions for materials.

New and slender looking as fashion demands is this chic one piece dress, so useful for all occasion wear. The pattern, No. 2641, should be a favorite and will make up well in one of the fine, patterned all wool jerseys or challis, or plain or printed silk crêpe, or sheer tweed.

The back is quite straight and plain, while in the front below the hipline there are grouped plaits, cut from a separate piece of material and stitched along perforated lines to the right front. The neckline is especially becoming, with its prettily shaped collar, and the closing is softened by the jabot frill with cascading plaits. The sleeves are fitted with darts below the elbow, and the inverted tucks on the fronts at the shoulders are both decorative and becoming.

A soft shade of Lanvin green in sheer woolen with the contrasting material of faille silk crêpe will make up smartly.

2607—Woman's or miss' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 40 inch material, with 2¾ yards of binding.

2664—Woman's and miss' blouse. Sizes 16 and 18 years, and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 1⅞ yards of 40 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 27 inch contrasting.

Experimenting in Education

By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Brown

Freedom for Children Is the Basis of the New Movement

TWO boys were talking together. One attended a public school with large classes, the other a progressive school with its much smaller groups.

"I suppose in your school you c'n make all the noise you want to—huh, Bill?" said the first.

"Gee, don't be silly. How could we get our work done if we did? We can get up when we want to or when we need to get something, and we can talk if we're not interrupting or not disturbing somebody else, and we can get a drink or wash our hands or go to the bathroom the way we'd go at home—but we can't make a lot of noise and racket — of course not. Besides, we're too busy and too in'erested in what we're doing. It's an awful in'eresting school. It's the swellest school I ever went to."

Not Alone in the Idea.

That first little boy is not in the least alone in his idea of what a radically progressive school is like. Many grown people hold the same notion that this youngster, longing for freedom, holds. I have talked on this subject with relatives, friends, some teachers—and not long ago the principal of one of the oldest and largest private schools in this country—and many of them have a deep rooted fear of the freedom that prevails in a truly progressive school.

Their ideas of how such a school is conducted are so erroneous. Their misconception is so sweeping. To them liberty must mean license. To them control comes only with repression.

To them freedom in a schoolroom has to be accompanied by chaos, for in their eyes children must be ruled—and the rulers of all time have been scared to death of freedom for their subjects.

One of the foremost exponents of creative education in this country was in England last summer and met the heads of some of the great English schools. As you know, tradition—convention—classicism govern their methods and curricula. They mentally hold up their hands over the progressive conception of education. "But what's going to become of these children who have all this freedom? What terrible things they'll do when they grow up if they're not held down when they're little!"

The American laughed. "Lots of them have grown up right under my eyes and they haven't done anything very terrible yet. In fact, they're extremely well poised and fitted to cope with life."

Fear of Freedom.

Again the same old fear of freedom. Slaveholders had it. "You can't give them freedom until they know how to use it," they used to say. But how will they know how to use it until they have it? It's like saying you can't go into the water until you can swim. But you can't swim until you go into the water. The only sensible thing to do is to go ahead. And the younger you learn to swim, the better—we all know that.

The younger the baby has freedom and wise guidance, the better. He is a much more capable child than the one who has it late. The latter is apt to be confused by his freedom. At first he'll splash and splutter and abuse it until he gets the idea and finds himself, like a young relative we had who hardly dared breathe in his own home. At first when he came to our house he used to be intoxicated with his liberty, and set the house on its end. At home his mother was afraid to set him free.

Ridicule Is Frequent.

It is not uncommon for the disapproval of freedom for children to express itself in ridicule. This principal I mentioned hadn't a conception of true education—though he had a definite one of thorough schooling, which of course is, not the same thing. From the very nature of the word, from its origin, education means to draw out, to develop and enrich what is within, while schooling concerns the accumulation of facts and discipline for discipline's sake.

This principal I mentioned spent a large part of his side of our discussion deriding the new methods—"this marvelous talk of self-expression—developing these wonderful individualities—doing only what they want to do it"—do just when they want to do it"—and so on, expressing one misconception after another, one antagonism after another, couched in terms of derision.

The closed mind is a dangerous thing to have—a deadening thing. This is a great day we are living in, and because of the character of its greatness it calls for constant mental—and also physical—adjustments. There never were so many changes—so many realized potentialities. We hear without wires. We have leaped from earth to air. But we are not defying nature—we are coming to know her and work with her. This is true freedom, and to use it and appreciate it requires the open, the growing mind.

And education is changing at last, too. It, too, is coming to understand natural law—working with it, not against it. From repression and the pouring in of facts, from confining the young, tender, plastic thing in the shackles of discipline for discipline's sake we are swinging to an opposite régime.

Favorable for Growth.

Progressive educators are trying to surround children with the most favorable environment possible for growth, trying to give them their freedom to browse in it, encouraging them to do this socially, in a group which involves all kinds of control and discipline among themselves—and guiding them only when they need it.

New red blood is flowing through the veins of education. We have seen the light and we're on our way, experimenting, of course, as we go. And this experimenting—that is another cause for derision. "Experimental schools—ha! ha!—a good name for them!" is a frequent taunt.

But what else is growth in any line of endeavor? Where would we be in all the scieneces without experiment? And what fine new thing ever lacked detractors?

Progressive education is here to stay and it behooves parents to be open minded so they can understand it and little by little demand it for their children. Thousands of teachers are already thrilling to its call, but most of them teach under systems which make its operation impossible. But if people are eager to understand its underlying principles, so much the sooner will it undermine and finally overthrow the hidebound educational methods in our school systems and colleges which tend to turn out human beings as factory products instead of as individually developed boys and girls who know themselves and can meet the world.

The Feminine Realm

Countess Carnwath, the former Maud Maitland, member of London's social set, has gone into the ornamental glass business.

Mme. Sigrid Undset, who has been awarded the 1928 Nobel prize in literature, is the third Norwegian author to be thus honored.

For the first time in the history of Brazil the Supreme court has accorded to a woman the right to appear before that tribunal.

After having been barred from membership for 47 years, women now are eligible to membership in the University club of Philadelphia, Pa.

The New York infirmary for women and children is operated entirely by women. The hospital is said to be one of the best in the metropolis.

In addition to her duties as first lady when her husband took over the governorship of New York on Jan. 1, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will teach literature in New York City and spend part of her time running a furniture factory.

Three Essentials of Romance

by Doris Blake

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Young Author Gives Fundamentals for Girl Who Wants Love and Marriage

ANY GIRL with an eye to a future with an adoring mate in it must possess three qualities. Of course, she may possess four, six, or ten additional lures. But there are three essentials, it has been recently recorded, without which no young woman may expect to have her name enrolled among those who find security and happiness through love.

They are personal charm, the promise of love, and a flair for living. By these attributes are men led to arbor nook to "repeat dates" and (without slip 'twixt cup and lip) eventually to the altar.

The above analysis of the alchemy, by which men are preserved against the unsociable state of bachelorhood, is subscribed by one Jane Johns, reputed Californian, who believes it best to hide her real name as author of "The Girls Men Marry" [E. P. Dutton & Co.].

To dissect these three great essentials, then, would seem to be the job of one interested in making every girl a fitting representative of the book's title.

Interest in Others.

Personal charm would seem to need little more explanation than that described by the term, itself, except that the young author wishes to emphasize the fact that personal charm is more than raising one's physical assets to their best talking point. Understand, it is of vital importance to be turned out sartorially and with such physical precision as to be a nice eyeful from ravishing coiffure to neatly turned heel. BUT—

"People who have charm," says the young author, "are always interested in some one else; in several some ones else."

Out of the mouths of babes (if such liberty may be taken with the anonymous one's years) drip words of wisdom. When you mull it over is there a better definition for that thing so often called elusive and therefore by many believed to be one of those things you either have or you haven't? Charm surely is nothing if it is not the ability to give out to others, to share with others their interests, their enthusiasms, and their ambitions.

To prove a point, the author of "The Girls Men Marry" was called on to make a fourth for bridge on a train. Between bids (or, perhaps ignoring entirely the purpose of card and table) one girl told long stories of her affairs. The others listened politely, but with infinite boredom. The stories were not unusual. They didn't mean anything to the other train acquaintances.

"Now, if she had asked us about ourselves," the young author admits with perfect candor, "we would have sat up and forgotten we were playing bridge."

The Promise of Love.

This charm, as stressed by Jane Johns, cannot be a thing of cold calculation. It cannot be an obvious attempt to subscribe interest for politeness (or profit's) sake. It must have behind it the warming fires of a soul not soaked in self. It must have more than that. It must have that human fire that automatically forces others to spread their hands and voices in an appreciative atmosphere.

The promise of love! What does it mean? A gullible female, an easy victim, a promiscuous necker and petter? None of these things. It is the simple power of one person to love another, perhaps illustrated by the unrestrained demonstrations of a daughter toward her father, toward her brother, toward her mother. Its antithesis may be recognized in the cold, unloving creature who denies even her small children the kisses and caresses normal youngsters crave. There are women whose exterior conduct at least would lead a man to suppose a caress as unwelcome as a blow on the nose, with the latter standing a better chance of stirring up an emotion.

Psychoanalysts explain these people with glacier emotional power as products of inhibitions, of immature senses, of otherwise diverted energies. But, as few of the men girls marry are interested in emotional analysis, they pass up the unpromising for girls who look as though they were capable of loving in the nicest sense of the word.

The truth of this was sensed by one woman known to her companions as thoroughly brittle under her honeyed exterior. For the benefit of a certain gentleman, extremely sentimental on the subject of children, a sister's two small girls were borrowed for an hour or two during an expected call. The loving attention administered those children made a favorable impression, as the marriage license records of a few months later could testify.

Girls of strong motherly instinct have this quality, "promise of love." Other girls promise it in encouraging little pats of the hand or the top of the head and some have it who have neither to make gesture nor prove its possession. It's just there. It's written in their physical person and in their manner in a dozen different ways. They exude a certain warmth of affection. And Jane Johns says, "where there is no warmth you feel there can be no hidden flame."

The Quality of Enthusiasm.

The third necessary factor, or force—the flair for living—is simply enthusiasm about life. "It is obvious in your versatility," the author explains, "in your activity, the way you express your sympathy and liking for people. It is detected in the eager, quick light in your eye, in the thrill you can get out of doing things and in thinking life good, regardless of the facts of your existence."

Looking happy, acting happy—and with the help of the combined emotions, being it.

Any one can have flair, the author promises. But it takes courage and a constant reminder. When your spirit is flattened out by some unhappy experience, or when you run into those periods of loneliness that are so blank and barren, it takes as much courage to face the world with spirit and laughter as it does for a soldier to face the firing line.

There is a kind of person Miss Johns identifies as "the subconscious unhappy type." Unhappiness may show in faint glimpses or in larger vistas. But since human beings—and men in particular—are not attracted to sorrow, the weakness has to be buried under a flair for living, trained and cultivated, if need be. Let a new experience lay a wreath forever on the old sorrow, in other words.

A superior confidence that serves women extraordinarily well in their relations with men is but a small part of the spoils of warring on old grievances.

"The girl with flair," the author says, "thinks the world about her is wonderful. In return, the world thinks her wonderful."

Lines in Face—Gone!

She wasn't old—yet she looked like grandma! Premature wrinkles did it! Don't let wrinkles betray your age. Remove them at once with a simple, safe home method. Just get two ounces of Eptol from druggist, mix with water and teaspoon of glycerine. Makes delightful, rich cream to spread thinly over face, neck and around eyes. The hungry tissues absorb it rapidly as you work well into pores until gone. Then behold the marvelous change! Every wrinkle, frown, squint-like, age line—gone! Leaves skin smooth and firm, pores closed, tissues tingling—giving you the fresh, charming beauty and loveliness of youth. You can depend on results every time if you use genuine Eptol. There's nothing finer.

If troubled with blackheads—remove them instantly! Don't squeeze! Large pores will result. Safest way is to dissolve them all at one time. Get two ounces of powdered Calonite at druggist, sprinkle on hot, wet towel, apply to blackheads and they disappear at once! Results are astonishing—even in worst cases.

A Three Purpose Cheese Product

It Spreads—It Slices—It Cooks

An Amazing New Food

—a miracle wrought with milk

That's Velveeta, the surprise and delight of everyone who tastes it. For Velveeta is the new dairy product by Kraft—master cheese makers. A cheese product produced by methods so far in advance of old ideas that little is left for comparison. And this applies as well to the superior quality of Velveeta, its smooth velvety texture and delectable flavor.

For Velveeta is a great deal more than an unusually delicious food. Velveeta represents the contribution of science to the art of cheese making. Through the aid of scientific research, we are at last able to combine in a cheese product all those precious health-giving qualities of the rich whole milk. By a special process we extract from the whole milk these additional Vitamins: Lactose (sugar of milk), Calcium and other milk minerals, and these we include in the making of Velveeta. The result is a product that looks like cheese, tastes like cheese, but which because of this added food value really should be called a super-cheese.

You can use Velveeta the same as any cheese. It spreads like butter. It can be sliced when chilled. It melts, dissolves and blends so readily with other foods that for cooking purposes its superiority is at once apparent.

If you like cheese, you'll love Velveeta. It is an invigorating food that anyone can eat freely and often. It is as digestible as milk itself. Try a package. Your dealer will supply you.

"Philadelphia" Cream Cheese

Child Specialists agree that it is rich in body-building elements

Sturdy growth, straight bones and good teeth depend upon two elements in the child's diet, Calcium and Vitamin A. "Philadelphia" Cream Cheese, it has been proven, is rich in both of these. And for that reason child specialists are definitely recommending "Philadelphia" Cream Cheese as a part of the child's diet. It is known to be a superior dairy food, one easily digested by children, and one that children heartily relish. "Philadelphia" Cream Cheese should be fed freely and often; as a spread for the between-meal bite, for the school sandwich and with salads of vegetables or fruit.

The hostess who has once learned how easy it is to please the fastidious guest with the singularly delicious flavor of "Philadelphia" Cream Cheese will never again feel satisfied by serving anything less. The real "Philadelphia" is the prized product of the Kraft-Phenix Cheese Corp. It comes to you only in small tinfoil packages, protecting its creamy richness until served. It is never sold in bulk.

Many ways to serve it.

The different ways in which "Philadelphia" Cream Cheese may be served to advantage are just about endless. And either for child or grown-up, the variety of these delicious food combinations is so wide as to satisfy the vagaries of the most whimsical appetite. There are many brands made to resemble it, but only one "Philadelphia"—the original and still the leader.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

There Are Blouses and Blouses, as You Realize When You Behold the Very Charming Ones That Come from Across the Water.

By Bettina Bedwell
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special correspondence.]—Paris is placing a lot of importance, this spring, on the upper half of the springtime silhouette. Blouses are in again. It's a long, long way back to the past in which the blouse figured as a separate item of chic. With a becoming and smart blouse a girl used to be able to change the spirit of her costume to fit morning, noon and night. From the looks of Paris right now, she is going to be able to do this again in the immediate future.

And, more than that, Paris is mad about other garments that have an effect on the upper half of our chic costumes. There is the little jacket. They simply can't get in enough occasions during our now minutely divided twenty-four hours to wear as many cunning and original little jackets as Paris is turning out. There are jackets for every kind of costume, and for all sorts of doings and ladies.

The sweater, too, remains with us, to glorify the spring sports outfit and make the upper, the better half of style. And if you consider the scarfs, handkerchiefs, etc., etc., which nowadays are as essential as the sweater, you will see how very important it is to turn your thoughts to the higher things of your spring wardrobe.

One item which I am glad to see returned to fashion is the sheer, frilly blouse. Paris is making these of divers materials, either in cotton or silk, and the frills are often of lace, so that an air of real femininity is achieved. This takes away the curse of severity from the smart tailleur, and makes it wearable for any type of woman. Those who can wear tailored blouses are going to have a multitude of delightful models to choose from, made in silk or cotton piqué, crêpe de chine, tussor, jersey and linen.

Afternoon tailleurs will be plentiful in and around smart Paris, and for these the couturiers have designed special blouses that you feel you simply can't live without, once you've seen them. Satin blouses are very much all right for such costumes. So are georgette, lace and embroidered blouses. Paris even makes blouses which may be worn for the informal evening with satin, moire or other silk suits.

Jackets are almost as varied as the blouses. Paris has given us some novel jackets of linen and cotton in bright colors or white to wear with summer sports dresses. There are also jersey and tweed jackets that serve the same purpose, and for afternoon and evening the jacket will be made of some kind of silk or satin, with a golden gleam to the weave when it appears after dark. Now that an ensemble—in effect, at least—is absolutely essential, the little jacket, which is less expensive, allows you to have many more wraps, and therefore to be more in fashion.

Sleeveless jackets and sleeveless sweaters are two garments that Paris is regarding with favor for the warmer weather ahead. These are usually in vivid colors, and may be worn with sleeved or sleeveless dresses. There is no obligation to omit sleeves, but a good many smart women will display bare arms this coming season.

Our third figure shows a tailored blouse from Marcel Rochas, the famous Paris creator of youthful styles. It is made of naturelle-shantung, and is trimmed with bands of fine tucks. The round school girl collar and the square shoulder yoke accentuate the youthful appearance of this model. The narrow ribbon, laced along the closing is a dainty detail. The sleeves are simple chemisier sleeves, with mannish cuffs of tucked material and link buttons. You can wear this blouse over the top of your skirt, or tucked in, just as you like, but we would rather advise the latter solution as being newer, and consequently smarter, just now.

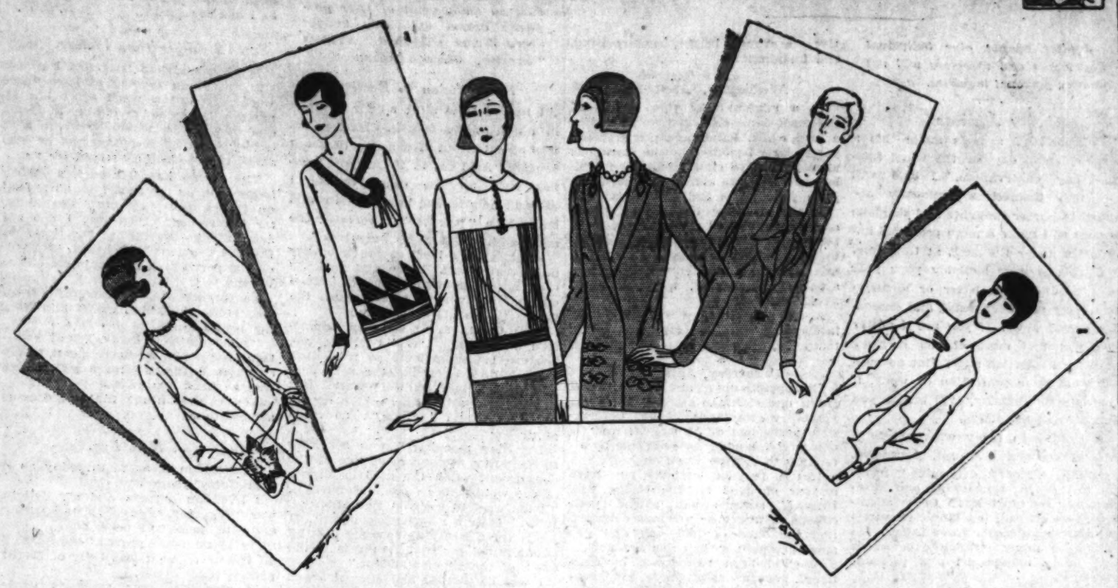
The Martial & Armand blouse shown on our fifth figure is a long blouse, suitable for afternoon wear, with habillé costumes. It is made of a new silk alpaca; this fabric, after a long period of oblivion, is putting in a reappearance in the world of couture this spring, and cut along very feminine lines. Somewhat fitted as to shoulder line, it falls in soft, graceful folds down to the waistline, on each side of which it is tightened by several inverted tucks to give the moulded waist-to-hip effect so favored by the present day mode. The double jabot of self material and under vest of white crepé showing in plastron effect, also the tiny reverse cuffs, are details worthy of attention.

The white satin blouse from Paquin is a conspicuous Paris success, and it is indeed the ideal complement of a black satin ensemble. The black and white color scheme is as strong as ever in the new collections now shown in Paris, and the separate white blouse with skirt and coat, or short jacket, in black, is sponsored by the highest circles of Paris dressmaking. There is much in this model to attract the eye of the woman in search of new details. Note, first, the asymmetric cut forming a short, flat detached surface of material, starting from under the arm and finishing in a cascading jabot effect in front, cut in one piece with the opposite side of the front. A horizontal, invisible seam from the point of the V neck to under the right arm is the technical explanation which one needs to comprehend the admirable technique of this blouse. The front gives, otherwise, the perfect illusion of being cut in one piece. The volants incrusted above the wrists give importance to this part of the sleeves, in which the new mode is generally taking a more marked interest than in the past few seasons.

New sweaters illustrate in many cases the feminine trend of fashions. There are sweaters like the one sketched in our second figure which are trimmed with white lingerie collars and cuffs. This Lucile Paray creation is in bright geranium red, in one of the new wool laces so much featured in the summer collection, and has triangular incrustations of striped jersey at the bottom. Note the novel line of the collar with its plaited ruffle.

Tweed jackets of the type shown in our fourth figure have already been adopted by smart Parisiennes to wear with separate sports dresses. This one, a creation of London Trades, relies for charm and originality on its little bows of self material, incrusted at the collar, and at the end of bands inserted on each side.

The Molyneux evening jacket, illustrated in our first figure, is in white chiffon, picot edged in silver thread, and with large silver flowers embroidered at the bottom.



The first sketch at the left shows an evening jacket in white chiffon, edged and embroidered in silver thread. Model from Molyneux.

This Lucile Paray sweater in bright geranium wool-lace, shown next, is trimmed with white crepe collar and cuffs, and with incrustations of jersey in tones of red at the bottom.

Third, Marcel Rochas makes his classic blouse of naturelle shantung with shoulder yoke, schoolgirl collar, and laced ribbon at the closing.

The separate tweed jacket from London Trades is made in honey-beige, and is trimmed with little bows of self material incrusted. Sketched fourth.

Silk alpaca, in a slate-blue tone, is the fabric selected by Martial & Armand for this dressy blouse model, pictured next.

Last, the white satin blouse from Paquin shows an interesting asymmetrical treatment, with jabot effect in front.

Activities of Women

French women are reported to have caught the fever of speculation on the stock market of Paris.

There were 1,200,694 marriages and 192,037 divorces in the United States in 1927.

What to Take on European Trip

This Questionnaire May Solve That Vexing Problem of What to Pack and What to Leave Behind

Miss Standish will be glad to answer questions on etiquette on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Persis Standish, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

By Persis Standish.

A CORRESPONDENT who is making her first European trip sent me the following questionnaire:

1. What sort of luggage is allowed in cabins on the average boat?

2. What sort of luggage is easiest to handle on a voyage where not much time is spent in one place?

3. How can one find pleasant companionship if one is traveling alone?

4. What sort of gowns will be needed on a cruise on a first class liner?

5. When does one tip?

6. And whom?

7. I have been told that men on the boat will ask me to dance. What shall I do about this?

8. How should a woman traveling alone register at hotels on the voyage?

9. My husband will meet me a little later. What will he need to wear on shipboard?

10. If my husband or I must share a cabin with a stranger, how will we determine who will have what bed, etc.?

Answers.

1. The modern arrangement allows for almost any kind of trunk, but as the average cabin is small, one trunk only. Others can be put in the hold, but must be so marked when they are sent to the ship. Hand luggage can be easily disposed of in the cabin.

2. Many people who are traveling constantly dispense with the ordinary trunk and replace it with some of the new hand trunks or large suitcases which can be inflated or deflated, according to the amount of the contents. These, however, should be light, because there are certain places where porters are scarce, and too much hand luggage is a nuisance.

A most convenient article of travel for a woman is a large hat box that will hold gowns, hats and shoes, and a bag of the zipper type into which last minute purchases can be stuffed. A very small handbag for valuables and money and toilet articles is more convenient than the purse ordinarily used.

3. The contacts made in travel are seldom more than ephemeral and one should not look for friendships to be made on pleasure trips, but many a pleasant hour can be passed with casual companions, if one does not take the situation too seriously. Your native judgment will have to help you in this matter.

If you wish to make acquaintances on shipboard, choose a table for six or seven, as there is likely to be some one who will be congenial to you in the group. The very fact that people are at sea together is a sort of introduction, and it will be easy to discover persons of your own type also seeking casual companionship.

It is hardly necessary to warn any American woman, even if she has not traveled alone before, of the dangers of casual acquaintanceship. Most of us recognize our own kind, and excepting those utter fools who should not be traveling alone, have learned to deal with humanity in a sensible way.

4. In general, the clothes needed will be sport clothes until dinner time, and then simple evening gowns. If the ship is making a southern cruise, wool sport things will be necessary at first and a few silk ones for Egyptian weather, for instance. A warm coat, either wool, lined with wool, or wool lined with fur, will be required on any European voyage even through the southern route.

A warm evening wrap is also necessary because ships are drafty and so are European hotels, and the nights are damp until late in May. The gowns for evening should be lovely in color and lined, but should on no account be elaborate. Knowing persons never wear elaborate gowns. They are particularly bad, this season, and nothing fussy ever packs well.

Several simple frocks of chiffon, in color, and one black lace would be all any one would require for a cruise. Besides, most European voyages include Paris at one time or another, and it would be nice to come home with a Paris frock or two. A traveler will find much more dressing on a boat homeward bound than outward bound.

5. One tips at the end of the voyage.

6. The room steward and stewardess; the deck steward; the table steward or waiter; the head steward in the dining room if he has been specially nice; the bath steward, if one has not a private bath, and the library steward if one has written many letters or spent any time in the library.

7. Use your own judgment. It is perfectly proper to accept or decline, as you choose.

8. A hotel register is one place where a woman uses her title rather than signs her name. She is Mrs. John Henry Smith of Chicago, and not Mary Barnes Smith, Chicago.

9. Nothing extraordinary, and particularly not knickerbockers. Ordinary business clothes for daytime; a dinner jacket at night; a heavy overcoat and a soft hat or cap. Do not allow your husband to imitate some of the strange Americans disguised as Europeans one meets traveling.

10. First come, first served. If the stranger is in the cabin first, he or she has a right to choose. If you are there, you have. However, a little courtesy will make things easy both ways. Try to have a cabin by yourself, or with a friend.

After All Is Said and Done, There's Nothing Quite Like French Furniture to Make a Boudoir Exquisitely Feminine

WillElla de Campi will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home furnishings. Address your letter to WillElla de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

By WillElla de Campi.

ROOMS in a small city apartment can be made every bit as attractive as more spacious country house interiors. Certain styles of furniture lend themselves particularly well to the creating of a distinguished ensemble in a limited space. This is especially true of eighteenth century French furnishings. Their delicate proportions and fine designs invariably produce a sense of distinction, and allow groupings which could scarcely be carried out in any other period.

Pleasing arrangement, quite as much as beauty of individual pieces, is essential. Furniture grouping is always important, but it is markedly so in small rooms. Every inch must be considered in order to accommodate all of the pieces necessary to comfort, and still allow room for "stretching."

Decidedly feminine, and unmistakably furnished for a woman is the French bedroom illustrated today. The simplicity of the bed is in accord with the paneled walls. As the head and foot boards are of equal height, this bed is satisfactorily placed sidewards, against the wall, where it fits nicely between the two windows. A feeling of spaciousness is produced which would be noticeably cut down if the head were against the wall. That way the bed would extend more than half way across the floor, so that the room would seem to be divided into two sections. It is always a wise plan, in a room which is not large, to have the bed placed lengthwise with the wall.

In the center of the space above the bed hangs an old bellpull, with floral embroideries on an old blue satin ground. The tassel hides a little electric bell button. A double tiered French table at the head of the bed holds a lamp with a salmon pink shade bound in blue, a few books, and any other small pieces which may be needed.

Dominating one end of the room is a fireplace with a simple marble mantel. Andirons are dully gilded and the mirror which hangs in the space above has a carved and gilded frame. A pair of pottery vases in French blue are filled with flowers. Side lights have salmon pink shades.

At the side of the fireplace, as shown in the illustration, is a lovely arm chair done in sage green and salmon pink striped moire. Flowered brocade makes the little extra cushion. Companion piece to this is a bargère at the other side of the fireplace, done in an antique damask, in sage green, copper and beige. A small table is conveniently placed beside it.

Extending across the full width of the room, at the opposite end, is a built-in wardrobe closet with four doors. One corner of the wardrobe is shown in Figure 2. Panels in the doors are filled with motifs cut from wall paper with designs in the French spirit. These are shellacked. The background is ivory and the panelings, which form frames, are old blue. With the plain walls and draperies, this treatment of doors gives a pleasing bit of pattern interest to the room.

Near one corner, as shown in Figure 2, is a dressing table, hung with taffeta. An old painted French fan, set into the top of the mirror, makes a charming complement. The lamps of tôle in the form of leaves and flowers, have ivory silk shades, bound with salmon pink. Accompanying the dressing table is a little bench with seat upholstered in brocade matching the extra cushion in the fireside chair.

Balancing this dressing table, near the other end of the room is a chest of drawers, painted antique ivory and decorated with dull gold. Between these two pieces is a door leading into the hall. This is decorated to match the closet doors.

The color scheme is in keeping with the feminine character of the room. Walls are painted cream and glazed. Moldings and baseboard are soft French blue, picked out in dull gold. Draperies are of soft French blue taffeta, hung over glass curtains of cream gauze. Cornices topping the draperies are painted old blue, ornamented with insets of wall paper. Salmon pink moiré with French blue stripes upholsters the head and foot boards of the bed. Bed cover and dressing table drapery match the window hangings.

An Aubusson rug, in faded tones of green, blue, salmon pink, and ivory, completes the room.

The Year to Come Will Bring Success to Those Born Today

Jupiter cannot give individual horoscopes and therefore will not answer personal inquiries.

By Jupiter

FRIENDLY aspects make this a splendid day for the usual Sunday observances. People will find themselves unusually attuned to higher thoughts and religious lessons will make a more profound impression under the stars at this time.

If this is your birthday your year is a good one. A letter or message will bring you unexpected and exceedingly good news. If you are a writer you will find more checks in your mail than rejection slips. But no matter what your profession or work, if this is your birthday, 1929 brings you success and happiness.

A child born today will be bright, active, eccentric, abrupt, inventive, original, obstinate, determined, forceful and yet at times kind and affectionate. He must learn to be adaptable, less critical, ingenious, resourceful and should never force issues. He will have many strange experiences and many unexpected and pleasant surprises.

Monday, April 8.

Saturn casts a gloomy and destructive vibration upon the earth today. Under the sway prevailing every one will feel a touch of the "blues" and the more sensitive will be haunted by premonitory fears and will assure themselves that "something awful is going to happen." Likely as not, though, nothing unpleasant will happen because Saturn affects us all this way and without cause.

If this is your birthday you will need all your philosophy and all your will power to overcome some of the obstacles which will beset your path in 1929. Worries, disasters and unpleasant events surround you, yet you can, if you choose, emerge from the next twelve months a stronger and more successful individual than you have ever been. It will be worth trying, at any rate.

A child born today will be quick tempered, restless, impulsive, bright, good in repartee or arguments, demonstrative, inclined to exaggerate and to lack continuity. He will be fond of literature and will need great activity.

Tuesday, April 9.

This is the kind of day that the unexpected happens. For example, you can get an entirely opposite and uncalled for reaction to any suggestion you may make. You know there are times like that, so take the advice of the stars and beware of today. If you have some pet plan to submit to some one, wait until the aspects are with you.

If this is your birthday, 1929 will be the end of all your old affairs and the beginning of a new life. A great change takes place in yourself, your environment, and your finances. It all depends upon yourself as to whether your path leads upward or downward. Use discretion in dealing with your superiors. Be calm, just, and avoid disputes and a bright, new road awaits your feet.

A child born today will be stubborn, sensitive, progressive, restless, intuitive, nervous, bright, enterprising, and imaginative.

Wednesday, April 10.

In a general way this is one of the most beneficial days we've had in a long while. Lands and property are particularly benefited by the stars, but all constructive efforts will receive silent and effective aid. A good period to push your plans and ambitions.

If this is your birthday, a pleasant, profitable and interesting year is before you. Romance will prove advantageous to you in more than just an emotional way. Women will bring you success and money, but you must avoid scandal.

A child born today will be clever, intellectual, nervous, sarcastic, quick tempered, quarrelsome, and impatient.

Thursday, April 11.

Disappointments and delays will mark undertakings started under the planetary sway today. This unfortunate period should be avoided and its destructive tendencies overcome by attending to routine work only.

If this is your birthday you have a year of good fortune before you. Unusual success will attend your efforts in whatever you are engaged, and the close of 1929 will find you more prosperous than you are now.

A child born today will be emotional, nervous, affectionate, kind, generous, imaginative, optimistic and resourceful. He will have trouble through false friends and should never trust any one until his friendship is proven. He must learn to be detached, patient, tactful, careful, and to overcome a tendency toward jealousy. Today's child will be known to the public, will travel and should seek a career as a musician, artist, actor, author, lecturer, or in some social business as the proprietor of a tea-room or beauty parlor.

Friday, April 12.

While there are several good aspects which aid constructive and conventional affairs, there is a configuration which will have a bad effect upon speculative matters. Nothing should be undertaken at this time which contains an element of chance.

If this is your birthday you have conflicting circumstances to face throughout 1929. Your friends will be loyal and will not cause you any heartaches but incomprehensible obstacles will prevent you from having the success you wish in your work. Do not make any radical changes or undertake a new profession or vocation during this year.

A child born today will be ambitious, pleasure loving, critical, active, and progressive. He will have to carve out his own career and must learn to be self-reliant. His success will depend entirely upon his own efforts.

Saturday, April 13.

If you have anything to sell, this is a good day to put forth your best efforts. It is also an auspicious period during which to speculate.

If this is your birthday you will have a rather busy year in 1929. Considerable travel is indicated and it is all connected with your work. Many new opportunities will present themselves and you can lay the foundation for business success in the next twelve months. Be careful that you do not offend your employers in your enthusiasms.

A child born today will be nervous, restless, talkative, witty, ambitious, agreeable, intellectual, and versatile.

A DOLLAR FOR YOUR DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay $1 for every dream published. Address "Dreams," Chicago Tribune.

From Vision to Reality.

I replied to a want ad for a typist in a well known firm in Chicago, and was accepted out of a group of about seventy. As I sat in the big main office with all the other typists I couldn't help feeling how nice it would be to be a "private" to some of the men, with an office to ourselves.

It must have been so much on my mind that I went home and dreamed that my wish was granted. But I couldn't see who it was because the man sat with his back to me.

That dream made such an impression on my mind, and perhaps, too, because I wanted it to be true, that I did a little exploring the next day, and peeped into all the offices. But not one was anything like the one in my dream, and I thought no more of it.

Saturday morning I was speaking to the young woman in charge of our department when the man in charge of the whole office came up and said, "I am glad to see you two together. It will save me repeating myself. I just wanted to say that we are putting (mentioning my name) up into the office of the superintendent."

I was so thrilled and excited about getting my desk placed just so, etc., that I never thought of my dream until that afternoon, when I turned to ask my new boss something. He was sitting at his desk with his back to me. And my whole dream came back to me, and it was the office just as I had dreamed it. E. C. H.

Stranger than Fiction.

My husband had left on a business trip, intending to stay at least three weeks. About a week after his departure he came to me in a dream and told me he would be home at 8 o'clock the next morning, and he also added that he had a present for me.

The dream had left such a strong impression on me that I found myself up before time, cleaning the house for his return. However, I did not acknowledge the fact at the time. As the clock struck 8 I heard footsteps on the porch and, sure enough, it was Wayne.

To further see whether my dream was being fulfilled, I asked him what the present was.

"How did you know I had something for you?" he said. Then, to my surprise, he handed me a gift, which was a check for $5,000.

You can't tell me that all dreams are fictitious! H. L.

A Nest Egg.

This dream is as plain today as it was thirty years ago.

I lived on a farm and my delight was to gather eggs. It was spring and the hens had been busy. One night I dreamed I scared "old Speck" off the nest and it was fully of bright nickles and dimes.

Shortly after my mother's uncle died and willed me money for a college education. Quite a nest egg, eh? H. A. S.

If Back Hurts Begin on Sal

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food causes acids which clog the kidneys so that they sluggishly filter only part of the waste and poison from the blood. Then you may have Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, begin to drink good water in moderate quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable druggist or pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink which every one can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications.

How to Have Perfect Teeth

by Antoinette Donnelly

Constant Care and Attention in Youth Will Be Amply Rewarded at Maturity

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It isn't necessary to dwell even the length of a paragraph upon the beauty advantages of good teeth. So well has the propaganda for the smile with the perfect thirty-two (incisors, bicuspids, and molars) been broadcast that the smallest member of the household is taught to use her tooth brush with the coming of her first set of teeth.

Fifteen, twenty years from now infected teeth, mended teeth, bridged teeth may be found. If so, however, it will not be because parents are ignorant of the now known principles of teeth care, but because of yet undiscovered reasons for caries, gum infections, and malformations. And, of course, there will always be a body of careless people who refuse to take advantage of the preservative influences to reckon on for faulty teeth. But the strides that have been made in dental improvement in our country within the last ten years have been nothing short of phenomenal. If nothing else had been accomplished but the mouth and teeth consciousness which marks our immediate generation in the teens and early twenties, it still would be phenomenal.

If you have association with girls of the romantic age you must be impressed with their quick dismissal of the youth whose teeth are not attractive and the enthusiasm a good set inspires. And, in their summary of a newly introduced girl friend the fact that she has pretty teeth weighs greatly in her balance.

One young woman was reading a best seller which tells of the love of a handsome earl for his sovereign, a woman of amazing character. "I don't believe he ever loved her," the girl slammed down the book. "How could he when her teeth were so terrible?"

When you get the affections involved with a physical characteristic you can count on the development of that characteristic to its ultimate degree of perfection.

Mannerisms Result.

Another psychological influence brought to bear on this teeth problem is the expressed opinion of learned men that many of the face mannerisms and even emotional reactions are based upon the condition of the teeth. A woman constrained to wear an unsmiling mask because she is conscious of poor teeth eventually is affected in spirit in her reactions. Or, if one has the habit of "covering" a part of the mouth which were thought better left unrevealed, she develops annoying face mannerisms that hurt her social cause somewhat.

In spite, however, of the advance in dental appraisal, we read the appalling statement of an ambitious statistician that there are at least 400 million bad teeth still in the nation, averaging about four to each person. Let us believe that they are found in the mouths of elders who were without the educational advantages that are common property today. Modern dentistry is laying down for itself a program, anyway, to prove that initial decay can be eliminated or entirely eradicated by early preventive measures instituted before birth [technically called prenatal prophylaxis] and as soon after birth as possible [called postnatal prophylaxis].

We have this on the word of Dr. Charles L. Stoloff, whose book, "Your Teeth" [E. P. Dutton & Co], ought to be a compulsory textbook for every person with a tooth in his or her head. In it you have a complete story of teeth, good and bad, from the enamel organ, the first sign of teeth appearing at a little over seven months before the birth of the child, to the last word on adult mouth hygiene.

Advice to Mothers.

What the pregnant mother can do to insure healthy teeth for the baby must necessarily be condensed, from Dr. Stoloff's valuable information, but in effect it runs: "She should eat foods which contain the mineral salts, particularly lime and vitamins, which help to form healthy teeth. Such foods are milk, of which the mother should take one quart a day, all kinds of dairy food, whole wheat and unbleached cereals; vegetables, such as lettuce, spinach, peas, string beans, tomatoes, asparagus, celery, beets, carrots, lima beans; fresh fruits, especially oranges. She should drink plenty of water to flush the system of acids which might attack the teeth."

After the child is born the mother should have knowledge of the essential foods for building healthy teeth. Coarse, hard foods requiring mastication should be given the child. It should be taught to masticate its food thoroughly, and taught, also, to masticate on both sides of the jaw for the sake of equal development.

Before the child is old enough to clean its teeth alone, parent or nurse should clean them with a piece of clean gauze or cotton wrapped around the finger, and which has been moistened with boiled water, weak boracic acid solution or normal saline solution.

"The use of a tooth brush should not be delayed after the appearance of the first molars," says Dr. Stoloff. And until after two years the brush may be moistened with plain boiled water, a weak solution of boracic acid [one ounce of boracic acid to a pint of boiled water], or normal saline solution [one-half teaspoonful of ordinary table salt to a glass of boiled water].

After two years a mild tooth paste or powder can be used on the brush. An effective, inexpensive, pleasant tooth powder can be made with precipitated chalk, one ounce; bicarbonate of soda, one dram. Add a few drops of pleasant flavoring material such as oil of wintergreen.

Attention to Cavities.

Attention to cavities in the early teeth is urged on parents. And a dentist's examination at 3 or 3½ is advised. The straightening of irregular teeth as the child gets older is an imperative duty unless the parent is willing to see her child grow up with irregularity of face outline.

While a mother cannot be blamed for hatching out an ugly duckling, at least many of the teeth imperfections can be laid at the door of her ignorance or carelessness. She can give her grown girl one of the greatest of beauty assets, this one of fine teeth.

Again, to condense Dr. Stoloff's valuable data, we offer these simple rules for the prevention of teeth decay in the adult mouth:

"By local care of the teeth and mouth, by careful, thorough brushing of the teeth; the use of dental floss to clean out any remaining particles of food; gum massage to stimulate the circulation of blood around the gums and teeth; use of lime water as a mouth wash, to be forced between the teeth; by immediate filling of small cavities to prevent extension of decay; by general care of the body by keeping physically fit; avoidance of too many sweets, sticky and mushy food; by eating foods which supply the body with necessary vitamins and minerals, and by visiting the dentist at least once every six months so that teeth and gums may be examined."

The toothbrush should be thoroughly cleaned after use to remove all particles of food, and to keep it sterile, Dr. Stoloff advises sprinkling ordinary table salt over it. The salt also keeps the bristles stiff.

Mouth Wash Desirable.

It is desirable to use a mouth wash after brushing the teeth and after eating. An alkaline wash, like lime water, our authority says, should be used before going to bed to counteract destructive acid formation. Any mouth wash, not irritating, pleasant to the taste, mildly antiseptic is good and there are a number of good preparations on the market. The lime water can be made at home. Its method of preparation is simple, and I have it in printed form. If you want it send a stamped, addressed envelope.

Of gum massage, Dr. Stoloff says, "It toughens the gums, as well as stimulating the blood circulation, making it more resistant to disease. There are two good ways of massaging it: one by rubbing the gum with the toothbrush while the teeth are being cleaned, or rubbing the gum gently with the finger. Another way is to massage the individual spots on the gum by continuously pressing and releasing the ball of the finger. At night before refiring and in the morning before eating are the desirable times for the massage work."

Pet Economies

Tell us about your pet economy or an odd economy of some one you know and we'll pay you $1 if we print your letter. Address Economy, Sunday Tribune.

You Never Miss Them.

My pet economy is to toss all pennies and sometimes other change into a box. People love to tease me about it because I am of Scotch descent. But I have the last laugh because when the Christmas clubs and insurance premiums are due, or there is something I have been wanting for the house, I open the little box and get a big surprise. Usually the amount is quite satisfying.

Recently I wanted to buy a painted scarf. Opening the box, I counted six dollars. The time before it amounted to $27.30—not to be laughed at!

"I always figure if you have ninety-nine cents—why, the penny you may scoff at will make the dollar. I call it economy because one can so easily throw away pennies, and after a long saving it is just like finding a few dollars. The queer and best part is, you never miss those pennies!

S. B. L.

Collects Corks.

Corks are my pet economy. Besides being handy for bottles, I use mine to stick my manicure scissors into when I'm traveling, thus saving the points.

I make funny men and animals with corks to amuse my niece.

I run a darning needle in a cork when I need to put a tape into a curtain hem, so spreading it open. I'm not above spreading a tiny bit of burnt cork on a light eyebrow.

See prize list below.

3. Pictures are to be submitted only in complete sets. The first three pictures were printed Sunday, January 13th. Hold all pictures until you have the complete set of 48. Then send them to "Capitals," The Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1439, Chicago, Illinois. All pictures must be in by midnight 21 days after the last picture has been published. No entries will be returned.

4. Each entry must be sent by First Class Mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office Department. With your entry send a letter giving your name and address and the name of your favorite State—the one you like for your home, and tell why you like it best. Letters must not exceed 50 words. Elaborate entries are not necessary. Make your entry simple. The prime requirements are correctness and neatness.

5. School Teachers Note: To interest school teachers in encouraging their pupils to enter this instructive and educational Game, the Chicago Tribune will award 5 prizes of $100.00 each to the teachers in public, parochial or private schools of grammar or high school grades whose pupils rank highest among the winners. Teachers! This new Game will familiarize your pupils with all the State Capitals. Help them win!

6. You need not purchase The Chicago Tribune to compete. You may copy or trace the pictures from the originals and use the copies you have made. The Chicago Tribune may be examined at any of its Offices or at Public Libraries free of charge.

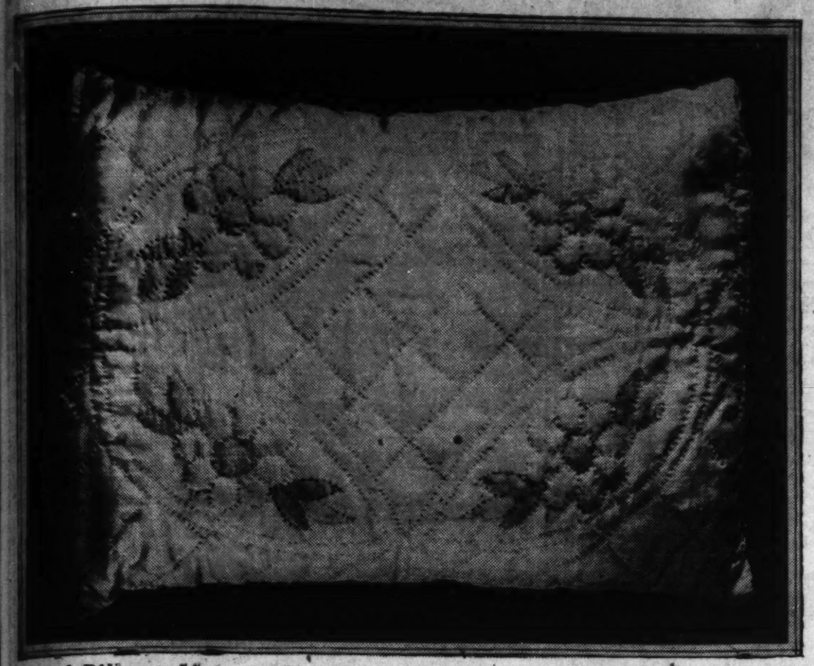
Practical and Fancy Needle Work By Clotilde . . .



Quilted Pillows May Be Made by Clever Fingers at Home

IN the big department stores as well as in smaller shops pillows are shown in a bewildering array of sizes, shapes, materials, and designs. And it would seem as though one couldn't have too many. Maybe you have seen these lovely quilted pillows, and this is a good time of year to do this sort of work, getting everything in readiness for the late spring and summer.

Of course, pillow tops ready for quilting may be bought at almost any fancy goods department, and they are shown in a variety of shapes and designs, but you can also design your own pillows, if you like that sort of work.

Flowers, leaves, or conventional designs can be cut out of bright colored silks and fastened with a little paste to a piece of voile, the same size and color as the outside of the pillow. Then fasten this down crudely on a cutting board with thumb tacks and draw in your quilting lines. After this is done lay a piece of China silk in the desired color over and baste carefully around the edges. Lay the voile and outer covering over a sheet of cotton wadding and do the quilting in small running stitches, matching the design in the silk thread you use.

If you prefer, you may use organdy or chiffon in place of the China silk. Quilted pillows for the children's room are made by cutting out animals, birds, or toys from bright colored silks and quilting them in place in the same manner just described. The pillow shown above measures 11 by 15 inches. Some of these pillows are round, some square, and others oblong, but none of the quilted ones are very large.

MRS. D. K.: You must have seen the instructions for making rugs out of old silk stockings in some other paper. I should imagine very pretty rugs could be made from stockings and am sorry not to be able to send you the directions for making them.

FRIEND IN NEED

Now Is the Time to Think of the Children and Help to Make These Spring Days Happy for Them.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

By Sally Joy Brown.

DON'T all of us like to think that the arrival of a baby means happiness for every one—happiness for the mother, for the family, and the promise of a happy childhood for the little newcomer?

Yet our files at the present moment show where the expected arrival of a baby is falling with crushing force upon parents whose savings have been exhausted by illness or unemployment, and who have absolutely no means of providing for it. Springtime and summer give us our chance to make babies happy and strong. All of us who have children know that now is the time to put roses in little cheeks with long walks out of doors, while sunshine and warm air do their part toward giving new lustiness and sparkle to the little ones.

That's where we can help. In a city like Chicago, there will be many families with children who have outgrown their baby carriages. Walkers and go-carts, too, are in demand, and certainly there are many which have served their purpose and can be passed on to the younger and new arrivals from babyland.

Baby clothes, baby beds, highchairs, play yards and iceboxes to keep the babies' milk fresh—anything, in fact, that serves a baby is wanted, and now is the time to give. Think over what you have and please let me know what you can contribute to make spring and summer a happy time for all Chicago babies.

Sick Person's Request.

"I have been a patient in this sanitarium for some time and have been wondering if THE TRIBUNE readers could give me some of the things I need and cannot buy, a kimono and some summer pajamas in size 38.

"J. K."

This shutin writes to us from the confines of a Wisconsin sanitarium where she has gone to build up her impaired health. Lack of funds prevents her supplying the many necessities and so she appeals to you. Can you help by providing the much needed garments?

Request for Mourning Garb.

"My mother died only a short time ago and I cannot afford to buy the black clothing I want. Can your readers get me a dress and coat, size 38? My husband has been out of work so we have no money for many of the things we need. MRS. E. M."

Your black coat from last spring which you have been planning to discard would provide for this woman the mourning costume she needs. May she not have it and perhaps a black dress you no longer want?

Precocious Child.

"I wonder if there is a teacher of dramatic art who would give instruction to the daughter of a widow I know. The little girl shows unusual talent and the mother cannot afford to pay for the lessons. M. L."

Such histrionic skill, fed and nurtured in this child, would undoubtedly have most pleasing results. If you are a teacher and have an extra hour each week to devote to her instruction I am sure you'll find her an apt pupil.

Wants Magazine.

"Has any one of your readers a copy of March, 1928, 'Better Homes and Gardens' which is no longer wanted? I am anxious to get this number and have been unable to get a copy anywhere. MRS. N. F."

If you are a subscriber to this publication undoubtedly you have a copy of this issue in your magazine files. If you have no further use for it I know Mrs. N. F. would be most grateful to receive it.

BEYOND THE PALE.

Man, so forgiving and indulgent
To scandals noisome and effulgent
With shoulder shrugs, benignly grinning,
Condones the graver sorts of sinning.
His breadth of view, his toleration
Draws just one line of stern negation.
To social limbo, swift, consigning
The lass whose little nose is shining.

Best Parties

Tell us about the nicest party you ever attended and we'll pay $1 for each letter printed. Address Parties, Chicago Tribune.

A Bushel of Fun.

The most amusing party I have ever attended was one where each guest had to register as he entered, writing his name with his left hand.

Later on a large blackboard was hung on the wall and each guest was requested to draw a picture of a specified animal—elephant, giraffe, cow, man, etc. After each had demonstrated his artistic ability, the blackboard being covered with queer, fantastic creatures, a man, who was an amateur artist, gave a talk on "Picture Appreciation" that convulsed the guests with laughter.

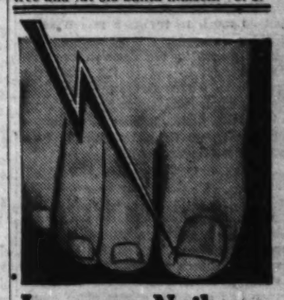
First prize for drawing went to a woman who pictured "A Man." The speaker declared: "The man is a fine Cro-Magnon, evidently the lady's ideal of the genus homo."

The party was pronounced "a bushel of fun." M. W. F.

A Unique Idea.

The most unusual party I have ever attended was given at my camp last summer. It was a huge birthday party for every one. Twelve large tables were set, each representing a month of the year. The counselors had obtained the needed data beforehand, so each girl sat at her rightful place.

The decorations were beautiful, from cold January, with snowballs, skis, and a New Year bell, to December, with an honest-to-goodness Christmas tree and fat old Santa himself. C. C.



Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

Pain Stops Instantly!

"Outgrow" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgrow" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail that it cannot penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost overnight.

Quick Success

Few girls in pictures have made such rapid strides toward success as this charming New Yorker. Just a few months ago she was given her first job, shadowing a star. Within three hours, she had a real part in the picture—"The Loves of Sunya."

Miss Bayard says: "I am told my selection was largely due to my perfect skin and lovely hair. I've really never taken much trouble with either. For my hair I use the simple method that most of the girls I know here in New York are so enthusiastic about. It's so easy. All you do is put a little Danderine on your brush each time you use it.

"This method is just what a busy girl needs. It's so easy; and it keeps your hair and scalp so clean you don't need to shampoo half so often. I am letting my hair grow and I find Danderine helps make it soft and easily manageable. I can arrange it any way I want and it stays that way. All my friends are complimenting me on the appearance of my hair, nowadays, because Danderine has brought out all its natural color and made it so soft and lustrous.

Danderine removes the oily film from each strand and makes dull, stringy hair gleamy, soft, easy to dress. It tones and refreshes the scalp; helps overcome dandruff. It is delicately fragranced; isn't stick or oily; doesn't show. All drug stores have the generous 35c bottles.

The Present

By Eleanor Jewett.

My Aunt Frances gave me a sweater,
And like a rose, with a duck in the middle;
I'm dressed up I wear my sweater
And my breather makes the duck go paddledy-piddle.

Paddledy-piddle goes my white duck
And I breathe my stomach way out to see
If he flops his wings—but he never does—
He just stares quietly back at me.

My white duck has a yellow foot,
And a yellow bill and he sleeps in a drawer.
When I undress he goes straight to sleep
And keeps till I get him and breathe once more.

Many people passing by on the sidewalk used to take Bobby to be a girl. His hair was light and curly and he had fine features and in his romper suit it was hard to know. When I got him his first trouser suit he walked around the room proudly and looking in the glass a smile spread all over his face and he said to me: "Well, Mummie, nobody can think I'm any woman again. Good looking... a good dancer but "B.O." (Body Odor) killed her charm

THE girl of his dreams! So she seemed—at first glance.

She danced wonderfully, too. Yet before the music stopped, the dream had vanished.

"Thanks for the dance," he murmured politely. But how different his real thoughts! He didn't come near her again all evening.

A humiliating experience. But it could never happen to Betty today. For she finally discovered what was spoiling her attractiveness. "B.O."—Body Odor! And then she found an easy way to overcome this unpardonable fault.

Betty is now admired, sought after by everyone. Read her story that follows.

"'B.O.' certainly fooled me for a long time.

"It was my doctor who told me why we're so rarely aware of our own body odor. The sense of smell becomes deadened to a familiar odor. But even on cool days, the pores give off as much as a quart of odor-causing waste, he said.

"Now, on his advice, I use Lifebuoy all the time and never worry about 'B.O.' Lifebuoy's antiseptic lather purifies. You do feel cleaner, fresher after a Lifebuoy bath.

"Lifebuoy keeps my skin so healthy-looking, too. And its extra-clean scent vanishes as you rinse. My whole family enjoy using Lifebuoy."

BLOOD ROYAL INSTALLMENT I.

We Fish in Troubled Waters.

NO sooner had George Hanbury and I decided to visit Austria in the summer of 1921 than I began to wonder what our stay in that land would bring forth. This, I think, was natural, for, though we had been there but twice, we had each time been party to matters of life and and death, and, indeed, our fortunes seemed to be so bound to that handsome country that I felt I had agreed not so much to revisit a region as to reenter an arena.

The reason for our decision was simple, namely, to put to the touch the knowledge which we had acquired of the German tongue, and, though we could have done this as well in Baden or Saxony, we naturally inclined to a district we knew and liked.

It may seem strange that two young men of leisure, not given at all to study, but rather to minding their acres and hunting five days a week, should have hired a tutor to make their evenings a burden for the best part of eighteen months, but upon the two visits I have mentioned our ignorance had been the source of so much embarrassment and peril that, late in the day as it was, we determined to master German at any cost.

That we were most happy in our tutor there can be no doubt. He was an Austrian and, though he never said so, plainly of high degree. He was learned, courteous, and understanding, and I can think of no company which his presence would not have improved. Of Maintenance, our home in Wiltshire, he grew, I think, very fond and, since he was so pleasant in his ways, I am sure we should never have dismissed him, but one May morning he suddenly took his leave.

"You need me no more," he said quietly, "and I must go. I have much to thank you for."

This abrupt declaration took us aback, but when it was plain that he had made up his mind we begged him to wait for a fortnight and go to his country with us.

He thanked us and shook his head.

"I have business," he said, "to which I must go at once and, though our ways are the same, I do not think we shall meet."

With that he spoke of our kindness in terms which it did not deserve and, promising to send an address to which we might write, asked that a groom might drive him to catch a train to London which left at midday.

It seemed best to argue no more, and so we parted, and that was the singular end of a relation which I am glad to think I always valued.

FIFTEEN days later we left for Austria by road. Bell and Rowley, our servants, went with us and, although George Hanbury did not know it, we carried arms. We took no chauffeur, because we had none to take, for we always drove and cared for the car ourselves, but we had taught the servants how our car should be handled and the general condition it deserved, and no chauffeur that I have known was ever so jealous of his charge.

Bell and Rowley were ex-soldiers—quiet, steady men who knew no fear. They were most able and trusty, did with good will all manner of duty which no mere body servant could well have been desired to essay and seemed content with their lot. To their unswerving devotion this tale will testify.

The evening before we started I had strolled round to the coachhouse, where Bell, who was my servant, was packing the car.

When he saw me he glanced about him, as though to be sure that he and I were alone.

"Rowley's asked Mr. Hanbury, sir, and he says we won't need any arms." He hesitated. "Is there anything else I can put in the locker below?"

There was a secret locker which few, I think, would have found. This had been made to take arms and had served its turn.

I looked at Bell.

The man was appealing to Cæsar as plain as could be. Yet never before had he done this, for Hanbury and I were equal and each did as the other said.

For a moment the man's eyes held mine. Then he looked down.

"Why do you think we should take them?" said I.

"That I can't say, sir."

He was a man of few words.

"I'm glad you asked me," I said, and gave him my keys. "Mr. Hanbury is perfectly right. There is no earthly reason why we should take the things, but—well, you needn't let any one see you, but put them in."

"Very good, sir."

So was Bell also among the prophets.

. . . . . .

We came to Salzburg quietly, entering the city at the close of a beautiful day. There we proposed to stay for a fortnight or more, and the landlord of an old fashioned inn had been advised to expect us that very night.

We knew the house and preferred it to another hotel, for it stood in a quiet street, and so slight was its custom that a guest who was willing to pay was very well need. The kitchen was at his service, and such food as he wished was made ready at any hour; his rooms were kept as pleasant as they could be; all his ways were studied, and, indeed, so much was made of him that the host might have been his steward and the inn his private house.

There then, we took up our quarters without any fuss, not at all sorry to be again in Salzburg and much looking forward to roving the familiar landscape, fishing the streams we remembered and drinking our fill of a sunlight that did our hearts good.

As we proposed, so did we for nearly a month, for the weather was continually fine, and I never remember keeping so healthy a holiday. Often enough we were abroad at daybreak and would take our rest by some brook in the heat of the day, and more than once we spent the night in the open, to wake up among the mountains like giants refreshed.

We did not neglect our German, but spoke with peasants and others whenever we had the chance, and we solemnly read the papers and more than once went to the play. George was far better than I, who was very halting and had to rehearse whatever I wanted to say, but at least I could understand the speech of another and, if he was content to be patient, we could converse.

WE neither sought adventures nor found them, and met with nothing more startling than a catch of five great trout in one afternoon. Of this we were very proud, for on no other day did we ever catch more than two, and on two out of three we caught none, for, though we enjoyed our angling, I fear the show we made was beneath contempt.

Bell or Rowley went always with us, and often we took the two, for they were both countrymen and were never, I think, so happy as when they were among meadows and within sound of a stream.

So we lived and moved very simply, till the twenty-eighth day of June.

That day we left Salzburg betimes, with both the servants and a hamper of food and drink. We drove deep into Carinthia, intending to prove once more that gracious water which had yielded our famous catch and more than half expecting to pass the night that followed under the stars.

For the first time the weather was sultry, which seemed to predict a storm, but the heaven was clear enough and when, about sundown, George Hanbury caught and landed two very fine trout, we determined to stay thereabouts and to fish the same stream the next day. Whilst we were busy, Bell and Rowley had found a little clearing in the heart of a wood and, since this was very private and was fed by a track by which we could bring up the car, we were very soon eating our supper within its green walls.

There had been no cool of the day and, when the meal was over, Hanbury and I went strolling to take the air. Of this there was very little and I was just wondering whether we should not have been wiser to rest on the brow of some hill when, happening to look skywards, I perceived that half the heaven was blotted out.

That the storm we had feared was coming was now very plain and, since we were not at all ready to defy a downpour, we decided to run for Salzburg without delay.

Ten minutes later we had taken the road and, though I had hoped that we might run out of the storm, before we had covered ten miles the lightning began to play.

I never remember such a night.

The elements might have agreed to dispute our passage. Thunder and lightning apart—and these were monstrous—the tempest beset us as the seas a laboring ship; so savage was the rage of the wind that I expected every moment our hood to be carried away, while the violence and volume of the rain beggar description.

Our progress being so hampered, it soon became plain that, unless the storm abated, our journey to Salzburg would take twice as long as it should and, after a little discussion, we decided to make for St. Martin, which was a village we knew. This lay some forty miles off and, though we might have found shelter nearer to hand, the landlord of the inn at St. Martin was our very good friend and would, we knew, make us welcome, though we came as thieves in the night.

NOW, had it been day, so well did we know the country that, rain or shine, we should have been at St. Martin within the hour, but, with none of our landmarks to guide us and the lightning, the rain, and the darkness confounding our sight, we had to depend upon signposts until we should strike some road which could not be disguised. And this was the devil, for, though we had a searchlight with which to illumine the legends the sign posts bore, so dense was the rain that they could not be read from the car, and Bell and Rowley, who took it in turns to slight, were very soon drenched to the skin.

At last we came to cross roads that seemed familiar, but, though George Hanbury would have chanced it, I turned the beam on to the sign post and Rowley got out.

He had not been gone ten seconds when I heard a deep voice speaking German at the door he had used.

"Your highness will please to enter."

Another younger man answered.

"I demand to be told where I'm going. I demand——"

The first speaker cut short the protest.

"Your highness will enter the car."

There was a moment's silence.

Then——

"O, damn the rain," said the younger sullenly, as though, I thought, to suggest that but for the foulness of the weather he would have refused to comply.

With that he entered the car and flung himself down beside Bell. His companion followed heavily.

It was, of course, plain that the elder, if not both, of the strangers had been expecting some car and that, when we stopped at the place and time appointed, he had directly assumed that ours was the car that he sought. On such a night such a mistake was natural and, since all the light in the car was the hooded glow that illumined the instrument board, I was not at all surprised that even his entry had not discovered his mistake.

Hanbury's lips were close to my ear.

"Dirty work," he whispered. "Let's carry them on to St. Martin and see what's what."

As a figure whipped under the curtain I let in the clutch.

"We're all right, sir," said Rowley. "The road's straight ahead.

"Good," said Hanbury. "Shut the door behind you, but don't sit down."

There was a moment's silence, broken by the slam of the door.

Then—

"What the devil's this?" cried the man who had spoken first.

The question was put in German, and Hanbury answered at once.

"That's what I was going to ask you."

"Who are you? And what is this car?"

"It happens to be mine," said Hanbury.

The younger man let out a yell.

"My name's Duke——"

"Silence!" roared the other, rising. "Tell your chauffeur to——"

Whatever else was said was not to be heard, for the duke was shouting like a madman and trying his best to make the other give way; the wind was slamming at the canvas as though it would drive it in, and a long peal of thunder diminished all lesser noises.

Hanbury was speaking.

"Your highness may rest assured that we are not going to stop."

"I tell you," raged the other——

"Understand this," said Hanbury. "I take no orders from you."

For a moment there was no sound behind me but the heavy, rapid breathing of a furious man at bay. The next instant all was uproar.

Though I could see nothing, I guessed that the man had drawn arms. And so it was.

Exactly what followed I do not think any one can tell, for, seeing no reason to stop, I continued to drive the car at a good round pace, and this confounded the confusion which the darkness and confinement made. Bell was involved with the duke, who had been thrown upon him, and could not get free. Rowley and the other were grappled and were swaying and stumbling and striking their heads on the hood; George had the fellow by the wrist and was being flung to and fro in his efforts to point the weapon out of harm's way, and every one, I think, was raving to try to make himself heard. In the midst of all this disorder the pistol was fired and the ear-splitting shock of the explosion brought us all, more or less, to our knees. Without so much as thinking, I set a foot on the brake, and when we had come to a standstill I found the struggle over and George and the servants behind me regarding their late opponent, who was back on the seat.

Exactly what followed I do not think any one can tell.

For a moment nobody moved. Then George's hand came over and slid a heavy pistol into my lap.

"All clear," he said quietly.

I let in the clutch.

THANKS to George Hanbury's efforts, the shot had passed through the hood. Indeed, but for his energy the battle must have gone to the stranger, or some one of us must have been hit; for the fellow was lefthanded, and Rowley, who was on his right side, could not have captured his arm.

Here let me say that I shall not set down his true name, or, indeed, the true names of some others of whom I shall tell. These and the names of some places I have been careful to change, for, if I had not done so, I could not have written so freely and more than one passage must have been excised from this tale.

As we ran into St. Martin, George spoke again.

"We are coming to an inn," he said, "where my friend and I are well known. They're simple, honest people who value their friends, and if I were to tell them that you had drawn upon us, you'd find a very rough house. I do not propose to tell them, and I'm sure you will give me no cause to change my mind."

A low laugh came from the duke, and his fellow let out a curse.

"What the devil's your game?" he snarled.

"Frankly," said George, "it's to put you where you belong. We obviously can't do it until we know where that is, and, as this car's almost as unpleasant to argue is as to fight in, we're going to have things out in front of a fire."

The other said nothing, but I heard him suck in his breath.

"I'm Duke Paul," said the duke suddenly. "Duke Paul of Reichtenburg, and this man's Maj. Grieg of the Black Hussars. He asks your game, but I'd damned well like to know his."

"We'll ask him in a minute," said Hanbury, and with that he said we were English and gave our names.

"I like London," said the duke irrelevantly. "Do you remember ——?" He named a revue. "I saw it thirty-three times. There was a girl in the chorus called Ruby Judge. Stung me to glory, of course, but she—she had her points. Little devil in a temper, she was. I gave her some sables one day, and because she'd wanted broad-tail she shoved the lot in the fire."

There was an electric silence.

Then Grieg laughed, as though in triumph, and the blood came into my face. Though his conduct, I think, was warranting what we had done, I had an uneasy feeling that we had "backed the wrong horse."

Not until candles had been lighted in a great bed chamber and the four of us were gathered about a fire of logs were George and I fairly able to appraise our two guests, for they were in uniform and the deep collars of their greatcoats had shrouded the face.

No man, I think, would have liked the look of them.

Duke Paul was a loose lipped youth of about my age; that is to say, twenty-five. His sleek hair was sandy, and his complexion most pale. Weak, idle, dissolute—as such he impressed me. There was nothing noble about him, but much that was mean and, while his manner was haughty, this arrogance was plainly at the mercy of any one that was minded to meet his gaze. His nails were bitten to the quick.

Grieg was a man of forty, tough and thick set. His hair and his eyes were black, a perpetual frown fretted his heavy brows, and his jaw was curiously square. He was smart and well groomed and looked a soldier, accustomed to command and to obey. Neither wise nor stolid, his expression was especially grim, and I remember feeling glad that I was not his subordinate.

Both were dressed in dark blue and wore neither belts nor spurs, but, while the major's were plain, the duke's collar and cuffs were laced with gold.

Very few words had been exchanged and I was still wondering how best to discharge the duty which we had so impetuously shouldered, when, to my great surprise, Grieg set a chair for the duke and then turned to Hanbury and me.

"I've been thinking things over," he said, "and if I'd been in your position I should have done the same. I—I must apologize."

Before either of us could answer——

"And what about me?" said the duke, with his back to the fire.

The other lowered his head.

"I am at your highness' disposal. Your highness will deal with me on our return."

"By God, I will," said the duke.

"One thing, I beg, and that is that your highness will not judge me until my case has been heard."

"Case?" cried the duke. "Case? D'you think I don't know——"

"I beg you, sir, not to be hasty. I am, of course, under arrest, but your highness is unattended and if you will allow me to attend you I will not abuse the privilege."

Here a knock fell upon the door and Grieg was there in an instant to see what it meant.

I think a child would have seen that submission so sudden and abject was far too good to be true, but, though the duke looked puzzled and followed his "prisoner" with a malevolent gaze, the entrance of Bell with some liquor distracted his thoughts. The liquor including mulled wine, he let out a whoop of delight and, though I fully expected that, once this diversion was over, he would return to the charge, he did not do so and, beyond ignoring Grieg's presence, seemed to have shelved his displeasure and the matter from which this sprang.

TO me it was plain that his silence was exactly what Grieg had desired, but, though the latter had managed to shut the duke's mouth and was already discussing something ponderously the fury of the storm, I could not help feeling that he had other fences to fly before we parted and that, if he surmounted them all, he would be surprisingly adroit. Indeed, the end came rather sooner than I had expected, for the duke drank more mulled wine than he could conveniently carry and was quarrelsome in his cups.

Grieg had ventured to suggest that he should retire for the night.

The duke glared at him.

"Retire?" He spouted an oath. "Where are my clothes?"

"If your highness could dispense for once——"

"What about a bath in the morning? Where are my sponges? Who's to shave me? What have I got to put on?"

"No one regrets more than I——"

"'Regret,' you blackguard? The only thing you regret is that you've lost your match. But for these fellows here—where were you taking me, Grieg? Answer me that. I'd have had my things there—I don't think. And you have the nerve——"

"I implore your highness to wait. I beg——"

"You can—well beg," raved the duke. "You came to me this evening and said the prince wanted me at once. You——"

"I implore your——"

"Silence!" roared the duke.

Then he turned to Hanbury and me.

"Prince Nicholas of Riechtenburg is my great-uncle, and, as my father's renounced, I'm the heir to the throne. My father's cousin don't like this—the Duke Johann. He's had one or two shots at putting me out of the way and, now that the old man's failing, I suppose he's quickening up. But he"—he pointed to Grieg—"he's on my great-uncle's staff. I know Johann's little crowd and I don't drink with them, but I never dreamed that he'd got at the prince's A. D. C.'s."

Grieg had been standing still, with his hands behind him and his eyes on the speaker's face. Now he shrugged his shoulders and turned to a chair.

As he sat leisurely down——

"Nothing so slippery," he said coolly, "as the steps of a throne."

I have never seen a mask so bluntly discarded and I was not surprised when the duke started forward with an oath and a burst of abuse.

The other stifled a yawn.

"Like father, like son," he said shortly. "But he had the sense to renounce."

As the duke began to stammer with passion, I stepped to the bell. With my hand on the old bell rope, I looked at Grieg.

"I'm not concerned with your politics," said I, "but you happen to have made me your host."

"That's one way of putting it," said Grieg.

"It's my way of putting it," said I. "And, as I don't like your behavior, I suggest that you go to bed."

The man looked me up and down.

"And if I refuse," he said, rising.

"I shall order my servants to put you out of this room."

As I pulled the rope the duke swayed forward drunkenly, tumbler in hand.

"Wait a minute," he said. "I haven't d-done with him yet. Done? I haven't begun. I"—he rocked on his feet—"and who are you to give orders? Just because——"

Bell entered the chamber.

"Show this gentleman to his room," said I.

"Very good, sir," said Bell.

He picked up Grieg's hat and coat and stood with his hand on the door.

"D-damn it," cried the duke. "I told you I hadn't d-done with the swine. Hadn't begun. He's a traitor—an insolent traitor. And I'm going to put him in his place. Tell 'm to shut t' door."

Grieg threw back his head and laughed.

"I congratulate you," he said, "upon your salvage."

Then he turned on his heel and walked out of the room.

What happened in the next half hour may as well be imagined as not. One drunken man is as good as bad as another, and, by the time the duke was asleep, both Grieg and Bell were bitterly cursing the folly that had led us to take up his quarrel. Having gone so far, however, we decided we could not leave him to the mercy of Grieg, and that at a village of which he knew less than the name we would therefore decided that we must, in decency, carry him where he wished and that, after that, we would wash our hands of a business which could breed nothing but trouble and was thankless indeed.

We then spun a coin to decide which of us two should pass the night in the chamber in which the duke slept and, when—I confess, to my relief—the lot had fallen upon George, I bade him "good-night," and went out to get out of the room.

Rowley met me at the foot of the staircase, to say that Bell was watching the major's door, but I dismissed this precaution needless and bade him take their rest by the side of the car. This was happily simple, for there was no coachhouse, but a gigantic hut. I had driven the car clean into the hut itself, to the great content of the lord and all his staff, who were tired of regarding so unfamiliar a sight, and I also told the servants that, if Grieg sought to leave the house they were to let him go, for I had no wish at all to hold him prisoner or, indeed, to set eyes on him again. With that, I gave Bell the pistol which George had taken from Grieg, in case the latter should endeavor to damage the car. Such an attempt seemed to me likely enough, for, since his abduction of the duke had so miscarried, it would plainly be to his interest to apprise those he served of his failure before the duke reappeared; and, as he could naturally expect assistance from us, to delay the duke's return was the best he could do.

Bell took the pistol and then, with an air of apology, offered me one in stead.

"I should go armed, sir," he said, "until we're out of the wood."

I slid the thing into my pocket and went to my bed.

NOTHING disturbed me that night, and I was afoot at seven of a beautiful day.

We had brought a suitcase from Salzburg, and the landlord remembered my ways, so Bell had made everything ready for me to bathe and change. As soon as my toilet was done, I went straight to Hanbury's room, to find him smoking at the window and the duke still sleeping like the dead. While George was dressing, I took his place in the room, and then, between us we persuaded the duke to rise.

The latter refused point blank to leave his bed, upbraiding us fiercely for rousing him and declaring that the pain in his head was not to be borne. On our persisting he started to curse and swear and threw a glass at Hanbury when at last he ripped off the clothes. Once he was up, however, he took himself in hand and behaved most civilly, though he gave us no choice.

Breakfast he would not, but drank some China tea. When I said that no sort of tea was to be had in such an inn, he abused the host and

The DEVIL and the DEEP SEA

by Eden Phillpotts

The Story of Ned and Sally—Two Headstrong Young People Who Clashed on Sea and Land and Escaped Death in Spite of Themselves.

WHEN Sally Otter got tokened to the longshore fisherman, Ned Bartlett, we wasn't much surprised, because they'd walked out together for six months before it happened; but them as knew the parties and cared twopence about 'em felt in a bit of doubt if it was like to come to a triumphant match, for the reason that both man and girl had a pretty lively temper and a strong feeling that they liked life to go their own way. And they took trouble to make it. They were a clever pair and high spirited, with a good conceit of themselves, and it was quite natural they should see each other's virtues and high qualities; but love's a game of give and take if it's going to be enjoyed for long by both players, and the experienced ones had a feeling that Sally and Ned might each be a bit grasping in that matter and want the scales to lean their own way.

Of course you do see the balance struck so perfect sometimes that life runs true for a husband and wife, and neither ever frets or thinks about giving or taking, just for the reason their hearts be one and each gives all and each takes all in perfect trust and understanding; but that don't happen if the woman's got red hair like Sally Otter, or a chin on him same as young Bartlett had.

He made his mark among the small fishermen at Dennycombe and had his own boat, though only twenty-three years old, and what he didn't know about the ways of crabs and lobsters weren't worth knowing. He was a worker, too, and a very ambitious young man, hopeful some day to lift himself above his present job and go into fishing as a master with a good Brixham trawler or two and lesser men in his command; while as for the girl, her place in life was pretty humble against him, for she was no more than dairymaid at Walnut Tree farm—so-called because of an ancient tree that lifted over the gate of the farm yard and went back into history far beyond the memory of living men.

The farm stood on the cliffs above Dennycombe strand, perched up tough and brave, in the eye of the sea winds, and its meadows and arable spread around it, so that up along, in the farm, said milking of a morning, Sally would often see her lover off in the dimpsey of dawn to his crab pots and think how they were working each for the other.

WHEN Ned offered for her, she liked the way he done it and the way he bent his thick eyebrows over his black eyes and stuck out his great blue chin.

"You know me, Sally Otter," he said. "You know me now for a tolerable masterful man, and I know you for a girl of character, and no other sort would have pleasured me for a moment. Us have got what you may call wills of our own, and so sure as God's in heaven the sparks will fly between us when we're married now and again, same as they have ever since we've walked together; but be that at it will, I've got a most amazing regard for you, and that such an ambitious own-self man as me should have fallen in love at all shows what a mighty big thing it is.

"We've unfolded our feelings very clever for half a year, and I love you more every time I set eyes on you. I think the world of you, in fact, and I'd be a very proud man if you saw your way clear to wed next fall and let me put my name down for one of the new cottages up the vale that Frederick Masterman is building at this moment. So there it is, Sally, and I much hope you find yourself of a mind and it's no odds if we differ in small things so long as we agree in sharing life for evermore."

She liked that, and of course she'd long made up her mind to take him and had even wondered a bit why he didn't offer for her sooner. But she set that down to the breezes that had blown over their courting, pretty stiff sometimes. Then she looked up at him, for he stood a foot taller than her, and smiled out of her agate brown eyes into his black ones and stood on her toes and put her arms round his neck.

"I've loved you a longful time, Ned," she told him, "and I'm cruel glad you love me, and us be like to suit each other amazing well, I'm sure."

With that he kissed her and felt very certain she was right as could be; and then they carried on as usual and Bartlett put in for one of the new cottages and looked forward to marriage and bought her a little ring with a proper jewel in it that cost him two pounds.

He didn't like Sally working for other people now very much, but she was fond of Walnut Tree farm, and the folk in it and ordained she'd bide there till they was wed and not go to her old aunt in Dennycombe, who had no use for her, anyway.

FOR busy people, they saw a lot of each other and it was the girl's great delight to go on the sea with Ned when she got the chance, and she better liked to do so than any other sort of pleasuring. She loved fishing and was never so happy as when anchored a mile or two off shore in Bartlett's boat with half a dozen lines down for the dabs and other flat fish. And since her hours along with him on the water always meant a couple of free meals at the farm, Mrs. Warner, the farmer's wife, was pretty easy about it and let Sally go off when she could, because her husband, James Warner, doted on a fresh dab and they suited the old man inside, and he wondered whatever he'd do for 'em when Sally was gone.

She certainly loved the sea amazing and often wished she'd gone for a stewardess instead of taking up work ashore, for she was never seasick, even when Ned's anchored boat rolled near gunwales under on a loppy sea. Nor could aught frighten her, and she often laughed at his care afloat, for he was up to all sailor's dodges and never would let her make fast a sheet or do anything not shipmanlike. She poked fun at him sometimes and said he was feared of the sea though he lived by it; and he answered that he was feared of naught, but he knew the sea and she did not, and she'd soon larn to fear it all right when she larned more about what it could do.

'Twas a case of "where ignorance is bliss" with Sally, for she loved a bit of a tumble and thought the sea a good-tempered old monster and wondered why them as lived by it often dreaded it. But, then, she'd always got her sweetheart along with her, and as he never blew about himself, she didn't understand his cleverness or his great seamanship always to keep everything suent and safe and take no manner of risk when she was aboard. He wondered sometimes at her cocksureness, however, and once he took her out in a cap of wind, when the landing was safe, and thought to see a white feather when he carried on till they shipped a tidy sea; but the only white feather was in the waves, for Sally laughed, and when Ned put her up in the wind and bade the girl bale a bit she cried to him to carry on and not be feared of a pail of water in the boat!

THEN came the memorable jaunt on Bank Holiday, when Ned was wishful to take her to Sidmouth fair and bide ashore; but that weren't no use to her. She hadn't got no pleasure in the land when she could go out to sea for a day, and so to suit her it was ordained as they put in a long spell with the dabs and maybe whiff for an early mackerel. For mackerel was coming up channel a bit afore their usual time this year.

Sally had milked her cows and done her chores at cocklight and was on the strand afore Ned came down. The wind blew off shore and the sea was smooth with just catspaws playing about, but the sky looked dull by eight o'clock and morn had been full of threds in the sky, which mostly promise bad weather. Bartlett told her the glass was falling and suggested again they'd best go to the fair, but Sally wouldn't hear of it.

"John Slocombe have took our great white bull to the show this morning," she said. "Him what farmer calls 'Devil.' 'Tis a queer thing, Ned, that only me and Johnny can face that bull. He'll come like a lamb to me or old John, but I wouldn't trust nobody else with him for an instant. He's wicked at heart."

"Then come and see if he takes a prize at the fair," said Ned, "and leave the sea for a day. You shore people make such a upstore about that bull but I lay he's all right if he knows a man or woman ain't feared of him."

"That's what I tell you about the sea," answered Sally, laughing. "The sea's all right if you ain't feared of it, and I be going fishing today, Ned, and no place else. I've dreamed of this beautiful holiday for a month of Sundays and I've brought a proper dinner and a hugeous pasty what Mrs. Warner cooked for you special. And master's crying for dabs to his supper tonight."

"You'll have your way," he said, "and when I quit the sea some day and own big boats, with lesser men than me to sail in 'em, what'll you do then?"

"Make love to 'em," she promised, "and get 'em to let me go fishing sometimes. 'Tis life to me to be on the water."

SHE helped him launch his boat and took the tiller, which she liked to do. Another man shouted to Ned as he went off to the southeast, but he took no notice.

"What did he say?" asked Sally.

"Told me to watch out."

"Watch what?"

"The weather. Wind's backing against the sun, and there'll be a jump presently if it goes south of west."

"Let it jump then," she said. "I wonder some of them men are brave enough to go as far as the crabpots sometimes."

Ned weren't in a very good temper at the start, because he'd rather have been ashore, out of sight of his working job that day, but her high spirits cheered him up and they set a couple of lines for mackerel and cruised a bit in a shifty wind that he knew would soon freshen. But he lighted his pipe and sat tight with the sheet in one hand and a mackerel line in the other. His sweetheart tired of that after an hour and asked to go to the dab grounds a mile farther out; so he took a long tack and then worked up to a place Sally always said was richest for the big dabs.

She knew the sea marks so well as any fisherman; and now she had to get a place called Castle Rocks, in a bee line with Walnut Tree farm and open out Berry Head to the southwest. But the weather was growing a bit thick off the sea, and though she got her home and the rocks all right, she couldn't pick up the Head far ways off because it was hid in sulky gray clouds by now.

Ned carried on another knot and then downed sail and dropped anchor. A good bit of a lop was on and the wind began to feel like rain and blow harder, so he warned her they couldn't hope for a very long sitting. They ate their food and he brought out his squid and baited and lowered the lines; and then Sally found that though mackerel were idle flat fish were not, and she began to pull 'em in so fast as the hooks touched bottom. Ned was amazed himself at the wondrous way the dabs were coming, and in their excitement he forgot the weather and everything but the growing catch for half an hour. But then a wave lipped over and he looked up and saw they must be gone and look sharp about it.

"Cruel sorry," he said, "but 'tis going to blow hard in half an hour and there'll be buckets of rain along with it. There's a bit of the sea on the beach a'ready. Up lines, Sally, while I up anchor."

But she wouldn't hear of no such thing.

"'Tis the day of my life, Ned, and I ban't going to stop for a puff of wind," she said. "I must have another dozen."

She fetched in a two pound dab at the same moment and dropped it in a great heap of the fish. And then he spoke short to her.

"Hear sense," he said. "It may be the day of your life, but I don't suppose you want for it to be the last day. We're two mile off shore, and that's twenty minutes in the boat. It's blowing and blowing hard, as you'll see when I put a corner of sail up. There'll be a nasty sea on the beach a'ready."

"Just ten minutes more then, if you're frighted," she said, "just ten, Ned; but it's a cruel shame and I'J never have thought you was a coward."

That angered him, but he well knew it weren't a time to lose his temper. He scowled at her red head and didn't answer, but took out his watch. He could see a man or two waving on the beach, and he knew what he was like to be in for a wet landing by now; but he thought ten minutes more or less wouldn't make no great odds, and he didn't mean for her not to pay the price of the word she'd spoken. He said nought and first he meant to give her all ten minutes and a damn good ducking after; but his true seaman's instincts got back in him and he axed himself why he should play the fool and do a silly thing just for spleen. And then he acted, as he knew he ought to have done an hour sooner.

"Draw up," he said. "I'm going home. There's a sea running on the beach and the sooner we're over it the better for my boat if not for you."

SHE was angry then, full of her sport and dead to reality. She said sharp things and laughed at him and sulked and wouldn't be handy. And then he gave her a cuff on the side of the head, but keeping his own temper the while, because he knew very well by now he'd need it. She slipped and sat down on the mass of fish and was too astounded to say another word, but just stared at him with her mouth open and her red hair blowing in her eyes.

It had got a good bit darker by now and begun to rain, and there was a big roll and sea horses whitening the wave tops. And Ned found his anchor wouldn't come easy; so, alive to the gathering danger, he whipped out his knife and cut through the rope. Then he hoisted a bit of his lug sail and went to the tiller and ran for it.

The boat seemed a parlous long time getting under way to his impatience, and he calculated whether he should sail right in on the strand and chance it or take a tack; but the waves were running high enough already to poop his little craft, and the wind blowing harder every minute, and he soon knew to his horror that it was going to be a matter for the Almighty if he got ashore at all. Once he thought the sea was coming over, when a real big un overtook the boat, but it weren't broken and just lifted her like a cork and rolled on under and went ahead. Then he shook up a rag more of the sail and luffed a thought, for he'd need to tack he found if they didn't want to get broadside on in the broken water on the beach.

Sally began to understand at last they were in a bad mess, but not a word she said. She watched the seas and wondered which of 'em would topple in, and she found herself face to face with an ocean very unlike any she'd seen except from the safety of dry land. The toss and tumble that had looked no more than a pleasant bit of flurry from Walnut Tree farm was mighty different now she found herself in the midst of it.

But even the size of the waves weren't bulking so big in her mind as the size of the outrage what Ned had put upon her, and she hated him very hearty for a bit. She'd got off the fish and sat forward with her eyes upon him; and then he took his tack a quarter of a mile from shore and nosed straight for the surf. He knew it was deep right up to the land, and he already saw half a dozen men running for where he'd come in.

There was a lot of water in the boat by now, and he shouted to Sally:

"Bail for your life!" he said; and, glad of a job, she set to it and done her best. Then they was in the white water and seemed like a log of wood at anchor for a minute, but Ned kept her nose straight and she wallowed from wave to wave as they slipped under her, but each fetching her a thought nearer.

'Twas a miracle of seamanship, as the men told after, for the boat was near waterlogged now and bailing in vain; but she weren't a wreck yet, and good luck and great skill kept her moving and she didn't go broadside on till she touched bottom. But then a roller twisted her round like a straw and the mast went and she capsized into a sheet of foam. Ned was ready for that, however, and so was the men ashore. They'd thrown ropes to him, and he'd got his arm round the woman by that time, for the moment the boat touched he'd jumped for her right forward and they was in the water to their middles in a moment but clear of the wreck.

With a rope he was safe from being dragged back, and so soon as the girl and him were pulled ashore he dropped her like a sack of potatoes and turned his attention to the boat. She came in their reach, bottom up, two minutes later, and Ned heard an older man or two open their minds upon him and his folly; but, much to their amazement, he didn't offer the smallest objection to their language and agreed with every word of it.

"You can't make me out a bigger size fool than I know myself to be," he said.

THEN they righted the boat and rigged tackle on to the nearest beach windlass, for he'd run right into the cove, and so fetched her high and dry, but with a good few ribs broke. They gathered in a nice lot of fine dabs off the beach also, and thought maybe that Bartlett would like to take a string up to the farm a bit later; but he didn't show no will to do that; and he didn't make no remark whatever, good or bad, on the subject of his sweetheart.

As for Sally Otter, she'd gone so fast as her wet clothes would let her the moment her feet stood on dry land; and then the rain came down and, though 'twas but four after noon, a proper cloud of darkness settled on the sea and shore and a rare fierce blow for the time of year continued till the next morn.

Well, the silly pair of 'em was saved to go on with their lives, and there's no doubt a powerful lot passed through the minds of Ned Bartlett and Sally Otter during the next few days. And if the girl hadn't been very clever before she done a clever thing now and let a tidy long week pass afore she looked on the fisherman again. She begged Mrs. Warner to say she was engaged if Ned called, because she wanted to do some pretty deep thinking before they met; but she need not have fretted on that score, because he didn't call nor yet make a sign to her of any sort.

She could see him, however, every day on the beach, busy about fixing up his wounded boat, and there was a lot of work on the foreshore for a bit because that sudden and unusual storm had carried away a good few of the lobster pots from their moorings, and there had been a bit of a landslide over to Castle Cliffs also, and the field path carried away for ten yards along of the hurricanes of rain.

So Sally had her growing fears for company, and she told the Warners how she had seen death, and how, but for the blessing of God and the skill of Ned Bartlett, she'd have been a dead woman on Easter Monday. They didn't know nothing about it till she told 'em and was very thankful that all had turned out so well; but she gave 'em the whole truth, for she weren't the sort to lie, and she confessed that 'twas only her headstrong willfulness had took 'em on the water at all that day.

"And I'm paid for that matter," said Sally, "because the man struck me a blow and flung me down among the fish after I said he was a coward. And I dare say 'tis a good thing we be parted. And very like it is forever, for I don't deserve him no more. But finer dabs I never catched, and if I hadn't been half drowned and out of my wits, I'd have had the sense to bring some of the creatures back."

They were very fond of her, however, and though sorry for the fish, felt thankful the girl had been saved alive and the man also.

"And don't you think he'll harbor no malice," said Mrs. Warner. "He knew, I expect, that it was like to be a nasty job coming ashore, and he's an impatient man; but love's love, and when he's mended his boat and got to work again he'll come round."

"'Tis a question if I want him to," explained Sally Otter to her mistress. "In a pinch like that you see the bitter truth about people, and they see the bitter truth about you also, and maybe 'twas a plot of Providence to part us afore 'twas too late."

SHE said that to her mistress, but she didn't feel that by no means, for she soon found that without Ned the days dragged a good bit and the future looked cruel lonely. And folk told her that mending up his boat had cost him the best part of ten pounds. So after a while, deciding that he meant the first move to lie with her, she questioned her pride as to whether that would suit her or not. She argued it out and convinced herself that she was in the wrong and did ought to make the first move; and then she felt a cold chill creep over her for a day or two, because she was clever and farseeing and asked herself whether Ned was a sort of man to leave anybody to take the first move where he was concerned. "Very like he feels I've put him to shame and don't want me no more, and who shall blame him?" she said to herself; but by that time she was properly hungry for him, and she decided that be it as it would, she'd meet him once again and sing small and say she was sorry for using the word "coward" to him and leave the rest for him to decide. Her pride kicked, but her love conquered.

And meantime Ned had been turning over their great deliverance, for of course he knew a million times better than her what a stroke of friendly Providence it was for 'em to be alive at all. He considered his feelings for Sally very deliberate, and he found that he was mistrusting her good and hard, if not actually disliking the thought of her, for five whole days. And then, weighing it up, he saw how nothing but ignorance had made her play the fool, and being a tolerable fair man, he asked himself whether he weren't largely to blame for giving in to her.

"If I'd had the sense of a smelt I'd never have let her go on the sea at all that day," thought Ned. "Then we should have had a proper rumpus on land no doubt, and very likely parted for a bit, but when she saw the storm blow up her wits would have proved to her that I was right and she was wrong; and then, if she was worth a damn, she'd have come back to me and granted I was right and said she was sorry, and I'd have forgiven and no harm done."

Of course he was loving her very hard again when he came to that conclusion, and so it happened that they moved towards each other in the same hour, and just as Sally was going out to meet him one evening at the time she knew he might be coming up from the strand, he turned into Walnut Tree farm fields and they met. They was rather a shame-faced pair and, such is the cruel willfulness of youth, even then neither said just the word in season. For when Sally found he was coming to her she hardened a bit, woman-like, and when he larned she'd set out to seek him, he felt sorry he'd took a step about it.

That was their pitiful feelings at the moment, and, if you'll believe me, but for a curious accident they might have parted for good and all five minutes after they'd come together! He spoke first and hoped as she hadn't took no ill from her adventure, and she said she had not.

"But I hear you lost money on your boat," she said, "and I was the cause of it, Ned, and so I'll do this: I'll give you ten pounds of my savings and then we'll be quits for me calling you a coward, so now then."

SHE meant well, but it didn't please him.

"As to that, Sally," he answered her, "I don't want your money, believe me. I earn my own, I assure you. And I've turned over what you said, and seeing it was only your ignorance of the sea made you such a fool, I'll let it go this time. You know whether I'm a coward or not, and if you still go in doubt, the fishermen can tell you. But I'll go so far as to grant I was a fool—a very great fool—bigger than even what you were, to give heed to you and take you on the water at all. And next time perhaps you'll grant I know the sea and give way as you did ought."

"If you talk like that, Ned, there won't be no next time," she answered very quick with the red rising in her cheeks. "I was coming to you——"

"Why?" he said. "There was only one decent thing you could come to me for, and that was to say you was sorry and ashamed for that word. And, instead, when I come to you, forgiving all, you offer me money to pay for your silly work."

"Words are cheap," she answered. "I thought you might have been knowing me, that I'd be sorry. You saved my life and I thought to show more than sorrow, and I was a fool again—fool enough to think that if I offered to make good on the boat you'd see my sorrow meant something and my gratitude also. And whether 'tis bravery or cowardice to strike a man, perhaps the fishermen can tell us that, too. Let alone not saying you're ashamed and sorry for that, you are. However, if you want me to go in the dirt to you I will, since you want me the sea for me. I'm sorry for calling you a coward, and I'm sorry to God I ever set eyes on you. And now you can go!"

THEY glared at each other like a pair of cat-a-mountains for two seconds and then he turned and left her. They stood in a lane to the back of the farm at the moment, and he made for a gate which would offer a short cut up the vale. He was no more as a man well could be by now and climbed over into a meadow and struck off; but then her senses came back to the furious girl and she marked what he had done and called him back.

"The bull's in that field, Ned Bartlett," she said. "Stop and get out afore he sees you."

He was glad of an excuse to face back at her then.

"Bulls! Who's afraid of bulls but you farm people?" he said. "You think every bull was so dangerous as a tiger. The only 'devil' about your old brute is his name. Danger is on the sea, not the land," he said. "And you shan't have no more chance to call me a coward, anyway."

"For God's love—not mine!" she cried. "'Tis what I know, not what you think. Come back, Ned. I'm not saying it for fun. He's deadly dangerous. Please, Ned, do believe me. O, Ned!"

But he was stubborn in his turn now and scorned her and marched off across the field, a lot too angry to care two pins. He despised landlubbers a good bit, and he knew at a pinch he had a pair of legs that could take him as fast as ever he'd wanted to go yet.

Sally cried out to him once more. "Don't be a fool; don't be what I say, Ned. I've given you best about the sea; give me best about the bull, for God's sake."

But he was fifty yards into the field now and another hundred to go afore he got across. He'd seen the bull, of course, for you couldn't miss the great white bulk of him; but "Devil" was lying down, chewing the cud and taking the evening air pretty quiet, and for the minute Sally hoped he wouldn't be at the trouble to rise. Then suddenly he marked the fisherman and was up on his feet in a twinkling.

The girl had got in the field herself now, for the bull knew her, and she screamed out to Bartlett.

"He's coming for you, Ned!"

Then she called the bull. "Bully! Bully! Bully! Come here, boy. Come to Sally!"

But "Devil" had got his back to her now and gave no heed. He snorted very sudden and shrill and made for Ned, traveling a lot faster than he looked to be going. So the silly man suddenly found a ton of angry bull behind him and the nearmost hedge a good seventy yards in front. He took to his heels then and his anger was gone, and he knew that if he saved his skin it was a proper fool's skin he would save.

SO there was Sally running for dear life and screaming so loud as she could to distract "Devil," and the bull well in his stride now and running by sight as they do, and Ned getting over the ground very clever indeed, but not clever enough, because a dewy meadow ain't the best place to show your speed at any time, nor a pair of sea boots the handiest things to run in.

He'd got a long start, but of course even an elderly bull can run faster than the fleetest man, and "Devil" was gaining very quick. But Ned knew nothing about that yet, though even at that moment he was thinking what a proper fool he must look in Sally's eyes, and how true her word was, that she had known and he had despised her knowledge. And now the boot was on the other leg. He heard her screaming still, and then he suddenly heard the bull pounding behind him, and he did one witty thing, for he got out of his jacket and flung it down, hoping it might delay the beast a second or two.

Sally saw by now 'twas no use shouting, and she also saw how both man and bull was closing up on the hedge, and it looked as if they'd go there together. It was a fair tall earth bank five feet high and crowned with thin hasel, and the girl felt only too certain sure that, long before Ned could scale it, even if he got there first, "Devil" would be on him and maggle him to rags and bones against it. And then her heart stopped and she knew it was a doomed man, unless lightning out of heaven struck the bull. 'Twas all over, of course, in moments, though the moments dragged into an eternity for her; and then she saw that "Devil" was on to Ned and going to catch him a yard or two inside the hedge.

Which is what the bull did do by the will of God, for if he'd been a fraction sooner or a thought later Bartlett must have died. If he'd been run into at the hedge, he'd have been smashed against it, and if he'd been catched a yard sooner he'd never have got there and been gored in the open; but what did happen was that bully ran into him ten feet from the hedge and put down his head and tossed him with all the strength of his huge carcass behind the drive.

And it tossed him the way he was going. So, before the fisherman knew his luck, he was on top of the hedge as if he'd been shot there out of a gun. He missed getting brained also, and went through the hasels and smashed head over tail t'other side; and when Sally, who'd hid her face a moment, looked again, there was "Devil" [illegible]

The TRIBUNE Cook Book

A Salad May Be a Delightful and Refreshing Thing, or It May Be an Unsavory Mess, According to the Hand That Mixes It.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

CONFUSION worse confounded exists among us about what is a salad. There seems to be a great struggle on the part of many a woman over some salad structure, for that is what salads have come to be—structures—though they should not generally be that. So many messes have been compounded and called salads that a great dissatisfaction has arisen among housewives unless something new and "unique" can be found for party or occasion.

The last hotel salad I had—with a two dollar dinner—was a compound of ten kinds of things, including two kinds of pickles (which really have no place in a salad, although they are correct enough as a hors d'oeuvre), a pile of grated egg, and another of beet, which are also best in a hors d'oeuvre, and truly incorrect at any rate in any combination with tomato, of which there was one slice.

What I instantly thought of the structure was that it consisted of four hors d'oeuvres mounted on a slice of a head of lettuce. The mixture of celery, etc., between the lettuce and the slice of tomato had mayonnaise to blend, and there was a pitcher of dressing on the French order, and one largely of chili sauce. Beet and tomato, think!

Another structure I noted, on a table near, was yet more formal, with asparagus tips arranged with great precision, and what looked like heavy chili sauce over it. Mine and that were served on the same sized plate. It was large enough for that, but not for mine—seven inches. With that stringy lettuce and such a quantity of things it was next to impossible to eat that salad without spotting the tablecloth and perhaps one's dress. I know a young woman who says she is always spotting her dress from salads and so it costs her two or three dollars to eat one anywhere, and of course a gown that has been cleaned is not the same thing as a new one. This is my pet annoyance, the too small salad plate, or call it too much salad for the plate used.

Perils in Salad Eating.

It may seem to some people entertaining that we should worry over spotting the cloth and our gowns, but a year or two ago I heard that some women were providing little square doilies for their guests which were to be pinned on to the dress to protect it while eating perilous salads, etc. I do not believe the custom became at all general, though one of promise.

The following entertaining paragraph from a book on eating shows another peril from the oily dressing: "Salad should never be cut, so that if one sees a pretty diner convey a leaf of salad to her pomegranate mouth with her dainty bejeweled fingers, be sure this is much preferable to using hard steel on the delicate green leaf and more picturesque than trying to stuff it into her mouth whole with her fork at the risk of greasing her nose!"

The Refresher.

Says the author just quoted: "The turning of the salad is an essentially dainty work, for everything depends on the mixing. . . . The French salad is a refresher, especially when it consists of those delicate lettuces, or of romaine, frisé, mâche, or other spring vegetable bathed in oil and kissed by vinegar, pepper and salt."

To "turn" a salad you must have a bowl, and at even humble French restaurants individual salads are served in bowls with salad spoon and fork, and can be turned, but imagine trying to turn that one of pickles, grated egg and beets and all! Yet cold boiled beet in a salad bowl of mâche is good French. We used to have mâche under the name of corn salad, and it is also called "doucette" and a few other things.

And while we are talking of the salad as a refresher—after meats—we may also continue our complaints. It is quite common everywhere, seemingly, to serve a salad along with a fruit cocktail, and people eat the one and then the other in succession. It is unreasonable and enough to destroy the appetite.

Fruit Salad and Cocktail.

The only difference between these two in some cases is that the first is served with a cream dressing and the second in a sirup. But a salad that is about half fruit and half lettuce, or an equivalent, is more reasonable than one like the cocktail mixture, and more refreshing. The cut up fruit of a fruit cocktail ought to be in a vivid condition and seldom is, and if it or a fruit salad is to be in this condition it must be prepared immediately before it is served.

Dried or candied fruits blended with fresh are not really agreeable nor just in the cocktail, because they reduce its vividness, and they are yet more unsuitable in the salad. Slices of green or red candied cherries greatly reduce the liveness of a fresh fruit mixture. A candied cherry, indeed, because of such uses, has frequently become a perfect red rag to me. It seems to me like an ancient spirituous cocktail orphan. I never did drink such cocktails, but somehow I hated the idea of the cherry limit. Though a fresh cherry is as vivid in flavor as in looks, the candied sort seem more flavorless than dried apples. At any rate, they are used, I think, to excess and so have become too commonplace for words.

The Delicate Lettuce.

Elizabeth Robbins Penell says: "Delicate lettuce is one of the hard things to find in American markets." And we can add that when found it is not treated delicately. But romaine is hardly found at all, though a few leaves of it with no other thing but salt, or even without that, are a salad in themselves. And a leaf or two of romaine with elegant bits of tomato or orange is a fine salad. But we might mention here that the few leaves or pieces may not be salad enough to satisfy those who want a whole head of lettuce or none at one time.

The green salad is absolutely the correct dinner salad the world around, and when rightly managed has a delightful appeal. It is best if mixed, or turned, or tossed, or "fatigued," with its dressing in the bowl, and best, too, because no salad should stand and wait for the eater. So dressed every tiny bit of the salad is seasoned as it cannot be when a dressing is merely dipped over it, particularly if on a plate that is too small to turn it in the "madman"—which does not mean rough—style that is recommended for its complete seasoning. To be truly refreshing its ingredients should be cool and dry before the seasonings are added.

A Salad Bowl Ceremony.

Delightful things have been written of the salad bowl ceremony, but briefly it is this: Have a capacious bowl, thoroughly washed and dried salad greens, and ready measured seasonings. The bowl should be large or the table will be spattered with oil. [1] Rub the bowl with a cut end of clove of garlic; [2] breaking them with the fingers, put the salad greens into the bowl; [3] sprinkle the green, including sliced scallions, with oil; [4] with the salad fork and spoon turn the salad until each leaf is painted with oil; [5] dissolve paprika and salt in the salad spoon with vinegar, sprinkle over the salad, and toss again thoroughly. One-half teaspoon of salt, two tablespoons of the best oil, one-half teaspoon of paprika or less with three-fourths tablespoon of vinegar or less is enough dressing for four good sized plates of salad greens. Another tablespoon of oil may be used.

Note that this would not make half enough dressing or half as much as is used when it is made and dipped over the greens, therefore there is economy here as well as superiority.

Naturally Dressed Salad.

The most ancient accounts we have of salad making give us a picture of a peasant plucking all sorts of greens and dressing them with salt and oil. We have long used variations of the following method, utilizing what we have on hand rather than these set quantities: Two tomatoes, an equal amount of head lettuce—but blanched escarole is superior so—three-fourths of a tablespoon of best salad oil. Rub the bowl with the cut end of a clove of garlic, put in the washed and dried salad greens, and cut up the peeled tomato over them, sprinkle with the oil, and turn thoroughly. This is enough for two people, who will not miss the vinegar. To peel the tomatoes after washing them in cold water and wiping them dry, rub them all over with the back of the knife, when the loosened skin will readily come off. Thin slices of scallion give delightful piquancy to this salad.

Tomato Salad Dressings.

Plain tomato mixed with mayonnaise may so closely resemble a Thousand Island dressing of many ingredients as to be hardly distinguishable from it, and it is more wholesome than some of these. In making tomato dressings it is best to reject the juice and seeds of the tomato and use only the dry part, chopped fine. This, mingled with a French dressing and a little onion juice, is exceedingly acceptable on lettuce, and it may be added to the lettuce in a bowl and turned.

Mayonnaise was originally called a cold sauce, and the fish or meat or cooked vegetables it was used over were called mayonnaises. The dry chopped tomato of the previous recipe, if mixed with just enough mayonnaise to veil it, is a good imitation of shrimp and may be used as an appetizer, and is much pleasanter than shrimp when the latter is rocky.

The Bitter Salad.

A bitter salad in springtime, such as one of curly endive may be, with the right dressing, or one of dandelion or chicory, is as wholesome as the best tonic ever devised, and when we use but the blanched part of a head of curly or German endive for the salad we should cook the green part, if it is in good condition, as, with our present market ways, it so seldom is. And you may get a bitterer salad with the cooked green part than with the raw and white part. The same is true of the escarole of Italian markets, and, inexplicably, not generally in others, probably for no other reason than people have not learned to use it. In a salad bowl with onion it makes a fine, slightly bitter salad.

great freedom and asked me what the devil I meant by bringing a man of his standing to such a place. At that I called Bell and told him to bring some spring water, commending this to the duke as likely to serve his distemper rather better than anything else, and though he looked very black and muttered a rudeness which I think he had not the courage to say aloud, I am glad to remember that he presently took my advice.

Then he looked out of the window and saw the car.

"That's more like it," he said. "When do we start?"

"As soon as you're ready," said I, "we'll drive you wherever you please."

"I must get back to Vigil," said he. "We must be miles over the border, but once we're in Riechtenburg, it'll take us no more than an hour."

"That's right," said Hanbury, tracing the way on the map. "West and by north from here and a three hours' run. Vigil's the chief town, of course."

"Complete with palace," said the duke. "The prince is there now. By rights he should be in the country, but he's been too ill to be moved. I'll go there straight," he continued, "and put him wise. This fellow Grieg must be—by the way, where is Grieg?"

"He hasn't appeared," said I.

"So much the better," said the duke. "Are you ready to go?"

"The point is this," said Hanbury. "We're sick of the sight of the major, but we're not prepared to hang him round the innkeeper's neck."

"Why not?" said the duke.

"It's not fair to the innkeeper," said George. "He's a very decent fellow, and Grieg'll raise all hell when he finds we're gone."

"Damn it," cried the other, "what does that matter to me? If——"

Here Bell entered the room, salver in hand.

"The major has gone, sir," he reported. "By way of the window, I think. His bed was untouched, and I found this note on the floor."

A twisted sheet of paper was superscribed Duke Paul.

The message within was printed rudely enough.

There is now no harm in your knowing that your greatuncle, Prince Nicholas VII., died yesterday evening at a quarter to six. At nine o'clock this morning Prince Johann will be proclaimed.

The duke turned very pale and a hand went up to his mouth.

George and I glanced at each other.

As we did so, the clock of the village church beat out the hour. Nine o'clock.

ing under the hedge all alone and Ned no more to be seen. Then she knew what must have overtook him and rushed for the hedge herself and scrambled through the nearest place and counted to find the fisherman dead and done for t'other side.

HE was lying panting on his back when she came to him, and he stared at her in a dazed, bewildered fashion, and she fetched out her handkerchief to a cut he'd got bleeding down the side of his face. Not a word did either of 'em say for a bit, and then he got his wind back and sat up and began feeling himself over to see if anything was broke. But there wasn't, and he'd only had the weight of the bull's head and missed the point of his horn.

Then he spoke three words. "Forgive me, Sally," he said.

Her lips was on his lips after that and they just sat pretty quiet for five minutes and then she helped him to his feet. They'd thought a bit, both of them, in that silence and not missed the meaning of the adventure, neither, being fairly smart in their understanding, though such idiots in their love.

"Least said, soonest mended, Ned," Sally began when they was moving again. "I shan't tell nobody about this job. 'Tis enough to thank God for all His mercies and keep our mouths shut."

"Thank God sure enough," he said, "but keep our mouths shut, no. Everybody in Dennycombe knows you was a fool on the sea, Sally; and us'll play fair and everybody in Dennycombe shall know I was just as big a fool on shore. Us both deserved a lot worse than we've gotten. And come to think of it, I was a fool to sea and shore both.

When he said that, Sally Otter much feared for a bit that, though his fine body had been spared, his mind must have been shook from its roots forever.

"Not a chance," she said. "I shan't say nought, and 'tis quite enough for the people to know one of us was a fool. And what matters so long as we've come together again?"

"I shall tell 'em," he answered. "And nought matters no more, as you say, since we're alive and none the worse. And never no more rows for us."

"And now I'll get your coat," she told him, and he stared in amazement to see her go over and fetch it and then walk up to bully, who was cooled down and grasing again so mild as milk. She slapped his great cheek and told him he was a wicked lad, and then she kissed him and whispered in the creature's ear that he'd done his Maker's will very clever.

Then she went back to Ned, and her feelings got the better of her and she cried a bit, and he comforted her. And, though she never let on about it, Ned did so and confessed he could be so big a fool in his judgments ashore as any other mariner, and folk liked him the better for owning up.

They made a very good match, and though Ned ain't got no men under him yet, he's promising to be a snug chap some day. Being built to spar, they spar still and have their breeses and don't always see with the same eyes—except over two little red haired boys they've got, which be going to set the sieve afire and make history—so Ned and Sally say to any who'll bide and listen.

THE GLENLITTEN MURDER By E. Phillips Oppenheim

INSTALLMENT XII.

Confessions.

FELICE and Andrew, arm in arm, made their way to the latter's den—a small, comfortable apartment at the back of the house. Félice established herself by her husband's side on a huge divan and watched him light his pipe.

"I wonder whether you can imagine, dear, dear Andrew," she confided, "how happy I feel. It is as though a great weight had been rolled away from my heart. I have felt so wretched, so ashamed, every time I thought of those terrible people, and now to know that they do not exist, that they mean nothing to me—Andrew, that is so wonderful!"

"I should jolly well think so!" he exclaimed, his tone full of sympathy. "Of course, one had to do the best one could for them so long as one believed their rotten story, but they were a loathsome crew."

She shivered reminiscently.

"They are passing away from my memory like an evil dream," she sighed.

"Shouldn't waste another thought upon them," Andrew enjoined. "You have something much more wonderful to think about, little sweetheart—your father. What a fine fellow!"

There were tears of happiness in her eyes.

"Isn't he wonderful? And, dearest, I knew—I knew the moment he looked at me!"

"I am almost as proud of him as I am of his daughter," Andrew declared, holding her a little more tightly towards him. "We will have to do our best to give him a good time. Fancy ten years in prison under any conditions, for a man who was almost the ruler of his country!"

"He will be happy with us," Félice murmured.

THERE was a brief period of eloquent silence. Then Félice raised her head from her husband's shoulder. Once more the shadow of fear had crept into her eyes.

"The time has come now, Andrew," she whispered, "when I must make a confession to you. It has hurt me very much to keep silent, but, indeed, I could not see what else there was for me to do. Listen to me, dear," she went on, clutching at his arm. "Not at the inquest, not to you, never to any one, have I been quite honest about that awful night."

"I have always known that, my dear," he assured her, with a calm which bordered almost upon indifference.

"I am not very good at deceiving," she went on. "I have never tried it before and it hurt. Remember, I had promised to keep their secret, and I believed Charles to be my brother. That night when he came to Glenlitten I nearly fainted. I made myself brave, though. I listened. He was in great need, he said. There was something which must be done. He must see me alone. Very well. I retired. He came to me in my boudoir. We were talking. He had begun to explain about a great money difficulty that he was in. He asked if I could not find money, or some bonds or jewelry—anything. While we talked some one stopped in the corridor outside. I believe now that it was Mr. Haslam, and that he had seen Charles come upstairs. I was terrified. I lost my head, for I was in my dressing gown, and who was to know that Charles was my brother? I motioned quite wildly to him to leave me. He passed into the bathroom. From there I thought that he would go through my room and out on to the corridor. I know now that he did not."

"Pretty desperate fellow, Charles," Andrew remarked encouragingly.

"Afterwards I undressed and went to bed, wondering what I could do to help him. Then, while I was half asleep, a terrifying thing happened. Some one called out my name. I sprang up. The door of my bathroom was thrown open and De Besset stood there. Something gripped my throat and there was a singing in my ears. I could not speak. I could not hear what De Besset called out to me. But I could see—horrible things. I saw some one—the burglar—with a mask upon his face, crawling through the window, and I also saw—something else!"

There was a break in her voice. Her hands had become as cold as ice. He laid his cheek against hers.

"Don't hurry, darling," he whispered. "Rest for a little time. You can tell me later."

SHE seemed scarcely to hear him. Her fingers gripped his. Her eyes, round and glazed with fear, were fixed on the wall.

"It was the figure of a man—a blurred shape, leaning against the other side of the dressing table," she went on. "He was leaning over the place where I had left my jewels. Andrew, I thank God that I could not see his face, for all the time that hideous fear has been with me—it may have been Charles. He may never have left my bedroom. He may have hidden in the cupboard—the cupboard Sir Richard asked questions about. Whoever it was, he must have seen De Besset, and he may have fired that shot. The flash seemed to come from there. I saw it—a little pencil of red flame. Then I fainted."

Andrew smoked his pipe thoughtfully for a moment.

"I always felt there was something like that, dear," he acknowledged. "You mustn't take it too seriously, though. Remember that the tragical side of the situation has gone, now that we know the truth about the young man. Of course, it won't be pleasant for you to have to go into the box and tell the whole story, especially now that Charles turns out to be no relation at all, but every one will understand, and what does that matter against a man's life. You just tell the truth, dear, and Mr. Charles must take his chance. I fancy he's a wrong 'un, anyway. I know I had jolly hard work to keep myself from pounding him when I saw him with his arm around your waist after that dancing lesson. I knew there must be some sort of explanation, of course, but it made me see red for the moment."

"You were simply wonderful," she whispered. "I was so proud that you trusted me."

There was a moment's silence. Félice sprang up, lit a cigaret, and returned to her place. She curled herself up with a little sigh of content. Already her mercurial temperament was reasserting itself. Andrew knew everything. Once more she was happy.

"I think the best thing we can do is to see Dick," Andrew decided. "He'd better have the whole story. I don't think you need worry, dear. You see, you can't swear to anything. You can't say for certain that there was any one else in the room. On the other hand, your evidence will immensely weaken the case against Drayton. He'll get off, without doubt, and unless some one saw Charles leave your room after the shot was fired, I don't see that there'll ever be any evidence against him either."

There was a knock at the door. A servant entered with a formal looking missive reposing upon a tray.

"This has come from Scotland Yard, my lord," he announced. "Parkins thought you had better have it, as it was marked 'important.'" Andrew tore open the envelope. Félice read over his shoulder:

"The chief commissioner of police begs to inform Lord Glenlitten that his necklace has been returned and the reward of ten thousand pounds is claimed. The chief commissioner will be glad if Lord Glenlitten will arrange to identify the necklace some time tomorrow. The person claiming the reward is a private detective—Mr. Felix Main."

"Well, I'm damned!" was Andrew's only comment.

SIR RICHARD COTTON and Haslam had met by accident walking down Pall Mall early that evening. They were standing upon the pavement engaged in a somewhat disjointed conversation, when they became aware of a taxicab stopping with dangerous suddenness against the curbstone by their side. A tall young man alighted and advanced eagerly towards them.

"Our Russian acquaintance!" Sir Richard remarked dryly. "He appears to have something to say to us."

Haslam studied the newcomer through his deepset eyes without change of countenance.

"In the interests of your client, Max Drayton, I should listen to whatever the young man chooses to tell you," he advised.

Charles approached, a little breathless, otherwise apparently normal, except that his collar was somewhat crushed and one of his sleeve links seemed to be missing.

"Sir Richard," he confided, "I have something important to say to you. Is there anywhere we can be alone for a moment? Believe me, you will not regret it."

The lawyer hesitated. Haslam whispered in his ear.

"Never mind whether it's professional or not; do as he asks if you wish to save Max Drayton from the scaffold," he insisted.

"We will step into the waiting room of my club," Sir Richard suggested. "It is next door here. I will certainly hear what you have to say."

"There is great need for haste," Charles continued feverishly.

"Do you mind Mr. Haslam coming along?" Sir Richard asked. "If what you have to say has anything to do with a certain night, his presence might be an advantage."

The young man signified assent with a hasty gesture.

"You must give me a drink," he begged as soon as they had reached the waiting room. "It will be worth your while."

Sir Richard ordered a brandy and soda, half of which the recipient drank before he began his statement.

"On the night you speak of, at Glenlitten hall, that little fool of a woman, who had been gulled into believing that I, the son of her father's old servant, was her brother, gave me a few minutes' interview in her sitting room. We were interrupted by footsteps outside—yours, I believe, Mr. Haslam. She waved me away, imagining I would leave by the bathroom and through her bedroom. I did nothing of the sort. I concealed myself in a portion of her wardrobe. I had come to Glenlitten to steal the jewels, and I meant to have them."

He paused for another drink and went on, the choked words stumbling hurriedly from his lips.

"What happened was ridiculous, as real fact, although one might swallow it in a film picture. I—the devil's own luck—passed through the bedroom too quickly to notice the jewels lying upon the dressing table, and it was not until after I was hidden in the wardrobe that I realized, peering through a crack above the hinges, that I might have walked straight away with the necklace. My supposed sister was in bed then, though I had to wait until she was asleep. When at last I thought the moment had come I stole out, just as Drayton was peering in through the window. While I was wondering what to do, De Besset burst into the room. I had gone too far for retreat and the necklace was within a few inches of me. I shot De Besset with a revolver which will be found on or near me very shortly, and I should have shot the burglar, too, if he hadn't scrambled down his ladder, half dead with fright. I escaped downstairs, owing to the burglar's scheme of darkness, with the necklace in my trousers pocket, and was dancing before any alarm was given. This is to say, in brief, that it was I who shot De Besset, and, so far as I know, the burglar was not in possession of any weapon at all."

"The revolver belonging to his brother-in-law that was found?" Sir Richard began.

THE young Russian held out his hand.

"The second part of my story explains that," he announced. "How to dispose of the necklace—it bothered me! I came up against a man who called himself a private detective—Felix Main. He agreed to help me dispose of the jewels and divide the spoils. He also undertook to arrange things so that I was never suspected of the murder, and it was he who procured through a man whom he had once helped the revolver belonging to Drayton's brother-in-law. We threw it into the wood near the spot where Drayton had left his car, knowing that some day or other it would be found."

"Stop a moment!" Sir Richard interrupted, taking some paper from a rack. "Hadn't I better take this down?"

"Wait till I have finished," Charles insisted. "You shall take it down presently. I was going to write it myself at a café. It is better for you to do it. I went to Felix Main today for money. I found he had doublecrossed me. He had decided the game was too dangerous. He had taken the necklace to Scotland Yard and claimed the reward. He mocked at me when I demanded my share. He intended to have the whole. He reminded me that a word from him and I should be charged with the murder. It was blackmail—flagrant and brutal. I took him up in my arms—I am strong sometimes—he had a gun, but he was too frightened to use it properly. I shook the life out of him, and there he lies in his office."

"My God!" Sir Richard cried. "Do you mean that you killed him?"

"Twenty minutes ago," the young man assented with a strange flash in his eyes, "and if ever a living being deserved it he did. Now then, on to paper with it, Sir Richard. I am trusting you, mind, because there is no chance of my escape with these two things up against me, but when I've signed I walk out of this room. I will not have a policeman's hand upon my shoulder. I choose my own punishment."

The lawyer sat down at the table and began to write. Charles rang the bell and coolly ordered another brandy and soda, which he consumed in hasty gulps. Presently Sir Richard, his task completed, leaned back in his chair and in his dull, legal voice read what he had written. The young man nodded assent, snatched up a pen and signed his name. Sir Richard and Haslam signed as witnesses and the former placed the paper in his pocket.

"Now what are you going to do?" he asked Charles.

The latter stood up and looked out into the street.

"If I can get so far," he confided, "I am going to a little café near here where I shall drink. When the time comes I shall know what to do. You need not interfere," he warned them. "No one else shall suffer, only I am going my own way."

The two men exchanged glances.

"In the light of what you have confessed, Charles Protinoff," the lawyer began——

"Don't be a fool," the young man interrupted. "I have half a dozen cartridges in my automatic now and I am strong enough to crush you both to death if I felt like it. Die I must, I know, but I shall die my own way."

They were both men of presence of mind, of courage and enterprise, and yet he left them standing there and departed, slamming the door behind him. On the steps of the club, however, he stopped short. His taxicab was still waiting at the curb, but a very official looking and alert man in plain clothes was standing by its side. Two policemen were crossing the street; another who had been talking to the commissionaire left him and approached. Charles' hand flashed from his pocket, there were two sharp reports, and he collapsed upon the pavement. As he fell he threw the pistol to Sir Richard, who had rushed out.

"I killed De Besset with that," he confessed falteringly. "I regret."

ONCE more the same decrepit taxicab rumbled along the stately avenue of Glenlitten hall. Notwithstanding previous warnings, the driver again rolled up before the great main entrance and in due course a woman descended—a woman who looked as though she had slept in her clothes in a bedchamber peopled with horrible dreams. Lily Drayton—"Lil" to her intimates—had forgotten all about cosmetics. Nothing remained of her showy looks but her eyes, still, notwithstanding their terrified light, large and beautiful.

"I must see Lady Glenlitten," she begged of Parkins, who had opened the door.

He looked at her sympathetically, but there was a certain mild reproach in his tone.

"Her ladyship only motored down from London last night and it is barely 10 o'clock, madam."

"Her ladyship saw me last time I came," the woman reminded him. "She promised she would see me at any time. I've been up nearly all night and I've driven over from Winchester this morning. You must tell her ladyship, please."

Parkins ushered her into a sitting room. He was a kindly person and he felt somehow in touch with the fifth drama of life when he saw, for the second time, the pitiable condition of this woman whose husband, as the whole household knew full well, was lying in Winchester jail under the shadow of a terrible death.

"You would like some coffee?" he asked.

"Nothing at all, thank you," she said. "Just her ladyship, please—as soon as she can see me. I must speak to her. I can think of nothing else."

"Her ladyship is down, I believe," Parkins confided. "I will let her know that you are here."

He departed, and the woman walked restlessly up and down the room. The agony of that last quarter of an hour's interview with her panic stricken husband was still tearing at her heart strings. Presently Félice came in.

"Mrs. Drayton!" she exclaimed. "I am so glad that you are here. Please sit down."

THE woman was almost beside herself. She stood in the middle of the room, shaking from head to foot—dumb horror burning in her eyes.

"My lady," she cried, "I cannot sit down, I cannot sleep, I cannot eat. I cannot drink. This morning I was allowed to see Max. They told him yesterday that the day of the assizes is fixed. He will be tried for murder the sixth of next month. Sir Richard has no more news for him. They all think at the jail—I can tell by their manner and so can he—that he's for it. My lady, he's crazy. He never did it. You know he didn't do it, but you haven't said a word—nothing has happened, and the days go on."

"Please stop!" Félice begged. "Stop and I will tell you something."

"But I can't stop until I ask you this," the woman continued, her voice rising almost to an hysterical shriek. "This I must know—this Max must know—every one must know. You do know that it wasn't Max. It may have been some one dear to you, it may have been some one who should not have been in your room, you may have to suffer for telling the truth, but you wouldn't let an innocent man hang? O, my lady, there's something in your face which tells me you wouldn't do that. Give me a message for Max. He knows that only you can save him, and he'll die if I don't give him some hope."

Félice leaned over and held the woman by the shoulders.

"Now please listen," she insisted. "Your husband will be proved innocent. You hear that? Innocent! Don't work yourself up like this. Sit down."

The woman collapsed into a chair. She sat with her eyes fastened upon Félice, moistening her hard, withered lips with her tongue.

"A very terrible thing has happened," Félice confided, "and yet perhaps it is for the best. It was the young Russian who claimed to be my brother who stole the necklace and killed the Comte de Besset. He has confessed and shot himself. Now listen, Mrs. Drayton. Bear up, if you please, and listen. There is no more question of your husband being concerned in the murder. That is finished. You can go and tell him so. Charles Protinoff, or De Suess, as he called himself then—a guest who had dined in the house—killed the Comte de Besset because he interfered when he was trying to steal my necklace. He has confessed. Sir Richard Cotton has his signed confession. You are listening carefully? Your husband will never be charged."

THE woman seemed scarcely to have fainted, but to have passed into a state of numb inertia; to be absolutely incapable of speech or movement. Félice rang the bell and gave hurried orders. Parkins brought coffee, her maid some sal volatile. In time a thin streak of color came back to the woman's face. Her breathing grew more regular, her eyes less glazed. Her fingers ceased their convulsive twitching.

"I shall be all right in a moment," she faltered. "I'm coming back. I shan't faint. Say that over again, my lady—slowly."

"Your husband will never be charged with the murder of the Comte de Besset," Félice repeated, leaning over her. "The murderer was hidden in my room and he has confessed. It will be in the papers tonight. Sir Richard Cotton, your husband's lawyer, has a signed copy of his confession."

"O, thank Gawd!" the woman groaned. "Thank Gawd! O, my lady!"

. . . .

The tears and some strong coffee revived her and she staggered to her feet.

"I must go," she cried. "Perhaps they haven't told Max. Anyway they'll let me see him. They'll have to let me see him. Perhaps I'll be the first to tell him."

"Wait!" Félice enjoined. "I shall give you a letter to the governor of the jail, and to Maj. Hartopp. Of course you must see him."

Félice sat down at the desk and wrote rapidly. Then, with the letters clasped in her hand, they helped the dazed woman into the taxicab. Félice watched it rattle its way down the avenue until it became a lumbering speck in the distance.

Andrew found her there a few minutes later.

"Your father and I object to this long desertion," he complained. "Dear old fellow, he's coming out with me after the partridges and he's fussing whether he'll take a twelve or a twenty bore. Whatever are you thinking about, sweetheart?"

She clung to him tightly.

"I was thinking," she sighed, "that there are very many different sorts of good women in the world."

Western Talkie Out in Front of Month's Finest

O. Henry Story Again Heads the Parade.

MARCH'S SIX BEST PHOTOPLAYS.

IN OLD ARIZONA.
THE WOLF OF WALL STREET.
STRONG BOY.
THE IRON MASK.
CLOSE HARMONY.
THE YOUNGER GENERATION.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD morning!

We have with us this morning a résumé of what were thought by this department to be the six best movies of the month of March. If you don't agree with our opinion, write in and give your own. You'll see 'em printed big as life in "The Voice of the Fan" column. Which will give their chance to those who think you're all wet. Endless circle!

"IN OLD ARIZONA" is the prize movie of March. Four stars to that hobby! Perhaps you didn't read the review of the film? Well, here's how it read—in spots:

"'In Old Arizona' is one grand movie! It's fourteen reels long and seems less than six . . . you're grieved because it isn't longer. . . . It's the first talker to be filmed almost entirely out of doors . . . offers you one of the most brilliant characterizations of the era by a man who was, up to this time, only one of many personable leading men. . . . Fate somehow or other dumped the rôle of the Cisco Kid into his lap. What he has done with his big opportunity will go down in screen history as one of the Great Screen Triumphs. . . . He is, from now on, the Great Warner Baxter. . . . The picture is an adaptation of a story by O. Henry and has been breath-takingly filmed amidst breath-taking surroundings . . . the most different 'western' you ever saw . . . percolates with action and is tense with suspense. Its love scenes are frank and fervid; its flashes of humor, droll; its 'atmosphere' engrossing; its ending a poignant, artistic, O. Henry fnis. . . . Direction, photography, synchronization, scenery are superb throughout. . . ."

"THE WOLF OF WALL STREET," featuring George Bancroft, we found "hot, fast, cosmopolitan melodrama, dominated by the sure, virile, magnetic George Bancroft, who as 'The Wolf' adds another powerful and convincing characterization to the goodly collection he has already contributed to the screen. . . . if you follow the movies, you know him for what he is—a player who may not be as great as Jannings, but who is in the Jannings class all right. . . . Here's a film that is crowded with interest, suspense, fine acting, irony, and humor. It has been splendidly produced, titled, and photographed."

"STRONG BOY" got three stars because it was thought "an alert, amusing number, presenting big, lovable Victor McLaglen at his best, Leatrice Joy at her sweetest, and everybody else in the cast in fine fettle . . . thoroughly enjoyable program offering. . . . Light fare, but good . . . entire piece rollickingly droll and mirth provoking . . . nice rose colored number to look at on a blue Monday.

* *

"THE IRON MASK"? "Magic romance of the past, with Douglas Fairbanks again D'Artagnan! And with him in this sequel to 'The Three Musketeers,' laughing, singing, fighting, dying—Athos, Porthos, and Aramis themselves . . . 'The Iron Mask' is a stirring picture telling a story of days and deeds that all of us love to dream about. . . . Douglas Fairbanks better than ever. He is still as nimble as the monkey that may have been his ancestor, and the years have given him a mellowness that make him, in this production, much more attractive to me than I have found him before. . . . Supporting cast a superb one. . . . Direction, photography, staging, costumes are all the heart could desire. . . . I think you will be crazy for 'The Iron Mask.'"

"CLOSE HARMONY" was lovely! Is lovely. Features Buddy Rogers and Nancy Carroll, who make a team as is a team. Said the review:

"'Close Harmony' is a great little program picture. It has youth, action, comedy, romance, thrown against a theater background and breathing the atmosphere of the footlights—fore and

MAURICE COSTELLO'S LITTLE GIRL

DOLORES COSTELLO.

DAUGHTER of a star whose light has faded, and now a star in her own right, she has a great deal to do in "Noah's Ark," which opens at Woods' theater this evening. Charming picture of young Mrs. John Barrymore, isn't it? With her in this spectacle are George O'Brien, Noah Beery, Louise Fazenda—and, saith the press agent, a mere company of ten thousand supers.

Old Theater Comes Back to Hoboken, N. J.

Crowds Flock to See Antique Melodramas.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The unrest in the current theater takes many forms. There is a definite rebellion against theater prices, aggravated by the speculators. The feeling, with reason, is that there is a combination of theater managers and voracious middlemen which automatically shuts out those earnest and enthusiastic theatergoers who would support the current drama if they were given an honest chance.

A reasonable rebellion, I say, because common sense tells us that the best seats could not always be obtained from the speculators if the managers did not make it possible for them to get hold of the seats.

Against this reasonable conclusion stands the fact that theater managers are business men and that they are as set on selling their product for the highest price the market affords as are the vendors of any other form of merchandise. Plus the equally reasonable conclusion that the well to do are able to afford a high priced theater just as they are able to afford the costs of aviation or yachting or golf or expensive motor cars or winter trips to Florida.

Plus also the fact that the history of the theater has shown that when the price of theatergoing is put within the reach of modest budgets most of those of us who are forced to operate on a modest budget lose interest in it. We are still bent on aping the rich to the top of our bent and our incomes.

Public Reaction to Fair Prices.

A second reaction, and a most interesting one to me, is the eagerness with which the playgoer of modest income has taken to the indorsement and support of the low priced, quality backed theater enterprise. This is reflected in the small town and distantly located theater center's interest in its community stock companies which present a repertory of comparatively recent plays. The Pacific coast, for example, has gradually developed a producing center of its own that is only dependent upon the theater capital of New York in a reflective sense. There also now are more successful stock companies scattered over the country, many of them making a feature of guest star engagements, than there ever have been before.

But the most interesting of all current experiments is that of the thea-

This and That Thing About the Theater

And This Means About the Actors, Also.

By Frederick Donaghey.

MISS BAINTER'S performing as the cheating, stalling, brave, baffled young wife in "Jealousy" is not only the best she has yet done in any play, but is as good as any performing of an "emotional" rôle I have recently beheld. It is good acting such as we had from Miss Margaret Anglin back in the days of "Mrs. Dane's Defense." Miss Bainter has been waiting a long time for a rôle so good as this in "Jealousy": indeed, ever since the end of "East Is West." The circumstance that the play is a stunt makes the rôle more difficult as a task; for it is her chore not only to play the character for its inherent content of drama, but also to draw to and hold on herself that sum of the spectators' interest which, in a play of more conventional make, would be taken up and held from-time-to-time by other characters.

This could easily be said of Mr. Halliday, too: the division of text between him and Miss Bainter is about fifty-fifty; but, whether or not so willed by the French author, Verneuil, or the American adaptor, Eugene Walter, the main appeal of the play is for the woman, regardless of the man's righteousness in the especial circumstances of the tale. Neither Miss Bainter nor Mr. Halliday has aught to do with the fact: it is a matter of psychology. Not so long ago, the husband would have appealed to the public as the character of sympathetic interest: indeed, it is my recollection that in "Mrs. Dane's Defense" the populace plumped not for the woman fighting to conceal a spotted past, but for the astute attorney who privately submitted her to the pitiless examination that in the end sent her to her knees in humiliated confession.

Despite the forced construction wherewith Verneuil put through his stunt of writing for but two characters (and a telephone), "Jealousy" is far from preposterous as a play reflecting and touching an aspect of life within what has been termed "the common experience of mankind." The essential story, which has been used in the Theater from its beginnings, is human, credible, and so far from unlikely that it is told at least once a day in the divorce-courts of every city in all the lands where divorce is classified among the common pleas. As I said in my next-morning report on it, "Jealousy" were a more facile and a better play with more characters, inasmuch as the use of more characters would make for an easier craftsmanship; but that does not mean that "Jealousy" would necessarily be a more successful piece at the box-office.

Reverting to Miss Bainter, her acting in this stunt revives a notion that came to me last Summer when the Theater Guild was speculating as to the best of the available actresses for the part of Nina Leeds in the second cast of "Strange Interlude." A representative of the Guild, explaining that Miss Pauline Lord's was the best box-office name that had occurred to the management, asked me if I had a better suggestion; and I replied with Miss Bainter and Miss Mary Nash. I did not see Miss Lord in her recent tenancy of the rôle: what is more, I feel that I am not required to see her in order to know just how she acted it; and I still believe that Miss Bainter would be the right actress for it—not only in the second cast, but in the first, also. That is, I think she would be better in the rôle than Miss Fontanne was and better than Miss Judith Anderson is.

Miscellany.

The Theater Guild is advertising the final weeks of the New-York run of the same "Strange Interlude"—a run that started January 30 of last year. This has been since then the most talked-about play wherever in this wide and foolish world plays are talked about. The taxi-drivers Down There know where to take you if you mention the title, although not more than ten percent of them would know if you merely told them the theater in which it is performed. On my way back to the theater, after dinner, to pick up Act VI, ticket-hawkers on the sidewalks offered for a dollar apiece seats for the second part of the play: they had bought the chair-coupons and return-cheques from spectators who, leaving in the intermission for dinner, decided that five acts were sufficient. We of Chicago shall get the play in the Autumn—probably, as the final offering in the Guild's arrangement with the Blackstone: this would permit keeping "Strange Interlude" on indefinitely beyond the subscription-period of fifteen weeks, just as, last Autumn, "Porgy" was held as a box-office attraction after the eight-weeks subscription had expired.

And, as George S. Kaufman points out in today's New-York Times, the withdrawal of "Strange Interlude" will automatically send "Skidding" to the top of the current list of plays as the long-run attraction of the town. . . . Some of the seasoned and expert prognosticators of box-office chances said, when "Skidding" was recently exhibited in the Studebaker, that it was so bad that its chances of

Chicago Sends Its Culture Far and Wide

Civic Opera Spreads It Over the Map.

By Edward Moore.

THAT no large community, Chicago least of all, can possibly live to itself from a musical standpoint, but must affect the whole country roundabout, is the cheery message relayed to this desk by Charles F. Collisson of Minneapolis. Dealing with agricultural problems in the land of ten thousand lakes and a million and a half contented cows, and writing about them in the Minneapolis Tribune, Mr. Collisson also finds time to listen to music, and his letter is an incitement to be of good heart.

"We often wonder," he says, "if folks in the Windy City really appreciate what a wonderful inspiration old Chi has become to those of us who love good music and write about it appreciatively.

"The influence of your Chicago Civic Opera and your Symphony orchestra extends far beyond the boundaries of Grant park, Boul Mich, and Wacker drive.

"Both these organizations are radiating joy and gladness to thousands who dwell in the hinterlands, who never catch a glimpse of Orchestra hall or the old Auditorium.

Carrying Artistic Culture.

"Your Civic Opera company has just given us four of its superb performances in our new Municipal auditorium. Music lovers flocked from all over several states and even Canada to listen to its melodies.

"It carried the fame and artistic culture of Chicago to four immense, discriminating and enthusiastic audiences. Between 24,000 and 25,000 people heard the Chicago songbirds.

"Two operas, 'Thais' with our Mary Garden and Formichi, and 'Lohengrin' with Olszewska, Mason, Claire, and Baromeo drew more than 7,000 apiece, or twice the capacity of your auditorium.

"'Carmen' attracted more than

Chicago Gangland

Golden Flood Makes Czars, Befouls City

The True Story of Its Murders, Its Vices, and Its Reprisals

This is the tenth and final article of a series on the gangsters of boozedom and what they have done to Chicago. In the other installments Mr. Bennett has told the stories of Dean O'Banion, Johnny Torrio, the Gennas, Hymie Weiss, and many other gangsters.

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

BEHOLD "the Big Shot" of Chicago boozedom. He is Alphonse Capone, alias Al Brown. He is also called, by those who wish to speak respectfully of him, "the Big Fellow." But those who are not solicitous of his favor sometimes call him "Scarface Al." They do not do that in his presence, for he is a man capable of wild and frightening rushes of temper.

Note well the ponderous automobile in which he moves rapidly from point to point when business occupies him in Chicago. The ordinary car weighs three tons. The Big Fellow's weighs seven tons. In effect it is an armor-plated vehicle. Its doors are set with bullet-proof glass. When that glass was placed in the doors it imposed such a weight that the original hinges would not sustain it and heavier ones had to be substituted.

All this protective material was built into a car especially designed for Capone after one of his old cars, in which he was supposed to be riding, but was not, was riddled with shotgun slugs fired by his rivals in gangdom.

That happened in January, 1925.

Why Capone Bought New Car.

The attempt upon his life was a typical gangdom performance. A black touring car with closely drawn curtains swept alongside his car at State and 55th streets and delivered a fusillade. Capone's chauffeur was wounded in the back. Two other occupants escaped by dropping to the floor of the car.

Nor are armor plate and bullet-proof glass Capone's sole protection against the murderous rivalries and rancors of boozedom. When he is on the Chicago scene and when the chronic suspicions of boozedom have suddenly flamed into active warfare, as on last St. Valentine's day, when "Bugs" Moran's seven gangsters were machine gunned to death, the Big Fellow has a bodyguard which for fidelity and alertness a Balkan monarch might envy. If, under those disturbed conditions, Capone rides abroad, a car with four "torpedoes" in it precedes his car. "Torpedo" is gangdom's pet name for a quick killer. A car occupied by four more torpedoes follows him

When Gangdom Seeks Diversion

When Capone takes a member of his family or a friend to the theater, not two seats, but six or eight, are bought, and the extra seats are occupied by blue jeweled, keen eyed members of the bodyguard. They are devoted little men, mostly of Italian or Sicilian origin. They receive about $100 a week each. They do not clutter the air with questions, but they can search out impending trouble when it is in a closed car a block away—with the curtains drawn. Their whole philosophy of life and death contains but one clause. It is this:

A Smith & Wesson makes all men equal.

And so Capone lives on.

Alone of all the more notorious and sinister founders of Chicago boozedom, he still is a commanding figure.

Envying the Violet.

But he lives resentfully, hating his own reputation, hating the notoriety which his evil deeds have built up for him and craving the privacy which would enable him to enjoy his ill gotten gains in peace.

As long ago as January, 1927, publicity began to irk him excessively and he met questions as to his activities with a phrase which since has become his refrain. It runs:

"I am out of the booze racket and I wish the papers would let me alone."

One of his early releases of that formula was made on Jan. 23, 1927, at the front door of his apartment at 7244 Prairie avenue, Chicago. He seemed at the moment a harmless and domestic citizen. A pink apron hung over his ample front and he carried a pan of spaghetti which he had been cooking. Silken wool underwear and fancy bedroom slippers were other coverings of a personality that for nearly a decade has been a terror to rival gangsters and a prime menace to law and order.

"I positively have retired," added Al Capone as he withdrew with the pan of spaghetti.

But Capone's reputation for being an efficient and implacable punisher of those who build up a power in boozedom which threatens his power, or the power of those who operate with him, continues to stalk him and embitter his privacy.

"Bugs" Sees the Master Hand.

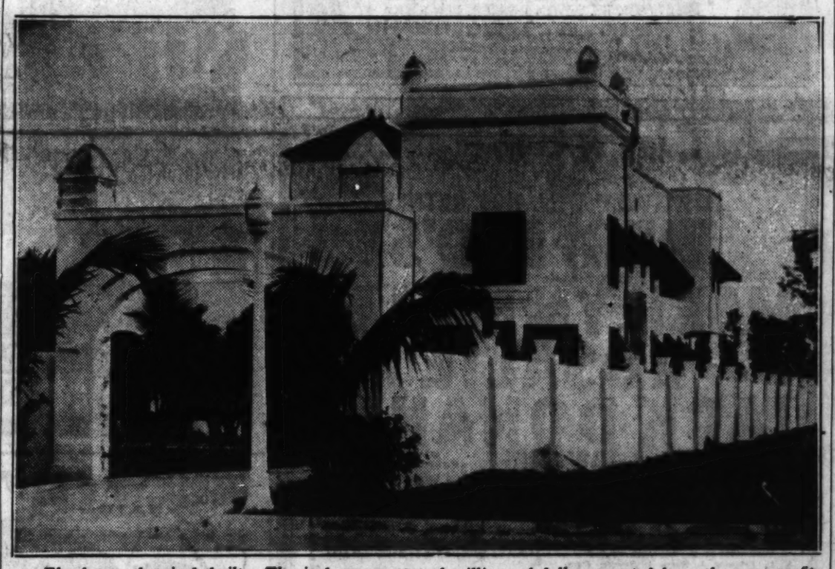
The first comment "Bugs" Moran made when seven of his henchmen were machine gunned to death in the massacre of last St. Valentine's day was:

"Only one gang kills like that—the Capone gang."

"Bugs" should know. For, from 1924, when his co-criminal, Dean O'Banion, was slain by gangdom, to last St. Valentine's day, reprisal and counter-reprisal between Moran gangsters and Genna gangsters and Capone gangsters were numerous, deadly, and extremely intricate.

In short, Al Capone remains a power and a suspect, but, so adroit is he and so skillfully is he served by lawyers whom he pays handsomely, that he remains a stranger to prison cells.

WHERE CAPONE PLAYS "MINE HOST"



The house that jack built. The jack was a part of millions of dollars wrested from the most profitable industry the world has ever known. In this Florida manor Capone recently entertained eighty guests; in other places he has spent as high as $5,000 in one night. He is said to have tossed away $7,500,000 since coming to Chicago eight years ago. [Associated Press Photo.]

"THE BIG FELLOW"

Of only medium height, Al Capone is broadening out physically, as well as in his sway over gangland. The fact that he is developing a paunch was revealed when he gave surly consent to the camera men to take this view on his luxurious estate on Palm isle, near Miami, Fla. [Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

This bad man, who, had he been a good man, might have made a notable career along legitimate lines, came to Chicago a year or two after the world war, from which he was honorably discharged and in which he learned that the machine gun could, if operated from a rapidly moving automobile, be made as effective a weapon in the adjustment of private feuds as it was in the settlement of international broils.

This discovery and his real gift for organization have been his principal contributions to the rise of gangdom.

Capone Reaches the Top.

John Torrio, also a gang organizer of parts, sent for Capone to be his henchman just as the proprietor of bawdy houses and flashy cafés, Jim Colosimo, had sent for Torrio when Colosimo's rivals became too numerous and too menacing for one man to handle. And, like Torrio, Capone outgrew his boss. The day came when even the capable Torrio could not save Colosimo from the punishments gangdom inflicts on double crossers. So Colosimo fell before gangdom's guns. And the day came, too, when Torrio could no longer protect himself from bootleggers and beer runners and racketeers from whom he had pitilessly exacted tribute and so he, having been extensively but not fatally riddled by gangdom, fled into exile, where he still is.

Hence Capone—whose name earlier in his career always got into the newspapers as Caponi, which is probably the original Italian spelling—is now the veritable "Big Fellow."

Another Five Points Product.

He was born in this country about thirty years ago and grew up with the New York Five Points gang, which also bred Torrio in crime. In school he never went above the fourth grade, but he has tried to educate his younger brothers, one of whom is now in a university which it would serve no useful purpose to name.

The scar which gave Capone his nickname of "Scarface Al" is noticeable but not conspicuous. It is on his left cheek, along the jawbone, and it is the result of a wound he received during his service as pug ugly for the Five Points gang. The nickname was a reportorial invention and Capone has never been grateful to the reporters for it.

A Rose in His Buttonhole.

The man is of medium height and is developing a paunch. In his circle he is what is called "a snappy dresser"—garments of rich material, rose in buttonhole, and diamond in scarf.

He was born in Brooklyn, but comes of Neapolitan stock. He speaks without an accent and his language is heavily laced with profane and obscene words. When newspaper photographers ask him to pose for them his response is likely to be a blast of foul language and a declaration that he has been desperately wronged by a press to which in the days of his strikebreaking activities he had rendered signal service. When the photographers whine, as is their custom under such circumstances, that they are just honest lads trying, like him, to get along in a hard world and that they will be dismissed if they do not get the photograph, he often gives surly consent, assuring them the while that if he did justice he ought to throw them in the tepid waters which wash the shores of his luxurious estate on Palm isle, near Miami, Fla.

Loved for His Gold Alone.

Miami and parts adjacent do not like Capone, but all adore his money, which he tosses about with a thriftless hand. Hence efforts to oust him by those who felt that the presence of such a man as a conspicuous villa resident was no asset to the winter playground came to nothing.

Last June the campaign to get him

Paid Its Own Way.

"Mrs. Carlyle Scott, our Minneapolis impresario, had the backing of an $89,000 guarantee fund subscribed by business firms. But Chicago opera paid its own way in Minneapolis, just as it did last year.

"That's how Chicago Civic opera is appreciated in the northland that evolved the St. Olaf college choir. We all want more of it.

"All winter long, moreover, we have enjoyed wonderful radio musical treats—from Chicago. We tuned in on the Chicago opera on Wednesday evenings. We've heard its wonderful orchestra, the mighty choruses, those delightful arias—even the applause and the opening tap-tap of Polacco's baton, as clearly as if seated in the Auditorium.

"Sunday evenings while winter winds do blow, we sit in slippers at home and hear Dr. Stock and his orchestra giving us their best symphonic selections.

"This is a rare treat—a unique one, too, because later in the evening WCCO gives us the Minneapolis Symphony under Henri Verbrugghen. Two symphonies in one evening.

Northwest Listens In.

"One of his recent guest artists was our own Minnesota nightingale, Florence Macbeth, the Chicago favorite.

"Between the two symphony programs we usually hear some Chicago or Metropolitan opera star. So that at least twice a week the whole northwest hears Chicago broadcasting musical culture.

"All of us are looking forward to the opening of the new temple on Wacker drive and another season of Chicago Civic opera in the Twin Cities."

Jazz Defined.

WCCO, by the way, is the station that recently asked its auditors to send in definitions of jazz and got some interesting replies. Here are some of them:

"The flappers' lullaby.

"The loose chain on the tire of life.

"Rhythm used by the imps of Hades in their membership drive among mortals.

"Unbuttoned music.

"The true expression of the big city.

"A pig's squeal discarded by the packers.

"An inspiration of the younger generation to keep the older generation alive.

"A rhythmic scramble of knives and forks shaken frantically in a tin pan.

"Sixty per cent static, twenty-five per cent cat's meow, eight per cent insanity, five per cent bunk, and two per cent music."

Mischa Elman with Symphony.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra goes into its semi-final week of the season with a concert on Tuesday afternoon, the regulation pair on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening and a "pop" on Thursday evening. For the Tuesday program Mischa Elman, the violinist, held over from the week just passed, will again be the soloist, this time in the Mendelssohn Concerto. Mr. Stock will conduct Georg Schumann's "Liebesfrühling" Overture, Otterstrom's Elegy, Chorale, and Fugue, the section called "Solovei, the Brigand," from Gliere's "Ilia Mourometz" Symphony, and selections from the third act of "Tristan and Isolde."

Alexander Brailowsky, pianist, will make his fourth appearance as soloist with the orchestra on Friday and Saturday, playing Liszt's First Concerto. Orchestrally the program will have a repetition of the Schumann Overture, also the Rameau Suite in the Motti orchestration, and Richard Strauss' "Thus Spake Zarathustra." The "pop" likewise calls for a repetition of the Otterstrom numbers and in addition "Le Carnaval Romain" Overture by Berlioz, Robert Schumann's Fourth Symphony, Wolf-Ferrari's "The Secret of Susanne" Overture, Debussy's "Fêtes" and Tschaikowsky's "Capriccio Italien."

A Jeritza Story.

Cesar Saerchinger sends the Musical Courier a Jeritza story from Europe. He admits that it is unverified, but it has a point.

The director of the Vienna opera was sitting in a café with a friend. He was in despair. "My dear Fritz," he said, "I am ruined. Tonight is the gala performance of 'Tosca,' and yesterday Jeritza rang up to say that she had ague and a temperature of 101. I at once begged Lehmann to take the part, and this morning she telephoned to say that she had flu and a temperature of 102. And now, and now . . ." (the director wrung his hands) "the worst tragedy of all has happened. They have both rung up within the last half hour to say they both can sing."

Music Notes.

The Gordon String quartet will play the seventh concert of the Chicago Chamber Music society series this afternoon at the Blackstone, and the eighth and final next Sunday afternoon. For this afternoon a novelty is promised. In addition to Risti's short quartet and Franck's long one, the organization will take assistance from Joseph Vito, harpist, and Ernest Liegl, flutist, and give the first Chicago performance of three pieces by Daniel Gregory Mason for the six instruments. Next Sunday's program will be entirely of the works of Beethoven.

When the Civic Opera company gets into its new home on Wacker drive, it will make a change in its Sunday afternoon performances, starting them at 3 o'clock instead of an hour earlier, as in the past. The change has been made for the benefit of suburban subscribers, who can thus have their luncheons at home and reach the theater with more convenience in time for the performance. New stage equipment enabling the stage crew to set and clear scenery more quickly than at the Auditorium will make the change possible.

Virgilio Lazzari, the great basso of the Civic Opera, is starting on a concert tour. Tomorrow night will find him in Lafayette, Ind., Wednesday in Kokomo, Friday in Huntington, W. Va., the next Monday in Raleigh, N. C., and Wednesday in Meridian, Miss.

AS SOLOIST

MISCHA ELMAN.
[C. Mishkin Photo.]

Well known all over the world wherever a violin and its bow are juxtaposed, he was the soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra last week and will continue in that capacity next Tuesday afternoon. For the coming concert he will play the Mendelssohn concerto in E minor.

Stokowski Leads Orchestra Before Admiring Audience

By Joan King.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, April 6.—[Special.]—Notwithstanding Gotham's assiduous devotion of late to the celebration of seasonal farewells, there was nothing lacking in warmth in the reception reserved for that incomparable batonist, Leopold Stokowski, on his return to Carnegie hall Tuesday evening. This was the Philadelphia leader's first visit to this metropolis since Nov. 27. He has but recently returned to the leadership of his orchestra after a long season of vacationing and his reappearance here at the helm of that organization marked the ninth concert of the band in this city during the musical season of 1928-'29.

It was with some surprise, however, that Mr. Stokowski's choice of program for the occasion was noted. He apparently went American all of a sudden, for all but two numbers, and those at the conclusion of the evening, were the work of this country's composers. The fact that the first three offerings were totally unknown may have pleased some few auditors who happened to be possessed of an unsatiable appetite for the modern, but undoubtedly many went away disappointed.

American Music.

Hermati's prelude to a melodrama opened the program and was followed by Riegger's Study in Sonority for forty violins (in ten groups of four) and Jacobi's Indian dances. Two of the composers were native born Americans. The third, Mr. Hermati, was born in Hungary, but became naturalized here in 1919 and is now conductor of the Omaha Symphony. His "Prelude to a Melodrama" is what he calls "a study of a one act play in a Chinese California story."

As outlined in the program notes, it depicts a stern, relentless father; a blind son; a stepmother; the erroneous consumption of poison; the wrath of heaven, and a final reconciliation of husband and wife. The music is agreeable but somewhat dull.

Evoked Hisses.

Wallingford Reigger, who hails from Albany, is teaching and composing in this city. His contribution to the evening interested the audience, at least to the point of hissing. Somehow the continued play upon the upper voices of the string choir with no bass seemed to get upon the collective nerves.

Frederick Jacobi's music is, of course, known to be that of a composer of skill and good taste. But the "impressions of the great ritualistic dances, which take place still among the Pueblo and Navajos of New Mexico and Arizona," were not any more impressive than Indian music written by white men usually is.

However, the Mozart and Beethoven with which the Philadelphians concluded the evening, sent everybody home in a happier frame of mind. Mr. Stokowski was, of course, received as enthusiastically as ever by his admirers, which are legion in this city.

The only chamber music, to which the New York lover of that form of interpretation was treated recently, was a great disappointment to those who crowded Town hall for the occasion. An organization, of no less popularity, hereabouts, than the London string quartet, was the cause. Something dire has happened to these players since their last visit. It was difficult to determine what could have worked such havoc in a really fine ensemble in one brief season. Beethoven's third "Rasoumowsky" quartet; a novelty by the viola player of the ensemble, H. Waldo Warner—a "Suite in the Olden Style"—and the first movement of the Tschaikowsky D major quartet; provided the Londoners with music, the playing of which proved to be the poorest they have ever offered here.

An Awful Moment.

Once at Chamonix I was with a party doing a bit of glacier climbing. I had been warned to obey the guide implicitly and had done so up to a certain point, but venturing just a step to one side I felt myself going down, down, I knew not where! Suddenly the rope around me tightened but I had already gone down those icy depths about six feet, then struck bottom.

I really thought in those moments I should emerge from the tongue of that glacier in about a hundred years, very well preserved. I was sent back immediately to the châlet and remained there until the return of the party, who reported a thrilling climb and a beautiful view.

Someway mountain and glacier climbing have lost all interest for me.

Narrow Escape.

Harold and I were riding along the county road to a small mining station to meet Harold's father, who was to arrive on the train. We were so interested in conversation that we heard neither the train bell nor the signal bell, yet both were ringing. I glanced up as if called, though I heard no one, to see a number of men waving their hats and yelling for us to stop.

I snatched the lines from Harold's hands, gave a quick jerk, and brought the horse to a stop along the side of the train. Had the horse taken another step we would have been ground to pieces under the wheels of the train on which Harold's father was riding.

Believe me, we were thoroughly thrilled.

This Thing and That About the Plays and Actors

By Frederick Donaghey.

popular success were great if the management of the house would exhibit a little patience for a month or five weeks.

"Dynamo," the only new piece of O'Neill's brought out since "Strange Interlude," was withdrawn last night by the Guild from one of its New-York houses; and it is doubtful that the piece will ever again be shown. Some of the most abject of O'Neill's adulants and addicts have admitted that "Dynamo" is a mess . . . Other things withdrawn last night were "Animal Crackers," in which the Marx Brothers have had a successful run; "Indiscretion," one of Myron C. Fagan's so-called plays; "S. S. Glencairn," a title covering four of O'Neill's short pieces; "The Lady from the Sea," wherewith Miss Blanche Yurka failed to interest the populace in the sufferings of a woman who wished to be told by her husband that she was free to do as she pleased; and the performances of some latter-day vaudevilles and operettas by a troupe from Paris.

And it seems that the Guild's plans for visiting London, although the publication of them has been marked by a deal of detail as to the plays and actors involved, are rather tentative, and that the entire project may be dropped.

More Miscellany.

Robert Emmet Sherwood, author of "The Road to Rome" and "The Queen's Husband," and Vincent Youmans, who composed good tunes for "No! No, Nanette!" and "Hit the Deck!" are fabricating a piece wherein the amusing fellows named Clayton, Jackson and Durante may perform. It is said that Miller and Lyles, the Negro "team," also will be in the show, and probably Miss Marion Harris, who is in this week's bill in the Palace. . . . Mr. Youmans speaks of something he will prepare for Miss Queenie Smith, also, and of a third piece for which Ring Lardner will provide the "book," which is lingo for plot and text.

That Fred Stone will appear next season in "Ripples," originally designed for Leon Errol, is confirmed so far as the author, William Anthony McGuire, may confirm it.

Jacob Ben-Ami, who for a time was said by the New-York play-reporters to be a great actor (and who isn't anything like a great actor), is expected to be with Miss Eva Le Gallienne next season.

¶ ¶ ¶

"Commodore Trunnion" is the title of a new piece which has to do with life and such in the 'Eighties in the Cape Cod neighborhood. The author is Kate Parsons, whose name isn't familiar; and Arthur Hopkins, whose name is, says he will produce it.

Owen Davis is at work on a piece named "Two Is Company"; and it is to have rimes by Lorenz Hart and tunes by Richard Rodgers, the gentlemen who provided rimes and tunes for "A Connecticut Yankee."

¶ ¶ ¶

Miss Fannie Brice, Leon Erroll, and Lionel Atwill seem to be in what is called in New-York a "definite smash" in "Fioretta," for which the box-office price is seven-seventy a seat to those who insist on sitting in the first five rows of the theater there named for and operated by Earl Carroll. It is added that ticket-brokers have bought all the main-floor seats for weeks, and that the cost of raising the curtain was $300,000. . . . It all sounds so Ziegfeldian!

Frank Craven has finished touring in "The Nineteenth Hole," but tarries in Hollywood to do some writing for sound-films.

RETURNING IN THE NINTH SCANDALS

HARRY RICHMAN MISS FRANCES WILLIAMS

THEY were here in the eighth issue, in the Summer of 1927, and were liked, although they were, when the run started, known less well to the Chicago public than any of their associates in the roster of that show. Mr. Richman and Miss Williams are cast together in some of the skits and interludes of this new issue of the Scandals, and have some duets.

Plays and Such of Ten Years Ago in Chicago Theaters

SUBJOINED are news and comment on plays and shows printed in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of April 6, 1919—the date most nearly corresponding to today. The excerpts are verbatim, and not rewrites or summarizations.

William A. Page, lately business-manager of "Chu Chin Chow," has acquired a star, Miss Willette Kershaw, and a play, "Peggy, Behave!" whom and which he will present ere long in Chicago. "Peggy, Behave!" is by Owen Davis, of the Harvard School of the Drama.

"Peggy, Behave!" didn't behave well at the box-office. Miss Kershaw has not since been prominent in this neighborhood. It is recalled that the play, in the course of its engagement, was subjected to some revision by Ring Lardner, then of THE TRIBUNE.

When "Business Before Pleasure" leaves the Woods, in a week or so, Miss Bertha Kalich will go there in "The Riddle: Woman"; and the announcement says that the colon in the title is essential.

Well, the colon was at least as nearly essential as the play, itself.

"Fighting Frank" Tinney and his soldiers are about to leave the Olympic for other centers. To succeed them, the Julian Eltinge Revue will come, with all that that announcement implies.

Tinney had made clear that he was not capable of carrying an entire evening, even in the guise of a patriotic actor calling himself Captain.

On Tuesday night, at the Harris Theater in New-York, H. H. Frazee, the baseball magnate, will present "A Good Bad-Woman," by William Anthony Maguire, the Chicago playwright. Margaret Illington, Wilton Lackaye, and Robert Edeson are among the trade-marks of its cast.

As already explained here, "A Good Bad-Woman" was a new name for a piece shown in Chicago as "Everyman's Castle."

Twenty Years Ago

GOING back through the files to twenty years ago, or to the corresponding Sunday of 1909, the interests of theater-goers were catered to in THE TRIBUNE of April 4 by the paragraphs that follow.

Musical comedy is to the fore in the changes scheduled for the local theaters this week; for, out of the four playhouses where new attractions will be offered, three will provide musical entertainment for the patrons. To the Great Northern, Corinne will come in "The Girl from Berlin" this afternoon. It is a revised version of "Lola from Berlin," a vehicle which Lulu Glaser used for a short tour last season. The book is by John J. McNally; and the music is the joint contribution of William Jerome and Jean Schwartz.

Corinne, whose name had been in black type since her childhood, was about through in 1909. She never, on growing up, quite made the grade of the first-class theaters, although she had a good singing-voice, danced well, and was easy to look at.

At the Grand tonight, David Montgomery and Fred Stone will reappear in "The Red Mill" for a three-weeks engagement. Their performances here will be their last appearances in "The Red Mill"; therefore, the opportunities to see these popular comedians and enjoy the Blossom-Herbert piece are numbered. Contrary to the usual practice, Charles Dillingham sends back the original company practically intact; and among those who will be seen again are Miss Ethel Johnson, Miss Allene Crater, David L. Don, Edward Begley, Charles Dox, Claude Cooper, and Neal McCay.

All things considered, "The Red Mill" was easily the most successful of the four shows fabricated for Montgomery and Stone after their success in "The Wizard of Oz." The populace loved it; and the writer of these memoranda thought the piece a bore, in spite of a good tune or two by Herbert, and the stars matchlessly uncomical.

Saturday evening, the International Theater will reopen on the occasion of the first performance of a musical farce called "The Girl from Rector's." It is an American version of a French farce originally called "La Loute"; and, under its new name and with its new dressing or lack of dressing, it has been running at Weber's Theater in New-York for several weeks. The cast to be seen at the International next Saturday night is one especially engaged for the Chicago engagement; and among its more prominent members are Jeanette Lowrie, Edward Fosberg, Charles P. Morrison, Vivian Blackburn, and W. C. Mandeville.

The International was the circular auditorium at the southwest corner of Seventh Street and Wabash Avenue. It was usually unoccupied. "The Girl from Rector's" is forgotten save as a title. Miss Lowrie was for a time an actress of relative eminence.

The solitary representative of the Drama affected by the week's changes is Wright Lorimer, who begins a brief engagement in "The Shepherd-King" at the Auditorium today. The play is based, it will be remembered, on the Biblical narrative of the life of David. The play gives scope for scenic opulence; and the vast Auditorium stage will afford a rare opportunity for the display of the different settings. In the cast with Mr. Lorimer are Frederica Going, Carl Eckstrom, Nellette Reed, Henry Stafford, Frank Peters, and E. F. Roseman.

Lorimer, an ex-clergyman, was persistent in the matter of "The Shepherd-King," of which he was part-author. He expended what was a fortune at the time in putting the play on. He lacked, as an actor, charm for the public. He at length killed himself.

READY TO DO THE STAR'S PART

MISS CARYL BERGMAN

SHE'S of what some managers would tonily term the ensemble of "Rosalie": her name is in the playbill, and and she may be identified from the above picture. But Miss Bergman's real importance is that she is ready at a moment's notice to go on in place of Miss Marilyn Miller, and to sing and dance and act with Jack Donahue.

New Things This Week in Manhattan Theaters

POST-EASTER activities among the producers give to New-York this week three plays that are new, the revival of one that is regarded by deep-thinking persons as a Russian masterpiece, and the revival of another that was immensely popular all but thirty years ago. This is the list:

"The Love-Duel," adapted by Zoë Akins from an Hungarian piece by Lili Hatvany, with Miss Barrymore Louis Calhern, Henry Stephenson, Ferdinand Gottschalk, and Miss Dorothy Hall. . . . This will be Miss Barrymore's second venture of the season, which until now has been devoted to "The Kingdom of God."

"Jonesy," based by Anne Morrison and John Peter Toohey on some short tales by Mr. Toohey, with Donald Meek, Miss Nydia Westman, Miss Spring Byington, and Raymond Guion. . . . Miss Morrison is an actress Mr. Tuohey is a well-known publicity-man of the theaters.

"The Vegetable," by F. Scott Fitzgerald, to be acted by one of the up-an-alley groups Down There. . . . This piece by Fitzgerald was written at the time he was riding high on the strength of "This Side of Paradise" and "The Beautiful and Damned," and was then said to have been taken for production by one of the prominent entrepreneurs. Nothing was done about it—at least, not so far as Chicago or New-York was concerned; and the verdict seemed to be that the fun in the idea was too nearly elusive for a general audience.

"The Sea-Gull," held by many to be Tchekhov's masterpiece: to be acted at matinées by Miss Dorothy Sands, Miss Barbara Bulgakova, and Walter Abel.

"A Message from Mars," by Richard Ganthony, with Guy Bates Post, Lee Baker, and Miss Beatrice Terry. . . . This comedy was put on in 1899 in London by the late Charles Hawtrey, who afterward toured the United States in it.

Why Now?

Now that talkies are being made out there, they call it Howly-wood.—From Life.

Old Theater Comes Back to Hoboken, N. J.

By Burns Mantle.

ter capital itself. The two outstanding managerial enterprises of this season's theater season in New York are those of the Theater Guild, which continues to operate at a maximum cost of $2.50 per seat to its subscribers and Eva Le Gallienne's civic repertory company, which is enjoying the best season it has ever had at prices ranging from $1.50 for the best seats in its obscurely located 14th street location.

Hoboken Experiment Successful.

A third and most amazing reaction in this sector is that of Christopher Morley's experience with a stock company in Hoboken, N. J. Hoboken, as you may or may not know, has always been our pet joke town. The urban comedian first tries a reference to sleeping in Philadelphia as a laugh catcher. If that fails he makes reference to an experience of trying to find his way about Brooklyn. This is fairly sure of results, but if that, too, fails, he falls back on Hoboken.

Early this season Mr. Morley and three associates rented an old time theater in Hoboken and established a stock company there. They played during the first weeks of their season such recent successes as "Rain," "The Barker," etc. Their business was discouraging. Often it was pitiable. Determined not to give up without a struggle Cleon Throckmorton, a member of the producing group, suggested that they fly boldly in the face of expert advice and produce a real old-timer. He had photostatic copies of the manuscript of a melodrama called "After Dark," written by Dion Boucicault (the Owen Davis of his day), produced originally in 1867, and revived in the early nineties by William A. Brady, with himself playing Old Tom, a drunkard hero, and the play's most sympathetic personage.

For two weeks "After Dark" did not do so well. About the third week it began to be talked about. The fact that it was an old timer at which smart folk of today could laugh became a subject of Rialto comment. The further fact that Hoboken was, as Mr. Morley had advertised it, the "last seacoast of Bohemia" where something better than near-beer could be bought for 25 cents the seidel and 15 cents the glass, enlarged the attractions of a trip across the river.

TWO-A-DAY

MISS MARION HARRIS.

She's back in the Palace, where she appeared for a week last season. She achieved a high popularity in Chicago when she appeared for part of the long run, in the Grand Opera-House, of "A Night in Spain." . . . It is said that Miss Harris may go into a new song-and-dance piece with Clayton, Jackson and Durante.

(Seidles are now 50 cents and the smaller glasses 15 cents.)

Second Theater Now Thriving.

Gradually the news spread and within the next ten days traveling to Hoboken by tube or ferry or auto became an adventure. Since then business has mounted steadily. "After Dark" is now enjoying the sixteenth week of its engagement. Being smart enough to capitalize this unexpected and quite unusual reaction, the Morley associates rented a second old time theater and revived therein "The Black Crook."

Accepting this Hoboken enterprise as a fad of the hour and being busy with other and seemingly more important productions on my own side of the river, I paid little attention to these productions. But having an off day last week I "seideled" over to Hoboken.

You may imagine my surprise when I discovered that not only were both theaters playing to capacity audiences, but that it was almost impossible to secure dinner reservations at any of the local hotels. The caravansary to which we, using such influence as I was able to bring to bear, were finally admitted, was a hotel that began flirting with bankruptcy shortly after the great war started and the German boats ceased to dock at Hoboken and furnish a more or less dependable source of revenue.

Great Adventure for New Yorkers.

Every table in the main dining room had been reserved in advance. Tables had been set up not only in what was before prohibition the barroom but in the lobby, in front of the desk, and in the sitting rooms as well. Below stairs, in the rathskeller, there were probably forty more tables, all reserved and all occupied as early as 7:30 which is an unheard of dining hour in New York. By 8:20 the place was emptied as were a half dozen other Hoboken hotels and restaurants similarly crowded, and the theaters were filled.

We sat in the balcony of the old Rialto theater. Around us were parties of four, six and eight adventurers. Their spirits were gay, but not too gay. They had come to make sport of the adventure and were rather desperately determined that it should result in sport.

At the least suggestion of a heroic stand on the part of the players they cheered. Whenever the villain voiced an intention of doing the hero or heroine dirt they indicated a desire to crawl up on the stage and help.

"Louder!" they shouted.

And whenever the players managed to make themselves heard above the cheers or the hisses they would call out: "Not so loud!"

Public Still Fond of Old Melodrama.

But, curiously, and I accept this as a tribute to something the old theater had that the new theater too often lacks, they were often held by the crude old story itself and wanted to follow the plot of the play. By the middle of the second act they were held, actually held, by the flight of the lady who was neither "maid, wife nor widow." They wanted to see virture rewarded and villainy confused. There was genuine heartiness in their cheers and resentment in their hisses.

It was an illuminating as well as an interesting experience. It furnished further proof to me that what was basically holding in the older drama is still holding. We must have romance in the theater. We grow weary and self-conscious in being shown the sort of debased and psychological misfits we may be and probably are. We have a human longing to see in the theater the type of noble and heroic humans we would like to be. Believe it or not, something of the old theater is coming back. And nothing will bring it back as fast as the newly developed and, till now, quite unsatisfying talkies. Stick a pin in that prediction and remember it when you see what you shall see.

Margaret Anglin in Indifferent Play.

The Lenten doldrums have done for the Broadway theater. There was but one production of consequence last week. That was a play called "Security," with Margaret Anglin returned to the modern theater to play the heroine.

None is so complete mistress of the old time emotional actress' technique as she. In "Security" she played a possessive mother to whom her children ran for protection as fluffy chicks run to mother hen. For years she had known that her husband was a liar and a cheat. But so long as she could pretend not to know and her pretense brought the children happiness she was content.

When her husband seduced his stenographer and scandal threatened she lied him out of conviction by the newspapers and finally out of the coroner's inquest. But the moment he confessed to her she was through. She could bear the security of pretended ignorance, but she could not accept the security of truth. Fortunately the husband kills himself, and the play leaves the wife marrying a second time, against her will, to protect the job of a son-in-law. The security of one daughter's happiness is still her happy martyrdom.

Miss Anglin plays the mother effectively. Her range and her intelligence are still equal to any demand the modern theater may put upon her. But I see little hope for the play, which was written by an Englishman, Esme Wynne-Tyson.

Thurston Hall, Marjorie Gateson, Reginald Mason and Charles Millward play completely for Miss Anglin.

Jerome Blum Paintings at Arts Club

"Cagnes," a painting by Jerome Blum in the exhibit at the Arts club.

The Work of Chicago Man Wins Praise

Flower Canvases Full of Color and Beauty.

By Maude Martin Ellis.

THE paintings of Jerome Blum, on view at the Arts club, are attracting considerable attention. Before one canvas called "A Man," for which, evidently, the artist posed for himself, Mr. Blum found a lady deep in perplexed contemplation. He says that she told him the title had no significance, that he should have called it something with more meaning.

Mr. Blum inquired what significance the picture had for her and why it drew her attention, what title in her estimation would be more significant. The lady thoughtfully surveyed the canvas again, and finally confessed to the artist that she could not catalog her reactions nor tell why the canvas intrigued her fancy.

The incident is remindful of one of Whistler's remarks when he came upon a woman studying one of his paintings. She complained to him that she couldn't understand his painting, that she could make nothing out of it, to which Whistler replied, "Well, then, Madame, don't bother about it."

Dancing Color.

There is no monotony about Blum's canvases; no minor key is struck; his color fairly dances. He enjoys painting flowers. He explains that when he was a child his mother loved flowers, and that they had few, principally a lilac tree. His father in presenting the mother with gifts never thought of flowers. The little son's first present to his mother was a few flowers, and thereafter whenever he could manage he brought her bouquets. She protested to her son that they were lovely, but an extravagance.

That incident, Mr. Blum recalls, produced the first stirring of ambition. He agreed in reflection with his mother that it did seem extravagant, flowers were so lovely and lasted such a little while. Therefore, he resolved to capture the beauty of them in paint and make their loveliness permanent.

Mr. Blum was born in Chicago of a father who manufactured sweaters. Like many another father, this one destined his son for a business career. Until the age of 15 or so, young Blum received encouragement from his mother in his desire for artistic expression.

Early Struggles.

But at 17 the elder Blum dominated and the boy went to work in the tax department of an election commissioner's office. His father wished him to learn about machinery and told his son that if he got a job in a factory and proved successful he would grant the privilege of six months at an art school.

Having a small knowledge of machinery, young Blum found a job in a Brooklyn machine shop which he held for a year and a half, carefully saved his earnings and returned to Chicago where he became a student at the old Smith's Art school which used to be situated on Van Buren street.

After a year and a half of work in the school, Mr. Smith offered to send the young student to Paris and defray his expenses for a year.

Informed of Mr. Smith's generous offer, young Blum's father capitulated, arranged a small allowance and sent his son to the schools of France.

Travels Abroad.

After seven years of study in Paris, Blum lived in China and Japan. He took a houseboat, painting on the boat along the Yangste-kiang river for six weeks. Then he journeyed to the South Sea Islands.

He assisted Frank Lloyd Wright in the designs and decorations, along with John H. Norton and Will Henderson, when the Midway gardens was built.

His first exhibit was held in Chicago in 1910. "It was one of the first exhibitions here," says Mr. Blum, "of post impressionistic painting and caused so much agitation that the police nearly closed the showing.

"Harriet Monroe," continued Mr. Blum, "was then editing the art column for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and by a more lenient attitude turned the tide for me.

"Mr. Thurber had become so worried by such unfavorable comment coming from all sides that he had decided for the sake of his reputation to close the exhibit before the date agreed upon."

Mr. Blum then pleaded for one more day, advancing the argument that such adverse criticism would produce a vast crowd.

"Which is exactly what happened," says Mr. Blum, "and I sold my first three pictures, the first buyer being Arthur Aldis."

Mr. Blum is living at present in Dampiete on the road to Chartre, just outside Paris.

Notes of Art and Artists.

Salcia Balind's paintings, water colors, and lithographs are on view at the Chester Johnson galleries. Her pictures are smaller in size than those she has previously exhibited. Her oils show decided progress and her water colors are charming.

There are some paintings in the Newcomb Macklin gallery done by the gifted young artist who has been painting in Taos, N. M., Kenneth Adams. His canvases are skilful in arrangement and form and delightful in color.

In the Allerton galleries is an exhibition of water color drawings by Archibald Murray from London. It will continue till April 8.

An exhibition of paintings by Harry Leith Ross, A. N. A., and a memorial exhibition of paintings, pastels, and drypoints by the late Warren Davis is now current in the Carson Pirie Scott galleries.

On view at Kroch's Book store are water colors by Louis J. Kaep.

The Hoosier Patrons' association announces an exhibition of paintings by Alice Collingbourne Winn which will end April 17.

An exhibition of sculpture by Agnes V. Fromen is presented at the Cordon.

John Norton has been commissioned to do the ceiling in the long concourse of the new Daily News building. It is a vaulted ceiling 180 feet long and seventeen feet wide. The ornament used is composed of activities of newspaper life abstracted to such a point that it can be used for modern decorations.

One of the most striking rooms of the group that is attracting visitors to the current exhibition of contemporary American design at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, is the woman's bedroom, designed by John Wellborn Root of Chicago, with its bed on a dais, its pewter dressing table with revolving chair, and its lighting from behind figure silhouettes. The room is decidedly new—and different.

The exhibit, which has attracted thousands of visitors daily, and which was originally planned for a short period only, has been extended to Sept. 2. It is the eleventh in the museum series of contemporary American design, and was prepared by a committee of architects working with the aid of an advisory committee on industrial arts.

The New Horror.

One comfort in connection with the old-time melodrama in the flesh, as contrasted with the now popular talking-screen, is that the villain didn't hiss as follows: "You thay you have the paperth? Where ith the child?"—From the Detroit News.

My Most Embarrassing Moment

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

A Budding Author.

I had been writing a football romance for English credit, and, while seated in a study class, I thought up a love note, which the heroine was to send to the hero. I had it all worded in my mind, and, fearing that I would forget it before I could add it to my story, which I did not have with me, I pulled a folded piece of note paper from my notebook and wrote it out on one of the folds.

The next day my Latin teacher called me to the front of the room and unfolded the Latin paper I had handed in the day before. With a frown on her face, she asked, "Is this yours?"

I said, "Why, yes, Miss Jackson," and you can picture the color of my face, when she turned over my heroine's love note, and said, "I don't think your mind's on your work."

M. S.

An Observing Guest.

One Sunday evening company came in. It wouldn't have mattered much, but we were short on coffee. Even then it didn't make much difference, as the man was an old friend, and, besides, there was enough coffee to make one cup around.

Needless to say, all went well until this man drank his allotted share. Then papa aired his perfectly blissful ignorance of household affairs.

"Come, Charlie, have another cup of coffee."

"O, no, thank you. I truly do not care for any more."

Still papa urged, until finally Mr. S. laughed and said, "Well, you're certainly hospitable, but I just now saw your wife draining the dregs to get herself a cup."

Extra Luxuries

Beyond the famed appointments—the refined beauty, the lavish spaciousness of Hotel Shoreland apartments, still extra luxuries make living here most enjoyable. So each apartment is supplied with softened, filtered hot water—softer than rain water. For the skin and complexion this soft water has no rival. It gives foods cooked in it a tenderness and flavor unknown before. While only a detail, it is one of many features which have attracted Chicago's most notable clientele.

Now the Eatons Invade Films

By Rosalind Shaffer

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Charles Eaton, 17 year old comedian of "The Ghost Talks," is one of a family that is perhaps the most remarkable in the theatrical world. Charles is sufficiently accomplished to be noteworthy by himself, but when one considers that he is only one of seven children, all of whom are stage celebrities, he becomes even more an object of interest.

Mary Eaton, Doris Eaton, and Pearl Eaton are all well known as dancers. Joseph, a 20 year old brother, is a student at University of Pennsylvania, but his career was started when he was carried onto the stage as a prop infant. He intends to return at the end of his college career.

All In One Family.

Robert Eaton, the oldest brother, did stage work for years, but due to ill health was obliged to retire for a time and moved to Arizona. The eldest daughter, Evelyn, was in front of the footlights until her marriage. She has three children, two of whom are working in Hollywood. At the age of eleven, Edwin Mills, a son, is playing a role in the local production, "Courage," at the El Capitan, and a daughter, Evelyn, 3, who played the baby in the stage production of "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

Mary Eaton of Ziegfeld fame, is now under contract to work at Paramount. Pearl is staging all the dance numbers for the R-K-O production of "Rio Rita" for the talking screen. Doris probably will have a part in this. This last season Doris played a long run with Lupino Lane's musical revue at the Hollywood Music Box theater.

Getting back to Charles himself, after the breath taking luster of the sisters his career began at 3½, when he played the little fellah in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Next, in "Mother Carey's Chickens," he was Peter. In 1921 he was in the Ziegfeld Follies in a sketch as the Dauphin. He was in Marilyn Miller's "Peter Pan." A rôle in "The Naked Man" found him still on Broadway. "Don't Count Your Chickens," with Mary Boland as the star, provided another rôle. His last and most successful thing on Broadway was with Marguerite Churchill in "Skidding," a musical comedy. From this he came to Fox studio to work in movietone productions.

Far from the Footlights.

It is interesting to hear about the home life of this talented family and the diversions that were found for the children who were often for long periods out of touch with the everyday things that most children have in their lives.

A wise mother made every effort to see that the sane, normalizing things of childhood were provided for the odd hours of recreation that remained outside of the theater routine.

Charles and Joseph conceived the greatest interest in tin soldiers. The interest has stayed on as a hobby. After the family fortunes had been depleted to the extent of several hundred tin soldiers from Germany and France the two boys hit on the idea of getting molds and making their own.

Napoleon has been the idol of the two brothers, and rare volumes have been eagerly searched to get authentic detail on the costume of the various raiments used in the Napoleonic wars.

One bright morning when the Eatons were still living on Long Island, Joseph and Charles got up early and spent the day laying out the whole battle of Waterloo, with all the troops in authentic uniforms and in the positions as described by military books on Napoleon's campaigns.

Roland Young, stage actor working at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, spends his time between shots going over the manuscripts and proofs of his new book, soon to be published under the title, "Not for Children." It is a sophisticated book of animal cartoons with verses beneath.

Foolish Fish.

"Johnny," said the teacher reprovingly as he met an urchin carrying a string of fish one Sunday noon, "did you catch those fish?"

"Yo-es, sir," answered Johnny. "That's what they say for worms on Sunday."

His Answer.

Teacher: "That's correct; the sun does travel round the earth. Now, Johnny, does the earth travel round the sun?"

Johnny: "Trampe, ma'am."

And a Popular One.

Botany teacher: Is mistletoe a vine or a tree?

Wise youth: Neither; it's an excuse.

Pretty Tough.

Diner [trying to cut his steak]: "Say, waiter, how was this steak cooked?"

Waiter: "Smothered in onions."

Diner: "Well, it died hard."

Western Talkie, on O. Henry Story, Leads Month's Finest

By Mae Tinee.

aft. . . . The story told is of a boy who is a born band leader. He pants to get ahead, but is held back by fell circumstance until a girl who has struggled through the same brand of hard times he's bucking, and has landed on top, reaches out and gives him a hand. . . . The film is an altalker—full of music and good dialogue. You'll like it. You'll have to."

* *

"THE YOUNGER GENERATION" owes its story to Fannie Hurst and beats warmly with the human quality that characterizes everything she writes. It has, much action and pathos, very little humor, and is acted with great ability and feeling by every member of the cast . . . Isn't Jews are stuff, though you get the idea that it is from the title. . . . It is atmospheric and well staged and the direction is keen and sympathetic. . . . Story is of Jewish people who are drawn from the east side to Fifth avenue through the indefatigable efforts of their son Morris. It is a lonely life and a cruel one for Pa and Ma Goldfish and their daughter Birdie, whose hearts are with the old friends and old environment . . . synchronized throughout and talks effectively enough when it talks . . ."

And that is those.

REPORTS from Los Angeles say that concern is felt at coast studios over the talker development which was brought to a climax by the Fox move abandoning the making of silent films. It is expected that the development will be used as a lever to cut salaries. We are told that freelance directors, finding silent production waning, are accepting jobs with talkers at much reduced salaries.

EUGENE WALTER, playwright, is quoted thus: "Stage actresses will never steal the jobs of the ladies of the screen. Film stars needn't be worried about the talkies; they are better equipped for them than are nine-tenths of the big stage stars.

"Voices? Pooh! That's a matter of mechanics. Technique? Their technique is infinitely better for the screen, because it is screen technique. Presence? They have motion picture presence and, after all, talkies or silent, they're still motion pictures.

"I don't say stage actresses can't be successful in talking pictures. But I say that stage actresses, if they're successful, get into ruts. They play a part over and over and over, and finally they lose their own identities in the identities of their rôles. And they go on playing the part, off the stage and on, for years—sometimes forever.

"Movie women, on the other hand, make the rôle subsidiary to themselves. They play it once—and forget it. As a result they have naturalness, ease, freshness that makes them plastic and pliable material in the hands of an experienced stage director."

Mr. Walter is in Hollywood, writing talkies for Radio Pictures.

See you tomorrow.

William Slavens McNutt, magazine author, will write an original story for George Bancroft, Paramount star. Fanny Lea also is in Hollywood with an eye toward screen authoring.

As the Fox company is making plans for producing pictures abroad, radio will be tried as a routine means of communicating instructions and gathering

"Uncle Tom" Not True to Facts

Dear Miss Tinée: I went to see the latest edition of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and came away feeling highly indignant at the way that good old story has been distorted. If they were afraid of offending the south by telling facts, why put the picture on at all? It has been in pictures a couple of times before, anyway. It gets me riled when they change history to suit the box office.

Photographically the picture was interesting and the people played their parts well, although Eliza and her husband didn't look in the least like colored people. I might have liked it if I had not known that it was all wrong historically. I am in favor of putting history on the way it was, whether pleasing to anybody or not, or else letting it alone.

Sincerely yours, G. C. S.

Did She Do the Talking?

Dear Mae: A murder mystery, either in story form or in a show, is my weakness now, forever amen; so I hiked over the other day to find out who killed "The Canary." Well, I found out, all right, but I came out with a bigger mystery to solve.

Who does the talking for Louise Brooks? It was a "talkie," and the words came forth from the screen in pretty good shape from all the characters 'cept Louise. It was so apparent that some one else was talking for her that it kind of spoiled the performance.

What was the matter; did she have a bad cold, or was she born in Rusha? If I asked Philo he'd probably say it was the phonograph record; so I appeal to you to set me straight. Will yuh? Thanx,

"Short" Cummings.

Editor's note: O, you're so fussy! I thought Miss Brooks spoke for herself, "Short."

Full of Enthusiasm.

My dear Mae: I am angry this time. I spent my good money to see "The Doctor's Secret," and I never saw a worse picture! Probably because it was a "talkie," and I hate "talkies." The very next week, however, I saw "The Canary Murder Case," and enjoyed it greatly in spite of the talking.

I, too, thought "The Woman of Affairs" a fine film. Greta Garbo is certainly a wonderful actress, and I love Dorothy Sebastian, also. For heaven's sake, where has our Gilbert's acting gone? I never saw him look worse. I used to adore John Gilbert, but now—why won't he be again the lover I adored in "La Bohême" and "Bardelys the Magnificent"?

Mae, remember when I said I'd never adore an actor as I did "Rudy"? Alas, I did not know myself! One day along came Nils Asther, and I fell head over heels in love with him! I have not missed one of his pictures, and see most of them twice.

Just saw "Wild Orchids" and I must admit I was disappointed. I adore Nils! When I behold him I forget there is any one in the world but him! I adore him, not for his handsomeness alone, but for his glorious self! And he's as handsome as "Our Rudy" was, isn't he? Tell me, Mae, how long does he intend to stay in Europe?

Thank you loads for listening to me. I like your stars system greatly, but, O, give us the silent drama back again! I love it best! Rosebud.

Editor's Note—Guess we'll have to send Nils a cable to return. I love your enthusiasm, Rosebud!

Talkies Lack Action.

Dear Mae Tinée: At last I've discovered why I don't like the talkies. It's because of the lack of action—changing what might have been a great movie, considering the plot and chosen cast, into two hours of dialogue. And if you are sitting too far away or too high in the balcony, even the dialogue is stupid and muffled and sometimes impossible to understand.

They are apparently trying to make our movies exactly like stage productions, but it can't be done unless they employ actors of long stage experience who know how to make gestures and put expression into their voices at the same time without appearing awkward and "green." No doubt the producers are saving money on the scenery, since the actors stay in the same place for reels and reels, unraveling the plot by conversation instead of action.

Give me a nice, quiet "moving" movie, that will soothe my nerves rather than set them on edge, and I'll go to the theater when I want to hear and see, too." M. L.

Editor's Note—That the "legitimate" drama shall not vanish completely from the earth!

Worthy of a Constellation.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am disappointed in you . . . very, very much disappointed . . . for you only gave "In Old Arizona" four stars. I would have given it ten stars at least. S'nuff said.

Most sincerely,
Helen Lunde.

Best Movies

If you will tell us what movie, in your opinion, rates above all the others you've seen, and why this particular movie is deserving of praise, we'll pay $1 for your letter if we print it. Address Best Movies, Chicago Tribune.

It Was Different.

It is at least six years since I saw "To Have and to Hold," with Betty Compson and Bert Lytell, but I remember each scene more vividly than any modern picture. Their acting was flawless. The excitement and quick shifting from palace to pirate den was gracefully accomplished.

It was the most perfect movie version of a favorite story I have ever seen. And who could ever forget the wedding scene when Bert Lytell kidnaps the lovely Betty Compson? It was so human that I am sure it must have had an appeal for every one. I have felt ever since that a release of it would mean much more to the average movie lover than all the new pictures put together, for it had that most distinctive quality of being different. G. A. S.

An Old Timer.

In "Best Movies" I have not seen mentioned the romantic and beautiful production of Anthony Hope's "The Prisoner of Zenda," which to me is the greatest of all. Lewis Stone, Alice Terry, and Stuart Holmes were the principals, and we got our first glimpse of the dashing young hero who was later called Ramon Novarro, as well as a breath taking picture of that most beautiful of all women, Barbara La Marr.

Rex Ingram, the director, had not yet acquired the contempt for movies that spoiled his later efforts, and the whole story emerged as thrilling, lovely, and perfectly acted. I shall never forget Lewis Stone's farewell to Princess Flavia after he had restored his own double, the prince, to the throne.

Let's hope we may see it soon again. V. R.

Music Notes

"Sir: We who follow at a distance the remarks of the learned about contemporary music sometimes find ourselves baffled. Something seems to have been wished on you in a recent editorial. What in the name of unintelligibility is a fifugue?—I. HANDEL BRAHMS."

The music department desires to state that fifugues and comments thereon are wholly in the scope of its intellectual betters. Apparently the theme of a fifugue is derived from the meeting of a typographical error with a skull cavity. It is somewhat rare, because in the great majority of instances typographical errors make no impression other than to be understood as merely typographical errors. In the case where one is not so understood, the thump of meeting serves as a theme for a composition referring to musical instruments not found in any collection and adjectives not found in any dictionary. It is not entirely easy to understand, but from the fact that it starts with a typographical error, it is believed to be humorous in intent.

Thomas Loftus, baritone, will give a song recital at the Auditorium this afternoon for the benefit of the St. Francis Laymen's Retreat league of Chicago. He is well known here through his appearances in recital and over the radio. The league was founded by the late Francis Peabody some years ago and developed to the point of establishing a national record in 1928. While the retreats have been strictly for men, much interest in the league has been aroused among women, and the concert will provide for a social foregathering. A special appeal is made to wives and sisters of the retreants to assist in making the event a success. Ald. Albert J. Horan, P. J. J. McCarthy and John Schmidt, treasurer of the league, will be in charge of the concert.

John McCormack is just back from Europe, telling among other things that he is considering proposals to appear in sound movies. No definite arrangements have been made, but he admits he is interested.

Twelve years ago next Sunday Juliette Lippe made her debut at the Majestic theater as a singer in vaudeville. A few weeks ago she was one of the important figures in the German Grand Opera company at the Auditorium. Next Sunday she will celebrate the anniversary of her debut with a recital, her first in Chicago, at the Studebaker.

Philip Manuel and Gavin Williamson call attention to the fact that their recital this afternoon at the Studebaker will be entirely upon harpsichords. With the assistance of Marguerite Davies and a string quartet they will play a program by Johann Sebastian Bach and his three songs written for two and three harpsichords. The instruments were made in Paris and it is promised that they are faithful facsimiles of those used by the Bach family.

Elly Ney, the pianist, has been initiated as a national honorary member of the musical sorority, Sigma Alpha Iota.

SOUBRETTE

MISS BOBBE ARNST

She's in "Rosalie," acting the rôle of a hot-headed and jealous girl whose value to the plot is to make matters worse for the West Point chap acted by Jack Donahue. Miss Arnst is remembered as a contributor of songs and dances to the first issue of Le Maire's Affairs, in 1926, in the Woods.

By Fanny Butcher.

IN NEW YORK.

THE revival of Stephen Phillips' "Paolo and Francesca" by Jane Cowl recalls one of the literary sensations of the latter part of the mauve decade. The play, a retelling in sonorous verse of the Dante story of the two lovers, took the world by storm.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS.

The author was a young man, just about 30, who had been on the stage since his eighteenth year, and to the glamour of the play was added the glamour of the life of the playwright. The slim little book which the play was made into found its way first onto the reading tables of all of the cognoscenti, and then quite suddenly it was an international touchstone to culture. Little groups of serious thinkers, literary and culture clubs read it aloud, and the name of Stephen Phillips echoed wherever poetry or the drama was discussed.

But such is fame that nowadays, although he is, according to statistics, only 61 years of age, nobody seems to know even whether he is still alive or not.

The second revival of the week was "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh," one of Mrs. Fiske's most celebrated rôles. It was published in 1917, and armchair playgoers may, with effort, dig it from the archives and be present vicariously at the performance, if they have ever once seen Mrs. Fiske, for, despite the fact that she is one of our finest actresses, she is always and in every rôle Minnie Maddern Fiske.

A third revival, "Under the Gaslight," one of the most palpable of all of the famous Augustin Daly hits, is not in print for armchair playgoers to immerse themselves in, but any history of the American theater gives it its due of popularity.

With the revival business so golden, it seems to me that producers are missing a real chance to shovel up shekels by passing by a play called "Blue Jeans," which I remember being taken to as a child, and which, I have found, is the one melodrama that every one who ever saw a blood and thunder piece remembers. There was a moment when the hero, strapped to a plank, was inch by inch approaching the buzz saw and death was so hovering in the theater that the whole audience cried out to a man, woman, and child. That moment was one of the great ones of melodramatic history. Maybe somebody will do "Blue Jeans" for an avid public.

A dramatization of Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Suicide Club," after a tryout on the road, which was reported in this column, has opened in New York under the name of "Mystery Square." It is one of R. L. S.'s most ingenious yarns.

PUBLISHED

Volume IX. of the collected dramatic works of Gerhart Hauptmann in translation is just off the press. It contains the complete text of "Florian Geyer" and "Veland," both of them historic and legendary dramas.

Like other historical dramatists, Hauptmann chooses as his hero a person who in actual life played a minor part in the drama of the moment—in the case of "Florian Geyer" the moment was the so-called peasants' war of 1522-'25, beginning in southern Swabia. The language of the original has been preserved as nearly as possible by the translator, Bayard Quincy Morgan—a language racy, vulgar and roistering. The play is not a great stage play, the translator vouchsafes, "but it is a stirring drama of human endeavor and misguided effort."

"Veland," translated by Edwin Muir, is a drama of ancient times in ringing blank verse.

"Little Plays from Greek Myths," by Marie Oller and Eloise K. Dawley, teachers of English in the Washington Irving High school, New York, are dramatizations of Greek myths which they as teachers have found extremely effective in vivifying the subject to children. The playlets have had successful production in their own classes, and the collaborators recommend them to other teachers and to groups of children working alone, for they are all short, require practically no preparation either in scenery or costumes, and do give the young audiences the flavor of the Greek myths.

Is it true?

Ask your doctor these questions

MUCH has been said about social diseases. Most of it has been rather terrifying in its nature. Some of it perhaps has seemed exaggerated. Therefore to establish a better understanding of the true nature of these diseases—ask your doctor these questions:

IS IT TRUE that a social disease is one of the greatest contributing factors to ill health? . . . IS IT TRUE that a social disease may be the obscure cause of puzzling ailments? . . . IS IT TRUE that a social disease shortens life and often leads to partial or complete disability? . . . IS IT TRUE that a social disease is the second greatest cause of heart disease? . . . IS IT TRUE that a social disease is often the cause of insanity, paralysis, skin eruptions, blindness, dangerous operations to women, and childless marriages? . . . IS IT TRUE that a social disease is directly and indirectly the cause of more deaths than any other disease? . . . IS IT TRUE that a social disease can be contracted and exist without the knowledge of the individual? . . . IS IT TRUE that no medical examination is complete without blood and other laboratory tests for social disease? . . . IS IT TRUE that the earlier a social disease is diagnosed and treatments started the more readily it can be cured?

Your doctor's replies to these questions will bring to light important facts about social diseases that every man and woman should know. The Public Health Institute was organized to help check the spread of social diseases. To date 141,545 individual examinations have been made—2,693,846 treatments given and over 2,000 patients cared for in a single day. Thirty-four registered physicians and every modern facility are required to provide this reliable medical service. Operated not for profit the fees are within the reach of all. Treatments are available even to those without immediate funds.

The Public Health Institute has three separate clinics in Chicago. The Departments for Men are located at 159 North Dearborn Street—just North of Randolph and 129 East Thirty-first Street—Corner of Indiana Avenue.

The Department for Women and Children is located at 72 East Randolph Street (2nd floor) between Wabash and Michigan Avenues—All Clinic Hours, 10 A. M. to 8 P. M. Daily Except Sunday. Phone Central 9383.

Golden Flood of Booze Money Makes Czars, Befouls Chicago

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

to move on was especially active. Capone met it with the announcement that he would fight in the Supreme court of the United States any legal action to drive him from Miami, using, as a basis for his legal action, his constitutional right to live where he pleased.

When he was out of doors in Miami at that time he would hide his face with hat or handkerchief whenever the cry, "Cover up," was raised by his bodyguards. On one of those occasions the bodyguards caught a glimpse of a camera man nearly concealed by a pillar of the court house whither Capone was bound. "Cover up," they shouted. Capone covered, but other camera men stationed opposite the court house snapped him just as he did so. The photograph thus made is an eloquent exhibit in the gallery of roguery, for it shows with a great deal of squalid insistence that easy money buys no ticket to peace of mind.

The World Puzzles Capone.

Capone cannot understand the world. He cannot understand why the law should consider him a menace to society nor why even a community usually so flexible as Los Angeles is should have told him in the winter of 1927, when he was having a playtime there, that his room was preferable to his company.

Capone puts it thus:

"All I've ever done is to supply a public demand.

"Laugh this off: When the United States went more or less dry, there were 7,000 saloons in Chicago, and the town and its suburbs spent something like $70,000,000 a year for beer and liquor. And it votes wet five to one.

"Well, you can't cure a thirst by law.

"They call Al Capone a bootlegger. Yes, it's bootleg while it's on the trucks, but when your host at the club, in the locker room, or on the Gold Coast hands it to you on a silver tray, it's hospitality.

"What's Al Capone done, then? He's supplied a legitimate demand. Some call it bootlegging. Some call it racketeering. I call it a business. They say I violate the prohibition law. Who doesn't?"

Capone's Subtle System.

Capone's operations have been vast and his gains commensurate. He carried on with increased efficiency Johnny Torrio's diabolical work of transforming prairie villages around Chicago into vice and booze centers. He did it, not by fighting his way into the home areas, but by bribing home owners. His scouts and spies got the lay of the land for him. They found out whether struggling Mr. A's bungalow was mortgaged. They noted that Mr. B's little place would be much improved by a stone sidewalk. They learned somehow that Mr. C's furnace was burned out. And they observed that Mr. D's car was a rattle trap.

Through leisurely, neighborly conversations, nice feeling was established between the residents and the interlopers. The new roadhouse which would bring a lot of money into the town was spoken of. Every assurance was given that it would be an orderly, first class place.

"We don't want any trouble," the scouts, who were personable men, would say. "We want to be good neighbors. By the way, your place is a near ours that we want to send a contractor over and have him lay a cement walk in front of your house. Don't mention it. It's an improvement that will only add to the value of our investment."

How to Get a New Furnace.

A householder who scented easy money in the wind, and who did not too readily agree to be "a good neighbor," could get his mortgage paid off. A new furnace, a new roof, or a new car was the price others received for not protesting to the village authorities against the new roadhouse.

Capone's slogan was, "We don't want any trouble." For a few thousand dollars, tactfully spent among worried householders, he turned decent suburbs into bagnio suburbs before the householders realized with how destructive a fire they had been playing.

One village awoke to its infamy and had the gumption to fight fire with fire. In Forestview, which had come to be known as Caponeville, vigilantes took charge of the situation. In the panic that followed Assistant State's Attorney McSwiggin's murder, of which Capone's gang was suspected, Capone's Forestview vice resort, which was called the Stockade, was closed until the storm of public indignation should subside. But the residents decided to make the closing permanent, and not to trust to injunctions, for they knew Capone had smarter lawyers than they could hire.

Vigilantes to the Fore.

So, on the morning of May 30, 1926, three automobiles filled with vigilantes drove up to the Stockade, overpowered the only occupant, a colored watchman, and in a few minutes had set fire to a dozen rooms on both floors of the frame building. The Berwyn fire department was called, but the firemen were not interested. They merely stood by and protected other property from the flames. As to turning streams on the Stockade, they said there was no water handy. Bar, slot machines, and thirty-five bedrooms of the den all went aloft. The police said no attempt would be made to find the vigilantes and that they wished them well in any future efforts they might undertake along the same lines.

To such anarchic conditions had Al Capone reduced whole areas surrounding Chicago. Law abiding people were thankful to be protected by forces outside the law.

The Stockade had done a business in vice of $100,000 a month, and it was only one of Capone's vicious enterprises.

Killers Are Expensive Keep.

Although Capone's profits have been enormous, his expenses are heavy.

Scores of his henchmen are always looking to him for new ways into easy money and for some way out of trouble. A suspected killer must be gotten out of jail. Another, who has escaped arrest in Chicago, must be transferred to a safe hiding place in another city.

He himself frequently has had to be sidestepping subpoenaes and obtaining postponements. The lawyers who will handle the affairs of such a client take every advantage of him. They know he has ready money and that when he is in difficulties the difficulties are desperate. Hence he pays handsomely for the immunities whitch legal chicanery is able to obtain for him.

Besides, the man is crazily extravagant. He is paying some attention to the safeguarding of his health now, but in the days—or nights—when he was flying high he would enter a flashy café with his crew and own the place for the night. Sometimes as many as two hundred hoodlums would be in on "the party" and the tabs for the night would come to $5,000.

Capone likes that sort of thing. He thinks it is "the life." Judges and state senators and the grosser type of municipal officeholders and political hangers-on would be brought up to meet him. Capone would feel that he really was "big business," and would order more champagne.

Capone the Biggest Boob.

"As a matter of fact," said an observer who has watched his performances with amused eyes for four years, "Al is really a bigger boob than any small towner who comes in from the sticks to do Chicago in one night."

And once, when he was in a leaden mood of disgust with himself, Capone told his friend and my friend, Al Lingle, that he had fooled away $7,500,000 since he came to Chicago about eight years ago. Mr. Lingle believed him and I believe Mr. Lingle.

Like most of his kind, Capone is the complete gull of the bookmakers.

"I have," he said in 1927, "lost $1,500,000 on the horses and on dice in the last two years. And the funny part of it is, I still like 'em and if some one handed me another million I'd put it right on the nose of some horse that looked good to me."

With the Bag Over His Head.

He is said to have won $600,000 within a few days at one race meeting, but he wound up "with the bag over his head," as the saying is. He could not beat the game and at the finish he owed the bookmakers $200,000, every cent of which he is said to have paid. That is declared to be characteristic of him. In sportdom they call him "a square shooter" and say: "If he gives you his word you can believe him."

Once, when the deadly reprisals of boozedom had reduced the gangsters themselves to abject terror, there was talk of a peace. Gangsters who had been fighting Capone said they would agree to a peace if he would first consent to the extermination of two killers whom they denounced as double-crossers. The doomed men were to be "put on the spot"; that is, led into an ambuscade by supposed friends and there shot down.

Here Even Capone Revolted.

"No," said Capone. "I wouldn't do that to a yellow dog."

When, in the bright noonday of Sept. 20, 1926, the front of the Hawthorne hotel in Cicero, where Capone then had his headquarters, was swept by machine gun fire from moving automobiles and a woman was wounded in the eye, Capone is said to have paid specialists $5,000 for her treatment and for her care during recovery. "The Big Fellow," said one of his henchmen, "never wants any innocent bystanders hurt."

This attempt on Capone's life demands particular attention because it involves killers who fell in the St. Valentine's day massacre of this year and because it reveals the horrible inevitableness of the sequences of boozedom's crimes.

The police theory of the Hawthorne hotel outrage was that it was retaliation for an attempt made more than a month before by the Capone gang on the life of Vincent Drucci, one of the leaders of the old Dean O'Banion gang. It later became the Hymie Weiss gang, and its shattered remnants now are the "Bugs" Moran gang.

Following their speculations on the reason for the Hawthorne hotel attempt the police arrested "Bugs" Moran and Frank Gusenberg. Nothing came of those arrests and there were no prosecutions. But the significant fact is that among the seven slain in the St. Valentine's day massacre were Frank and Peter Gusenberg. All through the history of the O'Banion gang, whether it was flourishing under O'Banion himself or under Weiss or under Moran, the Gusenberg brothers were conspicuous figures in it. They and their co-criminals were deadly enemies of Capone. Always they were trying to muscle in on his territory. The police believe they tried more than once to kill him. And so, what is more natural, the police continue, than that Capone gangsters should finally have taken in hand the extermination of the Gusenbergs?

A Gangster's Fragile Health.

That is why the authorities were anxious to examine Capone immediately after the St. Valentine's day horror. But that could not be, for Capone, with an airiness as comic in a way as it was exasperating in all ways, said that his delicate health would not permit him to face the March rigors of Chicago. He would come from Florida when the weather moderated. And the courts acquiesced!

How long will these murderous reprisals and counter reprisals go on? Nobody knows.

Moran, now Capone's most menacing enemy, is actively brutal. Capone, although he has betrayed decent impulses, is icily pitiless when business is in hand. He is not accustomed to being balked. Once, when hell was popping and Capone was working fast over the nine telephones in his steel shuttered headquarters, he said to one of his clerks: "Get me Judge ——."

When the judge responded over the wire, Capone, naming an officer of the law, said: "'I thought I told you to dismiss that fellow."

* *

A Judge Gets His Orders.

There was a click and clatter of reply and then Capone said:

"Forgot it? Well, don't forget it again!"

There is your super-gangster at work.

How long will he continue to work and to be immune?

Examine, if you will, this brief recapitulation of the multitude of facts which has been given in these ten chapters on the rise and the crimes of gangdom and then make up your own mind:

There are more than 3,000,000 persons in Chicago. Ninety per cent of them break the prohibition law in some way. They make moonshine, or buy it, or drink it, or transport it, or see it used without performing their duty by reporting such infractions.

They would consider themselves contemptible snoopers if they did report infractions.

Gold! Endless Gold!

Their actions and their attitude create a golden market for a product which is in general demand and very costly, but which is illegal.

It is illegal, but not one person in 10,000 will inform the authorities or otherwise assist in enforcing the law. Thus the trade in booze becomes the most highly competitive the world has ever known, because it is the most highly profitable.

Man always fights to protect his property. Booze profits have risen to sums almost unbelievable. Honest men will buy the stuff and maintain the trade, but they will have nothing to do with the traffic as participants in the profits. Thus the trade is carried on by the most vicious of men.

And these most vicious of men protect their trade and their profits by the most vicious of methods—by bribery and murder.

Bribes for One and All.

Into this golden market comes Johnny Torrio, former New York gangster. He quickly comprehends the possibilities. He gathers about him the key scoundrels of the community. They enter the wholesale alcohol trade. They protect their traffic by bribing politicians, prohibition agents, officials, police—every one who may contribute to the continuance of their business.

That was the beginning. The desperadoes gathered by Torrio became ambitious on their own account. They gathered their own satellites, whom they supported in return for their vassalage.

The structure of gangdom thus became a grim travesty on the feudal system.

The original Torrio gang split up into north side, west side, and south side-Cicero gangs. North side was O'Banion and his men; west side was Druggan and Lake and the Gennas; south side was Torrio and his successor, Capone.

They are all rich. They give $100 bills to waiters, drive expensive cars, keep women, attend first nights in evening clothes, and coarsely ape the manners of the rich.

They develop insensate jealousies and hatreds. They are all bribing politicians and thus maintain entrée into officialdom.

Gangdom at Daggers Drawn.

But, to be valuable, this prestige must be restricted. Hence each gang loathes the thought that another gang can obtain favors from officialdom. Therefore they encroach upon one another's territory, steal one another's customers, and lure away one another's police captains and ward committeemen with higher and higher bribes.

These rivalries and double crossings lead to most foul murders.

At first minor gangsters were murdered at the behest of "the big shots." In reprisal, the big shots themselves were struck down.

For nearly a decade this has gone on.

Torrio, scarred for life—and scared for life—is supposed to have fled into exile. O'Banion, Weiss, three of the Gennas, Drucci, Esposito, and Lombardo—to name only a few of the big shots—have been killed.

Capone lives on in luxury.

He lives on because—surrounded by Italian gunmen who are little known, since they are kept out of the limelight—he is scrupulously guarded and because his killers have exterminated most of his rivals.

* *

And Chicago Pays—and Pays.

Meanwhile Chicago stands bedraggled and mocked at before the world. As Daniel Defoe wrote long ago in "The True-Born Englishman":

We have been Europe's sink, the jakes where she Voids all her offal outcast progeny.

(THE END.)

Al Capone, who enjoys practical dictatorship in Chicago's bootleg realms, but whose constant refrain is: "I'm out of the booze racket and wish the papers would let me alone." [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Proving —?

Wilson Mizner went into a Hollywood studio and presented a piece of paper with about seventy-five words written on it. An executive read it.

"What is it?" the movie-king asked.

"It's a picture," said Mr. Mizner.

The executive read it again, and scratched his head. Then he handed it back. "No picture in that."

"Good-by!" said Mr. Mizner, taking the paper and starting for the door with his manuscript and his hauteur. At the door he paused. "You're sure there's nothing in it?"

"Not a thing!"

Mizner shrew a pitying glance at the executive. "That's funny! It's a play that ran on Broadway for more than a year. It's 'The Deep Purple.'"

YOUNG LAKE FORESTERS ON FIRST RIDE OF THE SEASON.

STOPPING AT THE DES PLAINES RIVER BANK.

NARCISSA THORNE.
[TRIBUNE Photos.]

The riding season for the younger set in Lake Forest began on Wednesday with a ride and a barbecue picnic lunch out on the Des Plaines river. The youngsters who went on the ride included Peggy Clow, Jane Brooks, Noyes McLennan, Tom and Greeley Wells, Van Bunting, Albert B. Dick III., Narcissa Thorne, and Joe Mead. The boys had a spirited leap frog game and a pie-eating contest.

Why Hasten? Ask Laborers in Leisureland

McAndrew Finds Even Trolleys Resting.

(This is the third of a series of letters by William McAndrew, former superintendent of the Chicago public schools, on the quaintness and color of southern France. The fourth letter will appear next Sunday.)

By William McAndrew.

THE fountains of Visouryant, or Smilingtown, waste no stone in labored ornament. A Roman column is rescued from some ruin, is bored from the bottom to a convenient distance, fitted with a spout, and set up in a stone basin. A marble shelf makes a rest for whatever vessel is to be filled, and a conduit is laid to carry the overflow to the edge of the hill. A few plain trees are planted around, an old vine is trained over a doorway, and the artistic sense is gratified.

Some bureau of the government sent here a cannon which has seen real service. Where is it? Go through the little arched street at the back of the city hall; look over the low fence at a dump heap. There is your cannon. I do not know what he would think of this—that congressman from Beloit or Rockford, who begs a great gun from the war department and sets it in the middle of a pleasure park. One cannot understand why we, more than all the so-called warlike nations, try to persuade ourselves that a piece of ordnance ornaments a courthouse or a city hall.

Back of the city hall.

We Visouryantois are fond of giving our streets illustrious names. The Rue Jules Cesar can be crossed at one jump. I can stand in the middle of General Boulanger street and touch the walls on both sides with my hands. Victor Hugo, Clemenceau, Daudet, Lamartine—a whole dictionary of French biography—are commemorated in our little town. More than that, to keep your education from business, some of the neat blue street signs add a helpful title: "Rue Bizet, the musician"; "Avenue Pierre Puget, sculpteur."

We have a Fourth of September street. Every French town that is up to date has one. But I have seen no subtitle telling what happened on this day. I asked our intelligent townsman, who sells books. He doesn't know. We have many more names than we have thoroughfares. That doesn't deter us. We chop off a little piece of a street and give it a new name if we wish to compliment any one.

Palm Beach Plans Sporty Golf Course on 170 Acres

PALM BEACH, Fla., April 6.—[Special.]—Ere another season rolls around, the Palm Beach-going Chicagoan, if he lives up to the social plans and specifications, will find a new pleasure ground prepared for him here with enough of his fellow townsmen on hand to make things sociable.

Chicago folk who rate as members of the permanent colony have been as instrumental as others in organization of the great Seminole Golf club, designed to be quite the smartest thing of its kind to be found anywhere. The club has just bought a 170 acre tract fronting the Atlantic for 2,600 feet, nine miles north of here, and Martin Sweeny, secretary and treasurer of the organization, says half a million dollars will be spent on its development this summer. The golf course will be one of the sportiest in all America, and of course there will be the clubhouse, the pools and the tennis courts.

Officers and members of the exclusive Bath and Tennis club, the Gulf Stream Golf, Everglades and Sailfish clubs, such as Edward F. Hutton, Jay F. Carlisle, and Mr. Sweeny are among the organizers.

Dartmouth Musical Clubs Give Concert Tomorrow

By Mildred Jaklon.

IF WE must label the respective periods of the year for social purposes, I should think 'easy going would be an apt characteristic to apply to this particular phase of the yearly cycle. There is not the strenuous, constant entertaining, the sort of high pressure sociability that features fall and the early winter. Charitable and civic organizations have expended their energies as best they could through the winter months, and are now holding annual meetings and making plans for the future.

There is some gayety, to be sure, but of a more leisurely order than that which characterizes the height of the season. This absence of tension is partly due, perhaps, to the fact that the most active participants in the winter's social work and pleasure have been away for recreation and sunlight.

The exigencies and problems of everyday social contacts and duties are bound to seem more easily soluble after a session of outdoor riding life in Arizona, or weeks of baking in the sun on Floridan beaches, and a more peaceful aspect pervades the social routine. It seems to be quite a bit more civilized than the hectic flying from place to place that obtains in

Paris Mourns the Passing of a Beloved Ambassador

By May Birkhead.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 6.—The sudden death of the American ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, coming near the Easter dispersal cast a deep gloom, not only over the American colony here, but also among his numerous French friends. The late Mr. Herrick held a unique place in the life of Paris. He was as much sought for his personal charm and genius for friendship as for his position as official representative of the United States.

He numbered among his ardent admirers the élite, perhaps without exception, of the French capital. A few years ago during a moment of uneasy tension of Franco-American relations his personal position remained secure. During the last few years, despite acute physical suffering, he never spared himself and was always a smiling figure at the hundreds of gatherings which his rank made him participate in.

Close Friend of Notables.

Mr. Herrick was among the closest friends of the late Marshal Ferdinand Foch, the present premier, Raymond Poincaré, and Aristide Briand, French foreign minister. Her personal relations with them far transcended his position as American ambassador. His every pronouncement was widely chronicled in the French press, and he constantly referred to his great friend, France.

No one ever forgot here how he remained at the embassy during the dark days of September, 1914, preceding the battle of the Marne, when the French government itself retired to Bordeaux. One needs to know how deeply the French respond to a great and significant gesture to realise just what this mean at that anxious time.

Mr. Herrick has often been referred to as the best loved American envoy to France since Benjamin Franklin. His term of office was also longer than that of any of his predecessors, as Franklin was here on a special mission and held the post of American minister for only a short time. Thomas Jefferson was his country's representative for only four years. Mr. Herrick's two terms totaled almost 11 years.

Leader of American Colony.

Along with his winning personality, which made him persona grata to the French, the late ambassador was to an exceptional degree leader as well

By Mme. X.

AT the moment of this writing the X. family is en route to southern California, passing, in fact, through Kansas. These broad, flat, uninteresting fields are just the sort of setting from which would have sprung such a movement as that which eventually produced the eighteenth amendment, for it is out of Kansas that some of the original advocates of the dry law came.

If I'd grown up in the monotonous surroundings that beset the Kansans I'd want to go out and raise a row somewhere else, and try to boss my kind, living in more attractive places so as to get even with them. I'd deprive them of anything they especially cherished, whether it were rum, or chewing gum, or even just cream in their coffee.

A soft green tone is growing over the Kansas trees. Fields are green in spite of a mean sky. If it weren't for that eighteenth amendment I'd say that a sweet and distant trill was a meadow lark. In short, could I but bring myself to do it, I'd announce the arrival here of that loveliest of the four seasons, spring, gentle spring. Let it go at that, friends.

Strange State of Affairs.

Apropos of these animadversions is a little pamphlet from the pen of Pierre S. Du Pont, chairman of the famous Du Pont de Nemours & Co., in which he sets out with the statement that "Not once in any one of the United States during the last eighty years has it been proposed to forbid the use of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes." The manufacture, transportation, sale have all been forbidden but never the drinking of it. It is as if you forbade the manufacture, sale or transportation of a fire arm, but never forbade murder. Mr. Du Pont's little brochure is interesting reading, especially in Kansas, on a long, quiet, sunny afternoon.

By the way, the vice president of these U. S. A. comes from this same "corn fed Kansas." From a recent visitor to Washington I hear of complications and troubles caused there to the controllers of precedence and social usages by the claims made by the Vice President's sister, Mrs. Gann, who, as she is a widower, presides at his entertainments and demands there and elsewhere a foremost position, one second only to that of Mrs. Hoover. To the dweller in the wild and woolly west these questions seem puerile and of small import, but in Washington they loom big and black.

Nor is this the only problem that is agitating the social element there. It is murmured that the question as to the widespread drouth that threatens the Washington hostesses nowadays may drive some of the most active and important of them to wetter climes. This would be a real misfortune, as there are many houses there that give a brilliant glamor to life which makes Washington a goal for many clever, worthwhile folk.

Buys New House.

Congressman Britten, who represents us at the national capital, has lately bought a handsome new house there. It is next to that of the Egyptian embassy on Sheridan circle. At the Egyptian and Cuban embassies on Friday afternoons [Fridays being the diplomatic reception days] there is always dancing, and cocktails are served as well as tea.

The Prince de Lignes, Belgian ambassador, and his wife are among the most popular of the foreigners stationed at Washington, and this is not because of a great two and a half foot bottle of finest liqueur, 100 years old, that he yearly sent them as a Christmas gift, though it is safe to say that this does not detract from their charms. [I'm still riding through Kansas.]

The Robert Lamonts, with their debutante daughter, are considered a great addition to Washington's social circles, and much is expected of them in the way of entertaining. An old friend of Chicago occupies a conspicuous place there, namely that good looking young Serbian, Bojidar Pourlitch, who once danced attention here on charming Mary Landon Baker. He is now married to a most attractive young fellow countrywoman of his, a daughter of one of Serbia's most distinguished statesmen. She is described as being blonde and petite and animated, altogether very much of a personage. They have a six weeks old son, and are planning to visit Chicago this spring. It will be interesting to see our cavalier of former days as a husband and father. He is charge d'affaires at the Serbian legation in Washington, and he and his wife and child are living at the Serbian, or rather I should call it, the Jugo-Slavian legation, on 16th street.

Interesting Rumor.

Another intriguing personality there just now is said to be an Italian sent to sound the way for a proposed visit from Benito Mussolini, il duce himself. It seems that he is desirous of coming to see for himself this country that represents everything he is trying to exterminate in Italy. Is there any way that he could be put in charge of the task of cleaning up our local gangland? He was, if report be true, most successful a few years ago in a similar task in Sicily. It is certainly to be hoped that he will visit the Tribune Tower. It might help straighten out any little misunderstanding such as was suspected between us a few years ago.

The inaugural ball at Washington on March 4, organized chiefly by Mrs. John Allen Dougherty, cleared the pretty sum of $40,000 for the Washington charities. If you, my readers, would why so much about the national capital in this Chicago column, and if the story seems dry, remember that I am at the moment traveling through Kansas, and Kansas is very, O very dry.

Merely a Little Cooing.

My friend, Arthur Aldis, a successful parent and still more able grandparent, took exception to a recent diatribe of mine on the subject of the rowdy manners of the young at a Goodman theater matinee. To him those roars and catcalls were but the coolings of little doves. As he knows much more about rearing the young than I do, I hereby grant him this publicity, and hope that the young attendants at the Goodman theater, and at the Junior league Saturday morning plays will moderate their clamor before they become an integral part of more mature audiences. Otherwise, they won't be an asset to them.

My disquisition must have gone eastward, for in my office mail I find an invitation to join the Parents League of New York City, and I, a childless Chicago female, am given the opportunity of paying Mrs. Schuyler Schieffelin of Gotham five dollars, to be applied, I think, to bettering the manners of the youngsters of New York. These New York parents have apparently banded themselves together the better to be able to exercise a measure of control over their offspring not otherwise easy.

It is an excellent idea if the postulate be accepted that a parent is not capable alone of exercising due control over the child for its own good. Studying the pamphlet sent me, I find that the chief things to be effected by this union of anxious, solicitious elders is that the children shall not see undesirable plays and shall secure those early to bed hours without which they may suffer in bodily and spiritual health. These objects, excellent in themselves, seem somewhat superficial and like the many laws attempting to control the liquor business. If the children are taught obedience and the imperative nature of duty, these other rules will be accepted as a matter of course. If the millions of dollars spent on enforcing the 18th amendment were devoted to a wide-spread instruction as to the pernicious results of over indulgence in alcohol there would be little need of our present unenforceable regulations.

But here I am in New Mexico, having left Kansas far to the east. Red earth continually breaks through the thin covering of motheaten sage grass. Distant mountains are covered with tattered blankets of snow. A few stunted pines look black and unkempt. But the air is crisp and the sun touches us with warm fingers. God bless New Mexico!

Chicagoans En Route.

On the train besides the entire X. family are Mr. and Mrs. George M. Reynolds, Mrs. Clyde Carr and Adolph Bosetti, first violin of the Elonzaley quartet. The latter institution, by the way, is no longer existing. It gave its last concert a month or so ago and then dissolved into memory. Why this was done, I don't know.

Mrs. Carr is going to La Jolla to be with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Blanchard, who make their home in that delightful retreat for those in search of natural beauty, fine, all the year round climate and pleasant living conditions. All of these desirable things are provided by the little village of La Jolla. The name means in Spanish "the jewel." It is fourteen miles north of San Diego and a day's ride from Los Angeles. Mrs. Carr and her relatives are planning to motor across the desert via Palm Springs, the San Bernadino valley, and thence to the Grand Canon, where she will take the train back to Chicago, arriving about April 30.

Among the Chicagoans who, as far as this pillar of polite piffle knows, are still lingering in southern California are the John V. Farwells, the Charles Hamills, and the Charles L. Strobels, all of whom have been sojourning at that delightful hostelry, the Casa di Manana, at La Jolla. Further north at Santa Barbara the Wolcott Blairs at this particular moment should be packing up their belongings preparatory to their return to Chicago. For the last five weeks they have been occupying Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson's lovely house, El Cerrito, on a hillside at Montecito, Santa Barbara's most fashionable suburb. The young Blairs expect to spend the coming summer in Europe. The Ryerson house overlooking the bland Pacific ocean will not long stay empty, as the Joseph T. Ryersons are soon bringing their four children out there for the summer.

A Western Lido.

Those who know Santa Barbara best declare that its most desirable season is from June to October. Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is planning to be there this summer. She has many friends there and spends her days out on the beach together with most of the people of that region. Gay tents are put up and many colored cushions and rugs give color to the golden sands. People live all day long in their bathing suits, as they do at the Lido near Venice, Italy's most fashionable summer resort. Day after day the sun shines without stint after the morning mists, which fade away by 10 o'clock. You count on fine weather for a picnic weeks ahead of any date.

Lake Forest is going to miss three gay young couples this coming summer. These are the Farwell Winstons, the Charles Cushings, and the Earle Reynolds, a cheerful sextet that is soon to invade Europe.

Europe is claiming many of our citizens just now. Mrs. J. M. Patterson and Mrs. Edward Harris Brewer sailed last night on the Olympic with Greece as their southernmost destination. Italy, Spain, and France are also on their itinerary. As they expect to be back again in Chicago before the middle of June, theirs will be a hasty trip, with not much dallying in any one place.

Discomforts of Europe.

Her many friends will be sorry to hear that Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, now in Florence, has not been at all well since she sailed for Europe late in January. The unusually cold winter gave her a severe cold, added to which she had other equally serious maladies that sometimes overtake Americans traveling abroad. We Americans live under a system of hygienic precautions and care utterly unkown in Europe. Our food is handled in a more cleanly fashion; the milk we use is sterilized; our water supply is protected, and the materials used in our cooking are much better than anything to be had in even the best foreign hotels.

The result of this is that we easily fall victims to the less carefully prepared food supplies of alien regions. Especially is this the case with people no longer in their prime and with their powers of resistance weakened by old Father Time.

We don't realize how extremely comfortable life is made for us. We never know what it is to feel really cold, while even European kings and queens sitting luxuriously in their palaces are not infrequently unable to get really warmed through. An open grate fire is no subestitute for a nice, blazing hot furnace.

Mrs. McBirney's daughter, Mrs. Henry J. Stimson, and the latter's three children will be with her at her Lake Forest place, House of the Four Winds, this coming summer. Mr. Stimson is namesake and nephew of the present secretary of state at Washington. There is, by the way, just now going on there a great scramble for country houses near there for the next few months, as a protracted summer session of congress is expected in which the President's policy for the next few years will be worked out.

the winter months, and Chicago is a pleasant place to be in, just now.

Dartmouth Affair.

The week's events are varied in interest and intent. The Dartmouth college musical clubs' concert and dance is to take place tomorrow evening in the gold ballroom of the Congress hotel, under the auspices of the Dartmouth Alumni Association of Chicago. The special committee making the arrangements includes Horton Conrad, chairman; Robert C. Borwell, vice chairman; Warren D. Bruner, W. R. Abbott Jr., R. G. Gunthorp, Frank S. Coffin, J. B. Campbell, W. F. Juergens Jr., and Charles M. French who is managing the ticket sale.

Also tomorrow is a meeting of the 42d and 43d ward branch of the Woman's City club to be held at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Herbert F. Perkins at 3 Banks street, when Thomas Tallmadge is to speak on "Architecture in Chicago." The Forum of the League of Women Voters is sponsoring a benefit performance of "The Critic" at the Goodman theater in the evening.

Lecture on Painting.

The Junior Friends of Art, that youthful and enthusiastic group who are so avid to learn more about the arts, is to meet on Tuesday afternoon at the studio of Baroness Violet Beatrice Wenner, who is to speak on "Portrait Painting and Its Relation to Present and Former Times," and who will also play harp selections.

An event of great interest on the south side is the annual bridge party given by the Alumnae of the Faulkner School for Girls for the benefit of Fellowship house, to take place at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Shoreland hotel. Fellowship house is a settlement on 33d place just west of Halsted street.

The committee includes Mrs. Charles Macaulay, Mrs. Robert C. Woellner, Mrs. Robert G. Warfield, Mrs. Alan Lockard, Miss Helen McNair, Miss Sarah Carr, Miss Barbara Farr, and Miss Dorothy Fox, as well as several other of the prominent maids and matrons, who were graduated from Faulkner.

The first meeting of the season of the opera box committee, to take place on Wednesday with Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick as hostess at her residence at 1000 Lake Shore drive, will doubtless be a festive occasion. The women are beginning their campaign to dispose of the unsold boxes in the new Civic Opera house, a job which should be rather a simple one.

At the College Club.

The College club has fêted several of the town's literati at luncheons, among them Mrs. John Borden and Marion Strobel Mitchell, this last winter, and have calendared another such for Wednesday, when Mrs. Cecil Barnes [Margaret Ayer Barnes professionally] is to be the guest. Mrs. Barnes is to read from her volume of short stories, "Prevailing Winds."

Mrs. Archibald Freer has issued cards for a musical on Thursday morning at the Illinois Women's Athletic club. Excerpts from the opera "Frithiof" are to be given, and a buffet luncheon is to follow.

The Romany club, whose membership includes an impressive miscellany of artists, musicians, writers, playwrights, interior decorators, and actors, is having its one large social affair of the year, a dinner dance, on Friday night at the red lacquer room of the Palmer house. Last year the club gave a similar party at the Opera club, which was too small for the large number of guests present. There is to be a cabaret of a rather more highbrow order than is usually connotated by that description, as there was last year.

The annual luncheon of the American Friends of China, which is another of several organizations that has been unusually active this winter, is to take place on Saturday at the red lacquer room of the Palmer house at 12:45 o'clock. Dr. William Hung, professor of history at Yenching university and a member of the Harvard-Yenching institute, who is lecturing this year at Harvard, is to speak about "The Present Political Situation in China."

Should Women Ride Astride? British Puzzle

By Hugh Curran.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN. — [Special Correspondence.]—Something of a row has been raised in England by the Richmond [London] Horse Show committee objecting to ladies who ride astride in competing in the show. The story rapidly has found its way over here and among horsey people just now it is being widely discussed.

Ireland is, of course, a land of horses and horsemanship, and here the horse appears to be part of the Irish nature. The fact that the automobile has made its way into the land of the horse does not in any way affect the national characteristics. The auto is all right for the open road, but it will never take the place of the hunter for getting across country after a pack of foxhounds in full cry.

The long threatened horse, therefore, remains in his old place in the affectionate regard of the large majority of the population which is devoted to the exhilarating pastime of hunting.

Majority Favors New Style.

It is, I believe, a fact that the hunting fields this winter, if anything, brought out more women in the saddle than ever before. For this season the keenest interest is taken in Richmond's problem.

I have just returned from a week end visit to a pack of hounds not far from Dublin, where I was told I would see how far the innovation of riding astride had found favor with the lady followers of the hounds. I was largely predominated at the meet, and I estimated that more than 80 per cent favored the new method.

It always has seemed to me that the old "side saddle" style was exceedingly graceful. There was something indescribably fine in a graceful well mounted lady dressed in a long riding habit showing occasionally for a suggestion of top boots and spurs as she cavorted on her spirited mount before the hounds had announced the presence of a fox in the first cover. It was perhaps the old world quaintness of the figure rather than anything else, the way it recalled one's old time favorite hunting scenes in the art galleries, that impressed most.

Each to Her Fancy.

But what of the modern young woman, astride her mount, breeched and hatted and spurred, the exact counterpart of the masculine sex? The picture had its fascination, too, but it was when the baying hounds, hot in pursuit of the fox, were followed by the smartly mounted field that one most appreciated the difference. The ladies astride were well to the front, and soon left the side saddlers far behind.

Talking afterwards with some of the officials, I gathered the views which appear to prevail in this part of the country as to the propriety of the new fashion, and it is generally true of most other districts: Riding astride or side saddle is altogether a matter of "every one to her fancy." Some like it; some don't. Each takes the form that appeals most, and none minds a bit.

Federation Prepares for State Convention

Committees Meet Here During Week

Chicago Woman's Club Holds Farewell Program.

By Roberta Nangle.

MOST of the large downtown clubs have busy schedules planned for the coming week. The federation is occupied with preparations for the annual state convention to be held in May, and meetings of the door and hostess committees are to be held during the week at headquarters.

The Chicago Woman's club will hold its farewell program in the Fine Arts building on Wednesday afternoon, with Robert Frost, the poet, as the speaker. The new building at Michigan avenue and 11th street is ready for occupancy and will be officially opened next week. The Chicago Woman's aid will hear reports of the year's work from its three large departments at its annual business meeting on Tuesday afternoon in the club rooms in the Medical and Dental Arts building.

Benefit Performance.

The League of Women Voters has several important and interesting events booked for the week. The Forum has taken over the Goodman theater for a benefit performance of "The Critic" on Tuesday night. On Saturday afternoon the Forum will close a successful year with its annual meeting at the Congress hotel. Mrs. Craig Miller, former president of the Michigan league, will speak on "Patriotism."

Mrs. W. A. Roberts, who has been president of the Forum for the last two years, has been nominated to succeed herself. Polls will be open from 1 until 2 o'clock, and the regular meeting will be preceded by a reception at which Forum board members and local league presidents will be hostesses.

Citizenship School.

Members of the league throughout the state will go to Springfield on Tuesday to attend the fourth and last legislative citizenship school. At these schools women are shown the whole process of law making. They sit in the galleries during the debate and interview their representatives on the legislative measures which the league has endorsed when not in session. Members also attend the committee hearings at which measures they are interested in are discussed and some of the women who have made a special study of the bills speak at the hearings.

Mrs. B. G. Jamieson of Hollywood is to be chairman of this school and Miss Edith Rockwood will be the instructor. League members who are going from Cook county and vicinity are Mrs. J. Van Wakeman, Mrs. Victor Olander, and Miss Julie Stebbins of Chicago; Miss Daisy Sandidge of Evanston; Mrs. Elmar Weidemann of Riverside; Mrs. Wilson L. Kline, Mrs. George Wallace Carr, Mrs. Robert Walker, Mrs. Constant C. Hopkins, Mrs. Allan Wolff, and Mrs. R. P. Sherer of Highland Park; Mrs. Ralph Pierce, Mrs. W. T. Bruckner, and Mrs. E. P. CLUB ETHICS - - - By Maude Swalm

"HOW did you get along with your talk at the convention?" the vice president asked the speaker. "I couldn't stay—had to attend a conference."

"The talk was a fizzle," answered the speaker. "I was never so put out in my life before. I had been given twenty minutes and I'd planned my talk accordingly, but just before I went on they told me that I could have only seven minutes!"

"I thought you did wonderfully well," said the delegate, who was with the vice president. "If the chairman had made the other speakers keep within their limits you could have had your full time. Altogether too many chairmen are more polite than just."

"That's right," agreed the vice president. "At a former convention an expert was asked to talk and was told that his railroad expenses would be paid. He lived in another state. He answered that he would pay his own expenses if he could be assured of forty-five minutes in which to present his material. It was so agreed. The chairman of the day was another polite one and when the expert's time came it had to be cut in half. Afterward, Mr. Man sent in his bill for $[illegible] and he got them."

"I heard of a speaker who traveled a thousand miles to give a forty minute talk at a men's assembly," called the delegate. "He was to be paid a hundred dollars and all expenses. When he came to the platform, after a long delay, the chairman told him that according to the rules the meeting would have to adjourn for lunch in just ten minutes and he'd have to confine his talk to that time. The speaker was nonplussed for a minute, then he tore up his notes on the table and started in with a funny story. He held one eye on the other and the audience roared for the ten minutes. He collected full fee and went home a much happier man."

Question.

"Is it customary for the chairman of a committee to pay committee expenses out of her own pocket?

"P. T. P."

REPLY.

In clubs where the dues are small there is no way but to let the committees finance their own work. Where larger dues are paid an appropriation is usually allowed for committee work.

Old-Timer Recalls Romance of Chicago's Adolescence

By J. Frank Aldrich.

THE picture printed in THE TRIBUNE'S rotogravure section recently of the Rush street bridge and its surroundings in 1861 recalls to mind so many incidents in the life of young Chicago in that era that I am tempted to reminiscence.

J. FRANK ALDRICH.

In April of that year I sailed into Chicago harbor for the first time, having come with my father's family and household belongings across the lake from St. Joseph in the wheezy old propeller Montezuma. I was born in Two Rivers, Wis., in 1853, but we had migrated to Michigan for a period of two years before making Chicago our permanent home.

The picture brings clearly into view the side-wheeler Comet, and, as this was the first steamboat of which I had any recollection, for she plied between Chicago and Two Rivers during my childhood days, I shall begin my story with old Capt. Albert E. Goodrich, father of the present fire commissioner, A. W. Goodrich, who founded the line which to this day bears his name, and relate an incident which occurred while I was living but a few blocks north of the Rush street bridge.

The Goodrich dock was where it has always been, east of Michigan avenue, and there the Sunbeam, the Planet, the Seabird, and the Comet of those days made their homes when in port.

The Hero of the Hour.

An uncle of mine lived at Kenosha, which in those days was the first stopping place for the Goodrich steamers, and, as I wished to visit his family, my father obtained a pass for me. That pass did not include meals; nevertheless I dined sumptuously, for those days, and the Comet's captain was my host. We were not due in Kenosha before 1 o'clock, but somewhere between 10 and 11 we ran into a heavy fog. The steamer continued on her course, apparently without any slackening of speed, and the captain stood at the side of the wheelhouse, every few minutes giving a pull at the whistle rope. Boylike, I had sneaked up to his side and was busily engaged in peering out into the fog as he was doing, when I detected a sail headed westerly across our bow. My young eyes were evidently keener than those of either the captain or the wheelsman, for, looking up at the captain, I noticed that he had not yet discerned the danger ahead.

"Don't you see that vessel?" I said, pointing off the starboard bow.

He looked in the direction indicated, but at least three or four seconds must have elapsed before he caught sight of her.

"Port your helm!" he shouted to the wheelsman, at the same time giving the whistle rope a yank.

Just in the nick of time, with hardly a second to spare, our good steamer swung around the vessel's stern, missing her by but a few feet, and, much to my surprise, I found myself "the hero of the hour."

At the Captain's Table.

After a time the fog lifted, and the captain, taking me by the hand, led me to the cabin and to his table for the noonday meal, later seeing to it that I disembarked safely at the Kenosha dock. I was a boy of perhaps 12 when this incident took place and certainly had no adequate appreciation of what I had done.

Capt. Goodrich was a pioneer in modern lake transportation, in his later years a plain-spoken but genial companion whom I sometimes met on the Illinois Central suburban trains at the noon hour. I was still a young man when I accosted him one day with a query of a practical nature, for it was shortly after the weather bureau had been established and I was curious to know if he heeded its warnings in the operation of his steamers. His answer was prompt and emphatic: "Not by a d——d sight. If we did that we would be in trouble all the time. No, we pay no attention to it whatever."

Returning to the picture: As we go down the south side of the river from the Goodrich dock we see elevator "A"—one of the two Sturges and Buckingham grain warehouses, "A" and "B," which in those days were among the show places of the city. Only one of them withstood the ravages of the fire of 1871.

A Cattle Catastrophe.

But to go back to the bridge—the old Rush street bridge, which was destroyed in the great fire—there it stands just as I remember it a short time before it toppled over with a drove of cattle racing to cross it before some kind of craft coming down the river should crash into it.

The bridgetender was evidently rattled, for he turned the bridge before the cattle had crossed, and as the dumb, panic-stricken creatures struggled to regain their equilibrium the ends of the bridge rocked upon its center and they rushed from one end to the other until all went into the river. Most of them were drowned before rescue parties in row boats could reach and guide them to shore. It was a tragic incident of the '60s in the life of this young city as well as one grand thriller for those who witnessed it.

Think of it—a drove of cattle going through the streets of Chicago, and along what is now its greatest boulevard, in the lifetime of one who can describe it from memory!

Once more back to the picture: On the left two familiar sites greet me. At the northerly end of the bridge and below it is the Woodruff & Payne coal yard, situated on the very spot now occupied by the Wrigley building [the west end of which faces Rush street]. These partners in the wood and coal business were the two most portly men doing business in Chicago. Lill & Diversey, the brewers at the foot of Chicago avenue, ran them a close race for avoirdupois honors, and we boys say all of them frequently, but I feel sure the coal men took the palm in that particular, and we even joked one of the sons, who was our schoolmate, about his 400 pound pater.

An Epochal Event in Boyhood.

Down toward the center of the picture, on the north bank of the river, stood the McCormick harvester works, but right in between these points and on the river bank was when the first Chicago water crib was built, and launched on July 24, 1865. Its launching was a great occasion for us youngsters, for we had all cut our initials into its side and the thing that worried us was as to just when it would take to the water, fearing that it might be during school hours.

The crib was built of heavy timbers, was pentagonal in shape, and was projected into the river in the same manner as were the watercraft of those days. It was then towed out to the two mile point at the easterly end of the projected Chicago avenue water tunnel, filled with stone and sunk to the bottom. And, God be praised! the launching did come in vacation time and we were all on hand for the event. The dimensions of the crib were 58 feet on each side and 40 feet deep, the lake being thirty feet deep where it was sunk.

It should be recalled here that the first waterworks of the city had been constructed in 1852. The engine house was on the beach at the foot of Chicago avenue, but it was late in 1853 before water was pumped from it. The intake was some 600 feet out from shore, about where the Pearson hotel now is. Ground was broken for the two mile tunnel on March 17, 1864, Mayor F. C. Sherman making the address and using a pick for the beginning of operations. It was completed on Dec. 6, 1866, and the water let into it on March 25, 1867. Celebration of the event brought Gov. Oglesby and a great concourse of people to join in the festivities.

Growth of the Waterworks.

A bit of romance, if it can be termed such, is the history of this water supply problem as it applied to me personally: As a boy I had witnessed the construction of our first water crib and had been present at its launching. As a man grown, while serving the city as its commissioner of public works, I was charged with the responsibility of making further contracts for tunnel extensions and crib construction and appointed all the waterworks engineers of the city, as well as all of the crib keepers and other employes of the water department in Chicago.

Thus from boyhood to manhood, from a city of fewer than 200,000 to a city of more than a million people, I had witnessed the development of our water system at close range; and I must not fail to give the name of the engineering genius, E. S. Chesbrough, with whose son I attended Ogden school in those days, and who was the originator and constructor of Chicago's water system. I have seen no monument reared in remembrance of this man—it may possibly exist, though I have not heard of it—but it is not too late to remedy the omission if such be the case, and to the Western Society of Engineers I submit this suggestion for its consideration.

The Fort Dearborn Massacre.

Reverting once again to the picture, and approaching the bridge from the southwest along River street [near Wacker drive], we find ourselves on the most sacred spot, in some respects, in Chicago's history, for here was old Fort Dearborn.

The original fort was built in 1803-'04, and by order of Gen. Hull was evacuated Aug. 15, 1812, after its stores and provisions [all save the liquor, which it was thought not wise to include] had been distributed among the Indians, and the march eastward began. Some think the failure to give the Indians the red liquor was a fatal mistake and led to what followed, for when the procession of soldiers and citizens reached a point somewhere between what is now Sixteenth and Eighteenth streets the Indians appeared from behind the elevated lands west of the lake shore and attacked and massacred them—some 50 soldiers and a number of the men and women citizenry. The fort was burned the next day and was rebuilt in 1816, but after the Blackhawk war it went into gradual disuse and in 1837 was abandoned by the army, though occupied by various government officials until 1857, when it was torn down—all save one building, one of the block houses, which remained intact until the great fire of Oct. 9, 1871.

The ancestors of my children came to Fort Dearborn when the total population was less than 500 humans (in 1834), and some of them saw Chicago grow from that number to nearly 2,000,000 before they passed on.

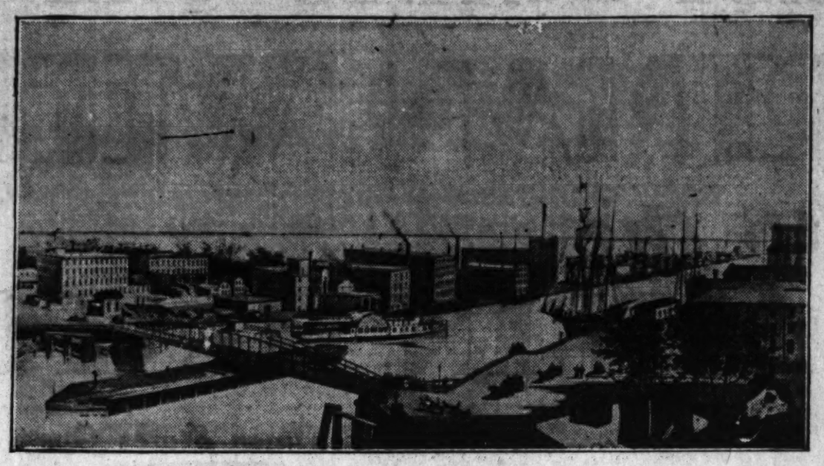
The Scene of the Slaughter.

My father's place of business in 1865 was on the River street side of this government inclosure, and the one remaining blockhouse of Fort Dearborn was still standing near by. A curio shop was in one corner of it, and here we boys purchased coins and postage stamps during the years when that craze was at its height.

The site for the monument erected by George M. Pullman in commemoration of the massacre at the foot of 18th street was designated by the writer, who was in official charge of the streets of the city at that time. The old cottonwood tree which stood in 18th street between Prairie and Calumet avenues on the south side of the Pullman residence was the historic spot on which the greater activities of that massacre took place, although the slaughter extended all along the lake shore from what is now 16th street south to 22d street.

What is left of that cottonwood tree now reposes in the rooms of the Chicago Historical society, and the care and control of that monument is in the hands of that organization. The society, too, has recently been put in possession of certain relics and information concerning this massacre and one of its participants. This includes a portrait and some handiwork of Chicago's first white child, referred to in a recent letter from the president, Charles B. Pike, to me. One sentence reads: "May I take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the help which you have recently given the society in securing items from California dealing with the first white child born in Chicago?"

IN CHICAGO—68 YEARS AGO.



THE Chicago river and its environs as they appeared in 1861. The Comet, the McCormick reaper facory, and various other features are recalled by ex-Congressman J. Frank Aldrich in the accompanying reminiscences.

Herrick's Death Saddens Paris

as titular head of the American colony here. No one thought of undertaking any public spirited work without his counsel and sanction.

During his first term here Mrs. Herrick did honors when the embassy was in the Rue Francois I. Since her death, the ambassador's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Parmely Herrick, formerly Mrs. Agnes Blackwell of St. Louis, has acted as hostess at the ambassador's Avenue d'Iléna home. Mr. Herrick worked a long time to acquire this ambassadorial residence and even paid for it from his own pocket, pending the action of the American government.

He took great satisfaction in the acquirement of this permanent embassy, and also, more recently, in the purchase of the property near the Hotel Crillon corner which long housed Cercle de l'Union Artistique, the most fashionable clubs in Paris.

Sherfesses Take Apartment.

Mr. and Mrs. Forsythe Sherfesse have just taken a new apartment looking the Luxembourg gardens. Mrs. Sherfesse was formerly Miss Ada Ryerson of Chicago. Both Mrs. Sherfesse and her daughter, Susan Ryerson, now Mrs. George [illegible], worked during Easter at the American hospital here.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherfesse have been traveling in South America and have now gone to Spain where they will take up a permanent residence. Later they will be sailing to America to spend the summer there, while Mrs. Sherfesse will see her son, Ryerson.

THE Chicago After Easter School of Leadership Training for vacation school teachers has begun its classes during the last week in several outlying districts. The promotion conference for metropolitan Chicago begins Saturday, from 9:30 to 12 a. m., and meets at 360 North Michigan avenue.

The council of religious education, under the direction of Prof. W. C. During May there will be six sessions, the first three Mondays and Tuesdays from 7 to 9 p. m.; during June three all day Saturday conferences, from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. All the meetings will be held on the third floor of 360 North Michigan avenue. Daily vacation church schools will open on July 1—five mornings a week for five weeks—and close Friday, Aug. 2.

The outlook is for one of the best seasons in the history of the vacation school movement in Chicago with the best text books and teachers of wide practical experience and thorough training in charge. Emerson O. Bradshaw is dean of the administration of vacation church schools, 77 West Washington street, the Chicago Temple.

Dr. Charles R. Brown, dean emeritus of Yale divinity school, who has just given a series of lectures at Northwestern university on the "Life of Christ," will speak before the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall this evening at 8 o'clock on the subject, "What Does It Mean to Be a Christian?" Harry A. Wheeler, vice president of the club, will preside and Silas H. Strawn will take part. Tomorrow at the dinner meeting of the Monday council at the Union League club J. Scott Matthews, chief examiner of titles, Cook county, will speak.

The Presbytery of Chicago will hold its annual meeting on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church, 64th street at Kimbark avenue. The devotional service will include the sacrament of the Lord's supper conducted by the retiring moderator, the Rev. Alva V. King. Annual reports and the election of new officers will be features of the program. Luncheon will be served by the women of the church. Dr. Andrew C. Zenos is stated clerk.

The second Lutheran exposition under the auspices of the Lutheran churches of the Missouri synod of Chicago and vicinity is being arranged for the last two days of June in the Hotel Sherman. At the same time the delegate synod will meet in River Forest college. A special committee has been organized to make preparations and consists of Henry F. Rohrman, chairman; A. D. This morning, the first Sunday after Easter, the Octave of Easter will be observed at the church of the Good Samaritan (Episcopal), North Humphrey avenue near Austin boulevard, by the repetition of the choral festival eucharist at 11 o'clock. Every One Is Back in Town for Spring Days

Gotham's Easter Parade Brilliant and Gay.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK, April 6.—[Special.]—That every one in society is back in town was made evident by last Sunday's showing. As I had already hoped, the day turned out to be perfectly darling. Mist in the morning and rain at night, but in between such weather as one can only long for. And society went to church in a fervor that was more fashionable than religious.

Just as the sun brought forth the prettiest colors in clothes, so it seemed to bring forth the most notable folk in town. People who only the day before apparently were yet in Palm Beach or moving slowly north appeared on the steps of St. Thomas' and St. Bartholomew's. By noontime one could hardly force a path to the oval room at the Ritz, and the Plaza was worse than a Saturday afternoon in mid-season.

Sea of Silk Hats.

Most apparent, however, was the fact that the men have lost their very last inhibitions. Top hats were more numerous than bowlers, which, of course, is an outcome of the winter's rule that every man wear an opera hat at night. The lads have all got over their fear of the topper and all Sundays henceforth will find Park avenue, at least, a veritable sea of silk hats.

Gen. and Mrs. Robert Lee Bullard, the general in mufti, were at St. Thomas', as were the Snowden A. Fahnestocks, Frederica Frelinghuysen, James W. Gerard, the Jay Goulds, the James Russell Lowells, Mrs. Coster Schermerhorn, the Leonard M. Thomases, and the Lawrence Copley Thaws.

At St. Bart's were the Robert S. Brewsters, the William B. Osgood Fields, the Philip A. S. Franklins, junior and senior both, the Joseph W. Harrimans, and Daniel P. Kingsforth.

Grace church naturally was the scene of decorous devotions, with the old noblesse much in evidence. George Blagden was there, the Henry W. De Forests, the Charles De Rhams, the Hamilton Fish Keans, the Dallas Bache Pratts, William Rhinelander Stewart, and the Howard Townsends.

News from London.

It was rather a coincidence that news should come to New York that Easter Sunday found Viscountess Furness a mother. Thelma Morgan, daughter of the Harry Hays Morgans, sister of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt and of Mrs. Benjamin Thaw Jr., and ex-wife of James Vail Converse Jr., will make a notable addition to the ranks of young mothers.

It came, however, somewhat as a surprise to many in town who know Thelma, the dark lady of the night life of several seasons ago, for she seldom showed much interest in home life while the spouse of Junior Converse, much in contrast to her sister, Gloria, who, after becoming Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt, was the very pattern of domesticity. Thelma attended every ball and dance in town, squired—after her divorce—by all the eligible men, and making a determined drive on pleasure.

Now, some years after her marriage to the immensely wealthy shipping man, Thelma has decided that she has reached the years of placidity and should settle down to being a true British matron. With a son and heir to the title now crowing lustily at Melton Mowbray, Thelma is doubtlessly looking forward to seeing her sister and the latter's daughter, Gloria, and presenting her son to his auntie and cousin.

Sub-Debs in Droves.

The week in town has been somewhat hectic. As is ever the case when there are holidays, the town is overrun with, not undergraduates, but prep school lads. The red cheeked, shiny nosed youngsters are mobbing the hotel tea dances, filling the theaters and assuming important airs simply because dozens of dances are being given in their honor and in the honor of their sub-debutante friends.

The senior get-together dance took place at the Park Lane, with Mrs. Gerald M. Livingston, Mrs. Frederic W. Allen, and Mrs. Henry Poor on the reception committee, and they received the sons and daughters, as yet hardly to be identified individually, of Mrs. Theodore J. Abbott, Mrs. Lyman Bartlett, Mrs. William A. Barstow, Mrs. William Walter Bliss, Mrs. Edward C. Cammann, Mrs. F. Ashton De Peyster, Mrs. Harris Fahnestock, and Mrs. Julian Gerard.

Another event of the youngsters' week was the dinner dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Streit at the Riding club for their sub-debutante daughter, Nanette Streit. The guests included Harriet Barbour, Mary Homans, Marguerite Greeff, Helen Hanford, Louise Wilcox, Mary Mellon, Maria Zimbalist, Muriel Richards, Nancy McKee, Mary Peterson, Sara Key, Gladys Fernandez, Barbara Knapp, Anne Marie Konta, Dorothy Benson, and Virginia Douglas. The by-courtesy men included Theodore Hess, John Stanton, Charles Adams, Woodhull Baldwin, William Streit, Franklin Howe, Cyril and Peter Troubetskoy, Andrew Coddington, Debarry Lyon, Webb Harrison, David Chamberlain, John Fay, Richard Curtis, Gordon Barbour, Winthrop Hodges, William and Arthur Chase, George Hemp, Hugh Pope, Welling Willard, Harry Miller, Charles Fay, and Harrison Worrall.

Easter Monday Wedding.

One of the few weddings of the week was that of Elizabeth Wyatt, daughter of the Christopher Billopp Wyatts, and William Russell, son of the Richard S. Russells of Boston, which took place at the Wyatt home on Monday. It was in keeping with the spirit of the times, a quiet affair, with only friends and relatives present, but socially it made up in importance what it lacked in size. The Rev. Father William A. Courtney of St. Stephens church, assisted by the Rev. Cornelius Clifford of the Church of Our Lady of Mercy of Whippany, N. J., performed the ceremony.

Elizabeth had her sister, Jane Waddington Wyatt, as maid of honor, while another sister, Monica, was flower girl. The bridesmaids included Mrs. Edward N. Rich Jr., of Baltimore, the erstwhile Charlotte Littlejohn, Cora Legg, Millicent Belknapp, Camille Miller, Kathleen Howell, and Jennie Arnold.

Bill Russell's best man was his brother Dick. "Kit" Wyatt was among the ushers, who included Parker S. Wise, Arthur N. Milliken, Frank D. Ashburn, Forrester A. Clark, and Bruce Harkness.

Many Stay On at Miami Beach, Hotel Lists Show

MIAMI, Fla., April 6.—[Special Correspondence.]—Miami Beach hotels are closing a remarkably successful season. The Nautilus has accommodated 19,735 guests this year, as compared with 10,452 last year. The Flamingo's figures for this season are 21,081, as against 17,098 for last year. Many of the guests at the hotels just now seem to be those who are concluding a West Indian cruise, but there are many who are lingering because of beautiful weather here.

Cocolobo Bay club, retreat of yachtsmen, will close for the season April 15, and many parties will be given there before the doors are shut. I. C. Elston of Chicago has chartered a yacht for three weeks, beginning April 15, and will have a number of friends with him for a fishing trip during that time.

Legion Leader Is Guest.

The visit of National Commander Paul McNutt of the American Legion to Miami has been the occasion for much hospitality. Commander and Mrs. McNutt have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Mills. Maj. Gen. Robert T. Tyndall of Indianapolis and Miami Beach, who is an old friend of the commander, had charge of his recreation program and saw that he had time for golf, swimming and fishing, beside the addresses he was scheduled to make.

Frederick B. Featherstonhaugh, K. C., of Toronto, Canada, past president of the Empire club and vice president of the Royal Empire society, with Mrs. Featherstonhaugh, is at the Roney-Plaza, after a West Indian cruise. Sir Frederick and Lady Williams-Taylor were with them on the cruise, but continued to Palm Beach. They will visit Miami Beach later.

Ex-Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Curtis D. Wilbur are guests of the former's brother-in-lay and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Paist, who have recently bought a house at Miami Beach. Mr. Wilbur's brother, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, is the new secretary of the interior in the Hoover cabinet. The Curtis Wilburs will return to California via Washington.

Chicagoans arriving recently at Miami Beach hotels are Dr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Talbot, Mr. and Mrs. Byron S. Reid, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Ellis, and Mr. and Mrs. William B. McIlvaine.

Theater Club Planned.

"The play's the thing" for residents and visitors at Miami Beach, just now. A theater club is being projected by a committee consisting of Joseph H. Adams, Roy Chapin, Clayton Sedgewick Cooper, Victor H. Ehrhart, Carl G. Fisher, Harvey S. Firestone, John Hertz and Fred Tod. The club is being formed to fill a demand for high-class theater entertainment and will be organized on a plan similar to that of the theater guild at the John Golden theater in New York. Subscribers will have their boxes set aside before the season begins, and friends will be able to group their seats together.

Building permits always tell a story of progress, and figures just announced for Miami Beach are of interest. They total $859,600 for the month of March, exceeding those of any month for the last three years. Thirty-two residence permits are included, which is indicative of the home-building program for the summer. A brokerage office on the Flamingo grounds is being planned, and the Nautilus will have a new swimming pool.

Back to School.

The school and college set, who have been spending their Easter vacation in the Miami area, have returned to work in the north, taking with them some of the dash and color of the season.

There was much entertaining for the young people and one of the largest events was a garden party given by Miss Betty Bailey and Miss Priscilla Arnold at the home of Miss Bailey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bailey, Alhambra circle, Coral Gables. The guests of honor were Miss Phyllis Zeigen and Miss Mame Tatum, who were at home from National Park seminary and their guest, Miss Mildred Stern of San Francisco, also a student at National Park seminary.

A dance and buffet supper given by the Robert Grahams of Detroit for their son, Robert Graham Jr., at home from Georgetown preparatory school, assembled a group of the young social contingent at the Miami Beach home of the Grahams. Miss Betty Roney, at home from Ogontz, had a party given for her by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. B. T. Roney, at the Roney-Plaza Easter Sunday afternoon.

The giralda was the scene of the tea, and the guests, walking up, after leaving the elevators, found lighted balloons along the way, the pastel colors giving a fairyland effect. The tea table was decorated with a speed boat, the Miss Roney, carved from ice and glittering with electric lights, placed in some mysterious manner beneath it.

Palm Beach Plans for Sporty Golf

is dying its natural spring death. But it was able to supply 200 guests for one of the late season revels, the closing dinner dance of the season at the Everglades club.

The William Bodes and their daughter, Miss Pauline, had one of the largest parties at their table, their guests including Mr. and Mrs. Franklin P. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Craig, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Groves, Samuel Groves, Misses Betty Groves and Marion Kennedy, and John Warren and George Boughton. Mrs. Albert T. Evans entertained with a small dinner for her daughter, Miss Katherine Evans. The latter came down from Mount Vernon seminary at Washington to spend the Easter vacation with her parents, who are still at the Breakers, and enjoyed several other parties which had been planned for her.

Others of the western colonists are still with us as may be seen by scanning the guest list of almost any gathering. Mrs. Milton Holden and Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Ordway were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Quentin F. Feltner at the Feltner home here. They are also seen in luncheon parties at the Breakers and Oswald G. Villard has been a luncheon guest there.

Guests of the Kays.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Miss Muriel McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher D. Smithers, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Dobyne and Willard V. Ferguson were guests at another of the week's dinner parties that was given by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Kay at their Ocean boulevard home.

Announcements that the Sailfish and Anglers' clubhouse will remain open all summer have been gratefully received by those who enjoy the free and easy informality of that lakeside retreat.

Some other resorts have postponed their closing dates. But Palm Beach will lose its center next week when the Breakers ends the biggest season in its history.

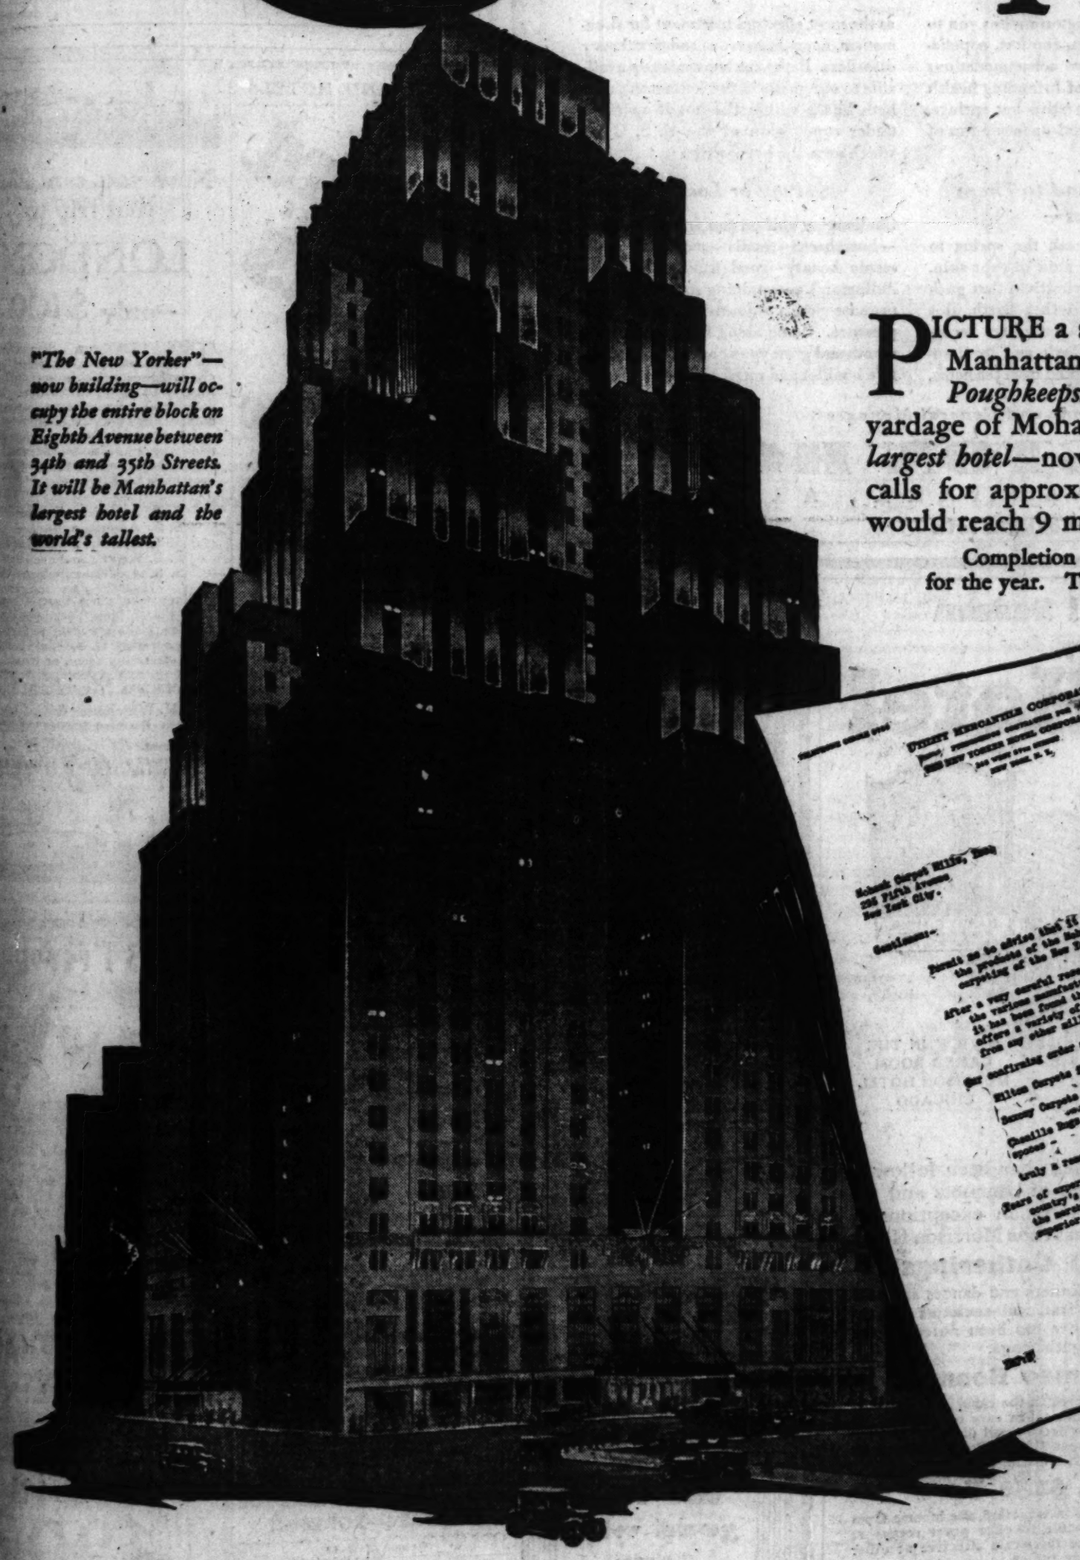
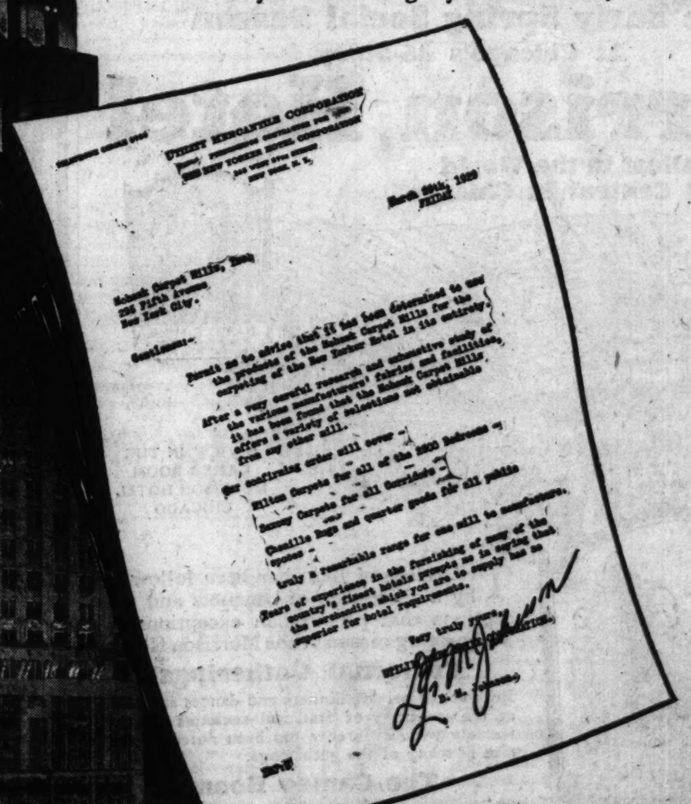
85 Miles of Mohawk Carpets

PICTURE a strip of carpeting, 27 inches wide, stretched from Governor's Island up through Manhattan . . . to Yonkers . . . to Tarrytown . . . to Beacon . . . to Peekskill . . . and on to Poughkeepsie—half-way to Albany! Picture this and you have an idea of the enormous yardage of Mohawk woven floor coverings just ordered for "The New Yorker", Manhattan's largest hotel—now building—and the world's tallest hostelry. As a matter of fact, the order calls for approximately 150,000 yards or 85 miles—which in a single strip 27 inches wide would reach 9 miles beyond Poughkeepsie!

Completion of the great New Yorker Hotel, in the autumn of 1929, will mark the ultimate in hotel construction for the year. Towering skyward 40 stories, "The New Yorker" will contain 2,500 rooms and represent an investment of $22,500,000 of which the value in rugs and carpets alone will be $500,000!



"The New Yorker"—now building—will occupy the entire block on Eighth Avenue between 34th and 35th Streets. It will be Manhattan's largest hotel and the world's tallest.



Delos M. Johnson, recognized for years as one of the world's foremost authorities on maintenance and equipment in the hotel, club, institutional and steamship field, is in charge of the entire furnishing of "The New Yorker" Hotel, including the selection of all woven floor coverings.

Mr. Johnson was Secretary of the United Hotels Corporation in charge of maintenance and furnishing for over fifteen years. Many of America's most prominent institutions to-day stand as monuments, so far as the beauty and utility of their furnishings are concerned, to the ability and experience of Mr. Johnson—among them the Hotel Roosevelt and The Park Central in New York.

The Mohawk Carpet Mills is honored to have received from Delos M. Johnson of the Utility Mercantile Corporation — in charge of the furnishing of this great hostelry — the contract to supply all woven floor coverings. Apart from the vital qualities of beauty, suitability and long and honest wear — all possessed superlatively by Mohawk — there was this deciding factor:

Only Mohawk, among American mills, is equipped to furnish all the varying weaves required for this great enterprise. For only Mohawk produces every modern weave — Chenille, Wilton, Axminster, Velvet and Tapestry. Moreover few mills in America have the volume capacity to fulfill such a contract as this.

As Mohawk is serving "The New Yorker", so Mohawk's design and production facilities through any of our contract supply dealers are at the service of hotels, clubs, theatres, churches, railroad lines, steamship lines and all other public institutions. Whatever the fabric they require; however intricate the problem; whatever the size of the institution — Mohawk can serve!

Why Hasten? McAndrew Finds Laborers Asking in Leisureland

a corner find yourself in Petain street, Foch place, and Boulevard des Americans, successively. We might do worse than copy this idea. Michigan avenue is capable of honoring a hundred sons. If it were in France you would walk down it from the river, finding yourself passing from Place Dever to Rue Frank Loesch, across the Course Lorado Taft, through Boulevards Gene Field, McCormick, Stanley Waterloo, David Swing, and Louis Sullivan, to the Rue Sixth of Last November, all parts of the same streets. Of course there should be an Allee de la Vache de Madame O'Leary, and a Place Queen Marie. Every walk of our children to and from school could be a lesson in local history.

No matter how often a rechristening takes place, the house numbers remain the same. Twenty Due de la Republique is the same in notation as when this street was the Rue Napoleon, when it was the Boulevard

If you have any heavy reading to do, take it to the postoffice.

Louis Philippe and the Route de Louis XIV., to say nothing of its being XX. via Augusta in the old Roman days.

But don't imagine any Robey street in this smiling land can be rechristened by the common council always without protest. Again our TRIBUNE is the source of information. It records an official action giving new names for old ones in another town a few days ago and tells how nearly every resident affected placed upon his door in large letters, "This is Olivier street," or whatever the old name was. Thus may we see, dear children, how democracy is strengthened by acting contrary to its desires.

BLOSSOMY NAMES FOR HOME

Whatever dignity these good people of Provence put in the designation of their streets, they offset by the prettiness of the names of their houses. Whereas the domiciles within and close to the city walls are as solidly massed as buildings in the loop and indicated only by numbers, every structure outside has its little garden with palms and olives and orange trees, and tells you its name by means of a marble panel at the gate or door.

All the girls of France from Aspasie to Zaire are honored so. The botany book has been hard pressed for its laurels, olives, eglantines, mimosas, rosemaries, lavenders, thymes, and wind grasses. One jolly villa declares itself the Huckleberry, which is prettier in French than in American. "Blossom House" is gay enough, while "Our Lady of the Roses" seems a bit sacrilegious for a mere country cottage. Scores of these tuneful words are not to be found in our largest French dictionary. But the y's and the u's in them start the guess that they are of the tongue of Provence.

One happy father has named his place "The Twins." Another, scorning the slight that might be put upon the intelligence of his household, has chosen "The Nuts."

We took our trunk for mending to Bertrand Beauvais, whose villa is "La Ruche" [the hive].

"I'll bet we get stung," said Theo.

But this busy B took four days to do a beautiful piece of work and charged us 37¼ cents, American.

WHY HURRY?

Some of the workmen cannot fail to bewilder a Chicagoan. The men mending a roof next door are of a contemplative type. The four of them spend many sunny hours regarding the house and its pretty, teraced garden. They seem to be educating one another in the principles of aesthetics. At length, for no apparent reason, they begin, by means of their aerial pulley, frantically to hoist material which some one, above, promptly throws down for them to hoist again.

Trains of carts, drawn by magnificent horses harnessed in black and gold, crawl up the mountain roads, their drivers asleep on the straw. At the end of their route laborers in the dirt pits throw half shovels of earth from place to place until the last toss reaches the wagon. A steam shovel would shock Visouryant out of its ramparts. Yet, only a few steps away, Jacques Vasnier's furniture shop, full of amazing workmen with tools for all the world like those my father brought from Glasgow in 1847, is producing ample quantities of beautiful furniture, graceful in design and built to last. M. Blasset and his potters turn out an astounding amount of beautiful earthenware vessels of the kind Ali Baba and Maxfield Parrish delighted in.

A Visouryant barber wastes no time in talk. In 14½ minutes he gives an artistic trim to hair and beard and charges you 23 cents, American. You can, all day, hear the chug of Adolphe Murel's gas engine and the singing of his saw trimming sash, doors, and blinds for the numerous builders who are converting fourteenth century stone mansions into present day apartments for the increase in population.

They Loaf, but—

Oakes, loyal Chicagoan though he is, insists there is less dawdling here than at home. Maybe. But it is hard to imagine where so many eminent idlers can make loafing a fine art as one sees all day long under the palms at Hyeres or right below us at Cannes. To which Oakes replies that they are foreign visitors. The French, says our mentor, do know how, don't they, to dress food and themselves, to serve and save, to brighten books with pictures and life with good manners? Woh else can so beautify a town by means of trees and squares, and statues and fountains? Who surpasses them in spreading beauty, charm, and refinement over all they make and do? If any one doubts, let him read in THE TRIBUNE the long list of buyers from American stores who are at the moment in this country contracting for supplying their home markets.

All the same, the leisure of this land is soothing. The trolley car that takes us through these green vales comes to a red and white gate closing the road where the railway crosses. There is no sign of a train. It is said to have left Toulon, ten miles away. Our motorman and ticket taker sit down upon a sunny rock and smoke. The passengers stroll up and down. Far away down the valley a locomotive appears. It cautiously conveys its freight cars up the hill and past us. An unhurried philosopher in uniform lifts the gate, and we are off. Four times in this journey our car rested, five or six minutes at each stop, while some distant tender in a power house shut off the current to make some adjustment to his machinery.

THE LEISURE CLASS

In none of the French postoffices have we seen any employé suffering from nervous excitement. Calm and deliberate, the clerks turn over the leaves of large folios, always searching for some official doctrine of a quiet life. The long line, without impatience, waits outside the wicket. We carry in our pocket some work of the unhurried—Emerson, or Pascal or Aurelius—and when our time at the window comes we have moved the bookmark many pages onward.

Alex Small is telling us, in THE TRIBUNE, that the traditional French idea of service is to have three or four persons keeping themselves looking busy doing the work of one. It takes a man and three girls 38 minutes to register a letter, here. It's done by one man in Momence, Ill., in 52 seconds, and he appears to be the whole postoffice. The French railways seem to have more operatives than passengers. This is not criticism originated by a visitor. The French newspapers are full of it. You may remember, from your high school days, the fun Alphonse Daudet, even in his stories, poked at the appetite of his countrymen for state employment and uniform.

They would honor, says Daudet, even a cap on a pole.

"It is the official cap and not what's under it that counts," said he. "There's no need for an able head or even for a head at all. Sufficient is a blue cap, a handsome cap with braid. It could be set upon a pole like Gessler's hat and so command respect."

To us, the overmanning of work seems what Artemas Ward called "2 much." Every little hotel must give you two waiters to serve a 45 cent dejeuner, one to put the fish upon the table, the other to lift the cover from the dish.

All Out for Lunch.

What Mr. Lueder puts upon the mail wagons before Christmas could well be carted about town, here, all the year round: "Do It Early," for if you are in a shop when 12 o'clock arrives the saleswoman, with the sweetest of smiles, says, "Dejeuner" [luncheon], and nothing then will happen for you until 2 o'clock. You are bowed out with a politeness that convinces you that all out of doors is waiting to welcome you.

Who are we that should have assurance to try and hustle France? With our American lunch counter and stool, with our bolted food, with our high power machines, we make more things in shorter time and hurry the amenities of our lives. Please pass the Emerson; we are willing to stand in line, with him, waiting for the postmistress.

No sooner had we written this than in came the inevitable TRIBUNE, saying: "Paris will have a quick lunch service. You are to get your coffee, buns, or what not at a counter and carry them to little round shelves and stand up while putting them down. It is a sign of new high pressure. Thus are manners corrupted. A stand-up joint in France!"

If you do not make your European visit before long you will see little that you do not have at home.

CASS STREET IS GETTING READY TO DRESS UP

Expects New Bridge to Bring Fortune.

Business men and property owners on Cass street have started a campaign to develop the street and nearby district in preparation for the opening of the new Wabash avenue bridge, plans for which have been approved by the war department. The improvement program, which is being sponsored by the Cass street committee of the North Central association, of which A. W. Shaw is chairman, includes the windening of the street, new street lighting and the adoption of a business restriction order. An advertising campaign and membership drive have already been started.

At the latest meeting of the committee it was announced that the assessment roll covering the widening of Cass street is now being spread and will be submitted to the property owners as soon as possible.

The street is to be widened from 66 to 83 feet between Delaware place and a point 125 feet south of Illinois street, where the ramp to the north end of the bridge will start. This will leave 12 foot sidewalks.

Change of Name Urged.

The proposal to change the name of the street to North Wabash avenue has been placed before the city council by Ald. Dorsey Crowe [42d]. W. C. Calvert, executive secretary of the North Central association, said that of the numerous letters received in regard to the proposition, only two opposed the change. The association suggests that a monument to Lewis Cass be erected in the small square at the intersection of Rush street, Delaware place and Cass street to preserve that name.

Plans for the new Wabash avenue bridge, which is scheduled to be completed by the summer of 1930, were submitted to and approved by E. H. Bennett, consultant of the Chicago plan commission; Homer J. White, president of the Illinois Society of Architects; E. I. Willard, president of the Chicago art commission; J. C. Rollenhagen, president of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, and Hugh E. Young, engineer of the Chicago plan commission.

Advertise for Bids Soon.

Bids for the foundation construction work will be advertised for within 30 days, and for the bridge proper, during July. The new jack-knife bridge will be of the railing type similar to the Michigan avenue bridge. It will have a 60 foot roadway and 15 foot sidewalks on each side. This type of bridge was selected upon the urging of the Wabash Avenue Bridge association, of which Murray Wolbach is president.

MOVE TO REZONE FOR SKYSCRAPERS WEST OF CLARK

Many neighborhood improvements are being urged and promoted by the Central North Town Business association, Harry A. Miller, secretary, announced yesterday. Foremost among the changes which are being sought is the rezoning of the district. The business men urge that building regulations in the district be changed to permit the construction of tall buildings.

The cooperation of Ald. Albert E. Loescher [44th] has been promised. Mr. Miller said Ald. Loescher has suggested that a petition be circulated among property owners.

Uniform closing hours for business houses in the community is another improvement in which the members are interested. It was unanimously agreed that all stores should remain closed on Sundays, and the board of directors was authorized to investigate the conditions. Members of the board of directors are George W. Pope, chairman; Ernest Ricketts, Harold Goldblatt, Henry Kramer, Joseph E. Nero, Sam Freeman, John Hamill, Charles Kand, and William Dow.

MISS EMILY QUINN, our charming barber shop cashier at the Hotel Sherman, is receiving the congratulations of her friends on the fine pickup of her high spirited new car, which cleared a three foot hedge in a standing broad jump, making a perfect four point landing in a cemetery. Miss Quinn is confident it would have broken the world's broad jump record for six cylinder cars had it not been for a tombstone carelessly left in the way. She plans to enter it in the 1932 Olympic games.

Motorcycle Policeman Frank Kremi of the Evanston force is being pointed to with pride these days by the admiring public for his latest exploit. Frank rode right into the columns of Henry Mencken's stylish magazine, the American Mercury, with the following item: 'A team of horses hitched to an ice wagon got scared and ran away. I was chasing them through the business section, but they ran like Reigh Count and Man o' War. Finally they turned down Sherman avenue and the traffic light turned red. You can believe it or not, but those nags stopped dead still."

HARLEY WELLS, who farms the east forty of the old Billings' place northwest of Glenview, was put to considerable worry about his Jersey cow last week. She was missing for two days and nights. She had always been a home loving cow and Harley couldn't account for it. Finally she returned with no excuses for her conduct, but a hearty appetite. The next day she again tried to slip away. Harley followed her. After sneaking through many acres of scrub oak and underbrush she looked cautiously around, convinced herself she was alone, and uttered a low, plaintive moo. Before you could say Jack Robinson, says Harley, a baby calf appeared, a pleasant time being had by all. That evening the two were safely ensconced in Harley's comfortable barn. Both mother and daughter are doing well.

N. Side Women to Help Honor Sex's Leaders

Women from the north side of Chicago and its northern suburbs will have a prominent place in a unique service to be held Wednesday night in the University of Chicago chapel.

For the first time in the history of Chicago and, as far as is known, in the history of the world, a special service will be held in recognition of the leadership of women. The original idea of the service came from the Y. W. C. A., which organization is holding its central regional convention at Hotel Sherman April 10 to 15. Other women's organizations became enthusiastic over the suggestion, however, and before plans were completed practically every women's association in the city offered to take part and delegated a member to assist on the committee of arrangements.

Many Groups Join Movement.

Miss Lilace Reid Barnes, daughter of Clifford W. Barnes of the Sunday Evening club, is chairman, in charge of the event, and the following north side women have been active in planning for the chapel service:

Miss Helen Bennett, 360 North Michigan avenue, managing director of the Women's World fair; Miss Alice Boynton, 211 East Ontario street, of the Woman's International League for Peace and Freedom; Mrs. Hermon B. Butler of Winnetka, president of the Fortnightly club; Mrs. Henry W. Cheney, state legislator from the fifth senatorial district; Mrs. Harold Eldridge, 1315 Astor place, member of the metropolitan board of the Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. William K. Hodgkins, 1430 Lake Shore drive, president Y. W. C. A.

Invite Leaders in Many Fields.

The public is invited to attend the chapel and special invitations have been sent to outstanding Chicago women who have achieved success in many fields.

Miss Jane Addams of Hull house will give the evening's address and Dean Charles Whitney Gilkey of the University of Chicago chapel will lead in prayers. Mrs. Emile Levy will give a reading; Miss Emma Hirth, general secretary of the national board of the Y. W. C. A., will give a short talk, and Miss Nellie V. Walker will read the litany of dedication, which includes two parts.

Among north side women who have received invitations to take part in the processional are: Miss Edna Dean Baker of the National Kindergarten college in Evanston; Miss Helen Bennett, director of the Women's World fair; Miss Edna L. Foley, head of the Visiting Nurses' association; Miss Marian H. Gheen, 163 East Ontario street, magazine writer, interior decorator, and lecturer; Miss Anna R. Haire, University School for Girls, Lake Shore drive; Mrs. Benjamin F. Langworthy of Winnetka; Miss Edith Mason, grand opera singer; Miss Edith Franklin Wyatt, 1212 North State street, author; Miss Helen Hood of Evanston, Miss Harriet Monroe, editor of Poetry; Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch of Evanston, lawyer; Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, congresswoman; Mrs. Lucy Fitch Perkins of Evanston, author and illustrator; Miss Mary Symon, 2163 Cambridge avenue, author, and Miss Maude Radford Warren, 129 Bellevue place, author.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS AGAIN URGED FOR CLARK AND LUNT

The Rogers Park-Clark Street Business association is making another attempt to obtain traffic control lights for the intersection of Lunt avenue and Clark street, Frank M. Schutz, president, announced yesterday.

George Phillip, chairman of the street lighting committee, says the association was promised more than a year ago by both Ald. E. I. Frankhauser [49th], and Loran B. Gayton, city engineer, that lights would be erected at the corner, but nothing has been done.

On the other hand, they say, lights are being installed at Lunt and Western avenues and Touhy and Western avenues, where traffic is not as heavy as at Clark street and Lunt avenue.

NAME GROUP TO FIGHT FOR NEW BRIDGE HOURS

North Central Body Aided by Others.

A committee of sixteen business men in the near north district has been appointed by the North Central association to attend a hearing which will be called in the near future by the war department to consider hours of closed bridges across the Chicago river. The members of the committee have been requested especially to urge that bridges in the first zone, which includes all the loop bridges, remain closed from 7 to 10:30 o'clock in the morning and from noon until 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

These hours are slightly different from those recommended recently by a subcommittee of the city council. After a six months' survey the aldermen approved a proposal that the loop bridges should remain closed from 7 to 10 o'clock in the morning and noon to 1 o'clock in the afternoon and also the customary closed period from 4 to 6:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Seek to Protect Rush Hours.

The North Central association desires to protect the loop employes and those in the vicinity of the river en route to work and during the noon meal time.

Although the city council subcommittee has made the recommendations, which were in the form of a compromise between the marine interests and various civic organizations, the action must be reviewed by the war department before the changes can be incorporated into an ordinance.

At the time the bridge restrictions were approved, Maj. H. J. Wild, representing the war department, declared that the government would be averse to any change regarding bridges across the river and the south branch.

"The change would affect more than Chicago," he declared. "You must look forward to the time when the lake to gulf waterway will be a reality. Marine shipping must have a highway to travel until the Sag channel is completed."

Backed by Other Groups.

The North Central association's recommendation has received the indorsement of numerous north and west side organizations, including the North Shore Hotel association, Lake Shore Athletic club, North Town Chamber of Commerce, Central Lake View Association of Commerce, Midtown North Business association, Devon District Business association, Lower North Community council, Central North Town Business association, Mid-Clark Business association, Uptown Lions' club, Central North Clark Street Improvement association, and the West Side Kiwanis club.

The committee will also urge that local shipping, such as barges, derricks, sand suckers, and other equipment, be so regulated as to reduce the frequency of bridge openings. In the case of the sand sucker they will recommend that barges be used to carry the sand from the lake to the docks on the north branch. Under the present system the sand suckers make the trips up the river, thereby losing the use of the machinery during those periods.

Members of the city council subcommittee which made the recommendations now before the war department were Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], chairman; Ald. John J. Coughlin [1st], Ald. Bryan Hartnett [12th], Ald. Joseph H. Smith [32d], and Ald. James G. Coyle [17th]. Before passing on the recommendations they consulted with representatives of the Chicago Motor club, Chicago Surface Lines, marine interests, and other organizations.

War Memorial for Evanston Ready in May

The spirit of '76 goes marching 'round with the volunteers of the civil war, the Spanish-American and the world war, on Evanston's war memorial, to be presented to the city by Fort Dearborn chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The memorial, which is in the form of an elaborate flagpole base, will be placed at the north end of the lake front park at Sheridan road and Davis street. A circular bronze frieze, mounted on a drum, will be surmounted by three bronze eagles and a seventy foot flagpole. The stone base will have inscribed on it the names of all Evanstonians who died in the wars.

Rockford Sculptor at Work.

Stephen Beames, instructor in fine applied arts at Rockford college, is modeling the frieze in plastolene. It will be cast in bronze shortly, in time for the unveiling, May 30.

He has been using as far as possible Evanstonians who served in the wars as models. Prof. James Taft Hatfield, head of the German department of Northwestern university, posed as one of the Spanish-American war soldiers.

Mrs. Frank L. Richardson, Mrs. Wilbur Helm, and Mrs. Warren S. Williams are co-chairmen of the D. A. R. committee in charge of the memorial. Mrs. Harry Ward is regent of the chapter.

UPTOWN READY TO START ITS "SHOW 'EM" FAIR

100,000 Attendance Is Predicted.

More than 100,000 north side residents are expected to attend the Greater Uptown Chicago Trade exposition, sponsored by the Uptown Lions club, which opens for six nights tomorrow at the Broadway armory, R. C. Harrell, general chairman of the club's exposition committee, announced yesterday. More than 200 exhibitors have engaged booths for the show, the proceeds of which will be added to the fund for the club's Uptown war memorial, to be constructed next year.

The Lions club has received the cooperation of many civic organizations in the Uptown district and other north side communities to make the exposition a success. The committee intends to show all Chicago, by means of the fair, that the Uptown district is the greatest community in the city, Mr. Harrell said.

Musical Revue and Style Show.

In addition to the exhibits of merchants, manufacturing concerns and public service corporations, the nightly attractions will include a musical revue by 30 professional entertainers, an automobile show, style show for which a special runway has been constructed and other specialty acts.

On Saturday night the first and second place winners in the Miss Uptown contest, which is being held in connection with the show will be announced. More than 35 candidates, indorsed by clubs and business houses have entered the competition. William Hebert is director of the contest and headquarters are at 4832 Broadway.

Another attraction will be a public wedding, which will be held on one of the nights. Miss Eva Tahery, 4021 Sheridan road, and Lorenz E. Fregin, 6128 North Lincoln street, have been selected by the committee for the wedding.

Dinner Given for Leaders.

A dinner was held on the eve of the exposition to honor the members of the club who have been active in arranging the details of the program. Ald. John A. Massen [48th] was master of ceremonies and the guests included the presidents and secretaries of all organizations assisting the Lions club and the candidates in the Miss Uptown contest. Speakers included L. G. Ross, executive secretary of the Sheridan Center association; John Keating, chairman of the contest committee; Edward C. Carlton, president of the Lions club; Mr. Harrell and Mr. Hebert.

Other members of the Lions club who are serving on fair committees include; booths committee, Harry C. Meek, chairman, Fred C. Klein, Carl Jonnson and Emil Frank; reception, L. M. Rickert chairman, Dr. Bruce L. Stocking, Dr. Roland A. Weber, Frank G. Haggerty, T. G. Lundgren, Jack G. Storey, Lee K. Glynn and Emil Maass; organizations, Darrell H. Lyall, chairman; and publicity, M. R. Pollack and Robert W. Simpson.

Many prizes will be awarded to visitors at the fair, winners in the Miss Uptown contest and the bride and bridegroom in the public wedding.

Several Sites Suggested.

The site for the war memorial, which will cost $25,000, has not been definitely decided, Mr. Harrell said. It had been originally planned to place the monument in the triangular plot of ground at the intersection of Sheridan road and Broadway. Several other sites have been suggested, however, Mr. Harrell said, including the property in front of Buena Memorial Presbyterian church and at the head of Wilson avenue in Lincoln park. A committee composed of representatives of the various civic organizations in the district will be appointed soon to make the decision.

NEW LANE TECH PUT ON BUILDING PROGRAM OF '29

Senn High Addition Also Scheduled by Board.

A report of the building survey of the board of education recommending the building of the new Lane Technical High school at Addison street and Western avenue; an addition to Senn High school, 5900 North Glenwood avenue, and an elementary school at North Shore and Greenview avenues was recently approved by the board.

Pointing to the fact that there is only $10,000,000 in the building fund, officials of the board announced that all of the buildings on the program cannot be completed this year. The architectural department has proposed that all be started this year, however, and completed next year.

These three buildings would seat 7,300 north side pupils, according to plans, while the entire 1929 program of the board calls for construction of sixteen buildings with a seating capacity of 23,350.

Lane Is Biggest Building Voted.

The new Lane High school will seat 5,200 pupils and is the largest building to be constructed. This building was authorized in 1926 and has been needed for many years, according to the report. The old school has three branches, 47 portables, and extended sessions, all of which will be eliminated by the new school.

An addition to Senn High school accommodating 1,500 pupils is planned. At present this school has an overload of 1,129 pupils, who attend classes in seventeen portables, the report said.

The new elementary school will seat 800 pupils, and will help relieve the district where the Volta school is being constructed and where poor school facilities exist.

Need of High Schools Grows.

"It seems desirable to give more emphasis henceforth to senior and junior high school facilities," D. C. Rogers, director of the survey, said. "Senior high school membership has grown immensely in the last five years, while the number of pupils in elementary schools has actually been decreasing."

A table compiled by the building survey shows 360,601 elementary school pupils in attendance in 1924 and 355,766 last year, while there were 32,209 senior high school pupils five years ago and 46,147 last year. Junior high school pupils numbering 87,328 attended Chicago schools in 1924 and 111,698 last year.

SHERIDAN CENTER POSTAL BRANCH SURVEY STARTED

A survey of the postal business of the Sheridan Center district is being made by the Sheridan Center Business association to determine whether a branch postoffice could be maintained. A substation has been in operation until recently at 806 Grace street, but has been discontinued by Mrs. Florance Perrier, postmistress, because she was unable to handle the great volume of business.

L. G. Ross, executive secretary of the association, declares that a substation cannot meet the demands of the merchants in the district, which is bounded by Sheridan road, Grace street, Broadway, and Irving Park boulevard.

WHO SAID IT? When, Where and Why

THE TRIBUNE will pay $5 for each snappy quotation printed and $5 for the best answer. Send your answers and quotations to the Who Said It Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

WHO SAID:

1. The American flag has been forced to retire. This is intolerable?—Claud E. Sutton, 16 North Bosart avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

2. April showers bring May flowers?—Mrs. A. L. Ellis, 7550 West 62d place, Argo, Ill.

3. The existing appropriations will carry the navy half way around the world and if congress chooses to leave it on the other side, all right?—Edward Batten, 4461 Keokuk avenue, Chicago.

(Answers to the above quotations will be printed two weeks from today. Answers to last week's quotations will appear next Sunday.)

Answers

Following are the answers to quotations previously published:

Quotation.—When March comes in like a lamb it goes out like a lion.

Answer.—This proverb, in reverse order is found in "The Compleat Collection of English Proverbs" by the English naturalist, John Ray or Wray, who was born in 1628 and died in 1705. The first edition was published in 1670. Later editions appeared in 1742, 1767, and 1813. The proverb runs as follows:

March hack ham, comes in like a lion,
Goes out like a lamb.
March comes in like a lion,
Goes out like a lamb.

—Marguerite M. Nelson, 5129 Cullom avenue, Chicago.

NOTE—Maybe some one can tell the rest of us what "hack ham" means, if anything.

Quotation.—Educate 'em with a krag.

Answer.—This quotation, or rather, "Civilize 'em with a Krag," is from a song which was popular among the United States troops engaged in putting down the Philippine insurrection just after the Spanish-American war. The song, a parody on "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys are Marching," started with:

Damn, damn, damn the Filipinos—

And concluded:

Then beneath the starry flag,
Civilize 'em with a Krag,
And return us to our own, beloved homes.

The "Krag" was the Krag-Jorgensen rifle, in general use in the United States army at that time.—Frank A. Post, 332 South Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park, Ill.

Quotation.—Good Americans, when they die, go to Paris.

Answer.—In the sixth chapter of "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," by Oliver Wendell Holmes, is this observation: "There is that glorious epicurean paradox uttered by my friend the historian [John Lothrop Motley], in one of his flashing moments, 'Give us the luxuries of life, and we will dispense with its necessaries.' To this must certainly be added that other saying of one of the wittiest of men, 'Good Americans, when they die, go to Paris.'"

The "one of the wittiest of men" to whom Dr. Holmes referred was Thomas Gold Appleton, born in Massachusetts in 1812. He was a graduate of Harvard and attained distinction as a wit, essayist and poet. He died in 1884.

Emerson says, "Next to the originator of a good sentence is the first quoter of it." Dr. Holmes should certainly be given credit for the life of this quip of Mr. Appleton's. Oliver Wendell Holmes—physician, poet, essayist, novelist—was born in Cambridge, Mass., on Aug. 29, 1809. He was graduated from Harvard in 1829 and commenced the study of law but soon abandoned it for medicine. He was the first real American humorist with an assured standing in good literature. He died in 1894.—Mabel Ruth Jackson, 7003 Normal boulevard, Chicago.

U. S. SEA SCOUT HONORS WON BY NORTH SIDE BOYS

Award to Be Presented at Rally on April 22.

Designated as National Sea Scout Flagship, first class ship "Old Ironsides," manned by a crew of some 37 North side Sea Scouts with headquarters in a large garage at Winnemac and Lincoln avenues, is making preparations for the annual rally to be held in Chicago on April 22.

At that time the flag, emblematic of national honors, as well as other awards will be presented to the ship by Howard Gillette, national Sea Scout commodore. The selection over 320 ships in this country was agreed upon unanimously by the national committee consisting of H. L. Stone of Yachting Magazine; Paul Hammon, pilot of the victorious Nina in the recent King of Spain race; J. E. Hires, Franklin Remington, and Capt. G. L. Stone, retired naval officer.

Started by Six Boys.

The north side group was started by six Boy Scouts who met in a small room in the Shakespeare avenue police station three and a half years ago with equipment consisting of a dime's worth of rope, a scout whistle and knife, and a Sea Scout manual.

Now the group, which has grown to 37, owns a 28 foot sloop, Renegade, a 21 foot whaleboat obtained from the warship Tennessee, and an eight foot pulling gig the gift of A. E. Bendalari, vice commodore of the Chicago Yacht club. In addition the boys have themselves built a six foot whaleboat.

The present victory follows close after the conferring of regional flagship honors upon Old Ironsides, on March 6. In announcing this award Arthur R. Pieper, chief portmaster of the Chicago area, pointed out that of the six first class Sea Scout ships in the world five are in the United States and four of these in Chicago.

Basis of Award.

In making the award, the committee based its choice upon character, achievement and seamanship. Among the recent achievements of the victorious outfit are: Three firsts, one second and one fifth in last season's cutter races; every award in the district model boat racing; a world's Sea Scout record of pulling 2,500 miles in a cutter during one season; the hauling out on the ice this winter of a cutter and whaleboat saving these craft from destruction, and representation at every Sea Scout affair ever given.

Gerry Shipman was the first skipper, but when he became a northwest district portmaster, Louis Ollof, his mate, became skipper, a position he now occupies.

The rest of the crew includes: Mate, Henry Drogemueller; purser, Sumner Sommerfield; quartermaster, Albert Collinet; senior boatswain, David Floreen; boatswain, Elmer Hassen; boatswain's mate, Rose Utter; yeoman, John Micka; able bodied seamen, George Gruner, Lester Relth, Harold Collinet; ordinary seamen, Melvin Peters, Everett Reid, John Burkette, Howard Jepson, Stanley Pupek, Edward Kroncke, Edward Welch, Theodore Deausner, James Bugner, Schiller Colberg, Walter Osinski, David Nowinson, John Boyen, Roy Idol, Robert Jackson, Jerome Brooks, Walter Christensen, Sherman Dautel, Frank Kris, Melvin Mueller, Frank Kleck, Arnold Arlsten, Eugene Sommerfield, George Wheaton, Lorin Ellsworth, and Walter Saline.

BEST SEA SCOUT GROUP IN AMERICA

Awards that go with its designation as the national Sea Scout flagship will be presented April 22 to the boys of first class ship Old Ironsides. The picture shows the members of the organization, which won over 320 other groups throughout the United States. [Wallinger Photo.]

CLARK-WILSON GROUP CHARGES NEGLECT BY CITY

Asks Traffic Lights to Aid Pedestrians.

Business men of the Clark street and Wilson avenue district are making a concentrated drive to obtain many improvements which the community has needed for several years, P. E. Osterholm, secretary of the Clark-Wilson Center Business association, which is leading the movement, has announced. Foremost among the improvements demanded is the installation of traffic signal lights at the intersection of Clark street and Wilson avenue.

"This section of the 48th ward has not been receiving the improvements which it is entitled to," Mr. Osterholm declared. "A majority of the 48th ward improvements have been given to the central uptown district, on Broadway, Wilson and Lawrence avenues.

Cites Accidents of Every Day.

"There are several minor accidents at Wilson avenue and Clark street every day," he said. Not more than 10 out of every 100 automobiles stop at Wilson avenue, which is a through street, he added, and even the street cars fail to come to a complete stop.

"We have been trying for several years to obtain signal traffic lights for the corner, but have been repeatedly told that the city is without funds for this work, although several other corners in this ward, and the 47th, 49th and 50th wards, have been given lights recently," members of the association said.

The association is urging that the lights be erected before the baseball season begins, as the great crowds attending Wrigley field make traffic condition even more.

Need Aid of Three Aldermen.

The intersection of Clark street and Wilson avenue is the boundary line of three wards. The 48th ward is east of Clark street, while on the west is the 47th ward, south of Wilson avenue, and the 50th ward, north of Wilson avenue. The business men have been unable to secure the coöperation of all three aldermen, they declare.

Among the business men of the district who are assisting the improvement campaign are Fred Hodgkins, John Schneidereit, Dan Hayes, Edward T. Pundt, John Kurtgen, Robert Christiansen, George Edder, Albert Revesz, Charles Utter, Ira A. Brown, John A. Gaydo, Columbus Norman, Glen J. Otto, William L. Cahill, Harry S. Merker, Louis Mencel, Samuel Manos and F. G. Crowley.

MRS. F. J. MAC NISH TO TELL GLENCOE G. A. R. ABOUT ELLIS ISLAND

Ellis island will be the subject for discussion at the meeting of the Glencoe chapter Daughters of the American Revolution tomorrow afternoon in the home of Mrs. Samuel O. Rice, 656 Lincoln avenue, Winnetka.

MRS. F. J. MacNISH.

Mrs. Frederick James MacNish of Chicago will talk on "The D. A. R. Work at Ellis Island," and Mrs. George W. Mieth, regent of the Glencoe chapter, will tell of her recent visit there.

At the last meeting of the chapter it was voted to coöperate with the ex-service men's committee of the Woman's Library club of Glencoe. Mrs. E. G. Burgess, chairman of the national defense committee, assisted by Mrs. J. Sherman Root will have charge of the work.

Plans are being made for a bridge party to be held on May 1 for the benefit of the chapter's many charities and projects. Mrs. Theron B. Childs will be chairman.

POST PREPARES FOR MEMORIAL AND POPPY DAYS

Called Outstanding Events of Near Future.

Members of North Shore post, No. 21, of the American Legion, are being reminded this week by Commander Harlow J. Hellstrom that "it is an opportune moment to direct attention and effort to the two outstanding days of the very near future that are of vital importance to the Legion—Poppy day and Memorial day." Bert Wimmerstad is completing plans for Memorial day and the post's services at the Irving Park Boulevard cemetery.

North Shore post is planning to be on hand to make whoopee at the seventh district's boxing bout and show on April 8 at the Hippodrome, Lawrence avenue and Clark street. The Broadway armory, Broadway and Thorndale, will be the scene of the post's annual stag on May 9.

Theodore Roosevelt post, No. 627, will hold an informal dancing party at the Aragon ballroom on Wednesday night, April 17. Past Commander John B. Morgan is chairman of the arrangements committee.

Lisle Hart, chairman of the Seventh district entertainment committee, announces that Davey Miller will referee and Al Smith announce at the boxing show at the Hippodrome Monday night.

Tomorrow night, when Medill-Tribune post, No. 348, meets, past chefs de gare and the present chef de gare of voiture 220 of the Forty and Eight will be present as guests. The invited personnel includes Charles Roth, James C. Russell, R. P. O'Reilly, James B. White, Frank W. Kee, and Frank B. Flannery.

Jane A. Delano post, No. 185, the nurses' post, will hold its April meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Chicago Nurses' club, 116 South Michigan boulevard. Entertainment and refreshments will follow the business meeting. All Legionnaires, prospective Legionnaires, and friends of the Legion are invited.

Members of company D, 124th machine gun battalion, are planning a dinner reunion to be held at the Metropole hotel, 23d street and Michigan avenue, on the evening of April 13. R. N. Keegan—Radcliffe 6082—has charge of reservations.

Dedication of a memorial tablet in honor of the men of the Chicago and North Western railway who made the supreme sacrifice in the world war took place in the main waiting room at the North Western passenger station yesterday noon, the event being outstanding in the history of North Western post, No. 430. President Fred W. Sargent accepted the tablet in behalf of the railroad. Music was furnished by the C. & N. W. band and choral club. Woodlawn post provided the color guard.

The Poppy day committee of Chipilly post, No. 310, under the leadership of Herman Weimer, is perfecting plans for a big return from the sale of poppies. Commander John V. Clinnin announces that details for decorating the graves of comrades must be made at the April meeting in order to prepare the bulletin for Memorial day services.

Midlothian post, No. 691, will hold its annual May frolic and dance May 4 at Posen, where Liberty hall will be decorated for the occasion. Proceeds of the frolic are to be used for the post's building fund.

38th Division Rally to Be Held Late This Month

The 38th Division association is sponsoring a rally which will take place late in April to aid plans for the reunion of former members of the 38th army division, A. E. F., which will be held during the American Legion national convention, Sept. 30 to Oct. 3, at Louisville, Ky. F. A. Redmond, 6311 Ellis avenue, chairman of the rally, invites all former members of the division to aid the reunion plans.

VOICE of the NORTH SIDE

CITES A TRAFFIC HAZARD.

Chicago, March 27—I have heard that some good can be done by writing letters to the Voice of the North Side. It is possible that the suggestion of a stop sign on the north end of the outer drive where it turns into Lake Shore drive below North avenue may reach the proper authorities and agitate some thought on this subject.

Although I have not heard of any serious accidents at this intersection on the raised street, still a lot of motorists would feel a great relief if some system could be worked out for this crossing. Cars which have been racing down the outer drive seldom slacken their speed much when they reach the point of merging with buses and cars which have also had the right of way all along Lake Shore drive. It seems to me that the city authorities are trusting in human nature too much to believe that motorists are unselfish enough to stop and make way of their own accord. As this intersection is now, a safe passage is merely good luck. A stop light would congest the traffic, but a stop sign would eliminate the terrific chances of smashups A. M. W.

CHURCHES YIELD SUNDAY NIGHT TO WILMETTE CLUB

No Services Are Held by Eight Congregations.

Completing its fourteenth year as a factor in community life, the Wilmette Sunday Evening club meets for its final session this season on April 21 in the First Congregational church of Wilmette.

W. FRANK McCLURE. [Moffett Photo.]

Preachers and scientists, artists and educators, actors and musicians have been brought from all sections of the country to the church steps of Wilmette and Kenilworth through the efforts of this organization.

The group has been nonsectarian since its inception, eight churches of Wilmette and Kenilworth coöperating in the movement. Meetings have been held in the Congregational church throughout the fourteen years because its auditorium is the most capacious, seating 1,000 persons.

A committee of forty laymen representing the Woman's club, the Parent-Teacher association, Wilmette schools, New Trier High school and the community at large, as well as the coöperating churches, forms the governing body of the club.

"The unifying effects of the club's activities has been felt throughout the community," says W. Frank McClure, who has been president of the club since its beginning.

Aided by Churches.

"The hearty coöperation of eight churches, representing six denominations, not only in holding no other Sunday evening services, but also in the weekly announcements made by each church, is one of the essential elements of the club's success. Each Sunday evening one of the ministers conducts the devotional exercises. Once a year the choirs of the combined churches render an oratorio for the club's program."

The annual budget is about $5,000, which covers the cost of speakers, music, advertising, and incidentals. Ten dollar subscriptions from 300 persons make up $3,000 while the remainder comes from the voluntary contributions collected at the services.

Larger Hall Considered.

The attendance at various meetings during the last year has been so large as to necessitate filling an overflow hall. Erection of a larger hall or removal of the meeting to the large auditorium at New Trier High school are plans under consideration by the club.

Among the persons of note who have appeared on Sunday Evening club programs are: The late William Jennings Bryan, Henry Van Dyke, E. H. Sothern, Lorado Taft, Frank O. Lowden, Judge Marcus A. Kavanagh, Florence Kiebeth, the late Thomas E. Marshall, Sinclair Lewis, Jane Addams, Burton Holmes, Rabbi Stephen A. Wise, the late Newell Dwight Hillis, Charles Rann Kennedy, and Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

HAUGAN SCHOOL P.-T. CONGRESS NAMES OFFICERS

Mrs. Frank V. Marshall was elected president of the Haugan Congress of Parents and Teachers at the latest meeting in the school building, 4540 North Hamilton avenue. Other new officers are vice president, Mrs. C. O. Cowger; recording secretary, Mrs. H. F. Croon; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. N. Kohanzo, and treasurer, Mrs. S. A. Koven. Mrs. Marshall was elected to represent the association at the convention next month at Mattoon, Ill.

Five members of the association will take part in the entertainment which will be given by the Northwest Council of Parent-Teachers associations Friday afternoon at Newton Bateman school, 4220 North Richmond avenue. The members who will appear in an act written by two members of the organization, are Mrs. Fred Wodika, Mrs. William C. Blumer, Mrs. A. C. Bywell, Mrs. Marshall, and Mrs. Cowger.

LINCOLN AVENUE GETS HOPE FOR FEEDER BUSES

Street Is Included in New Hearing.

Residents on Lincoln avenue, in the North Town, Arcadia Terrace and North Park districts, may get improved transportation facilities as a result of the recent decision of the Illinois commerce commission to review the demands of northwest side residents for the establishment of feeder buses to be operated by the Chicago Surface Lines on a single fare basis.

Although Lincoln avenue was not included in the original petition, it was amended to include this street through the efforts of John Klier, secretary of the Northwest Federation of Improvement clubs, and other organizations, including the Lincolnite, a community newspaper in that district.

Success Believed Certain.

Members of the federation declare that the decision of the commission to hold another hearing immediately is a certain indication of success, since their evidence is so complete that their demands cannot be denied.

The Lincoln avenue plan provides for the operation of feeded buses on Lincoln avenue from the city limits at Devon avenue to the end of the car line at Berwyn avenue. These buses are to operate on a 7 cent basis with a free transfer privilege. Another feeder bus line to operate on Foster avenue, connecting with the Lincoln avenue car line, is also proposed.

O. W. Holmes, president of the federation, said the amended petition would be presented to the commerce commission this week. Property owners, representatives of clubs and other civic organizations will appear before the commission each day to testify.

Surface Lines Agreeable.

That the Chicago Surface Lines are willing to operate the feeder buses on a single fare basis is pointed to by Mr. Holmes as being further indication that a favorable decision may be expected. He estimated that it would require eight weeks for the commission to review the petition and return its finding. The buses should be in operation by summer, he said.

Another north side street included in the petition is Central Park avenue. Officers of the federation predict that before the case is ended Bryn Mawr and Foster avenues and Peterson road also will be brought into the hearing.

TRAFFIC JAM ON HOWARD STREET TO BE RELIEVED

Coach Company to Move Terminal.

An agreement has been reached between the Howard District Business association and the Chicago Motor Coach company on a plan to eliminate traffic congestion on Howard street, Robert E. Ferguson, president of the association, announced yesterday. B. J. Pepperman, traffic manager of the bus company, was present at the meeting of the organization Wednesday and outlined the new plan for the bus terminal at Howard and Paulina streets.

Limit Buses at Corner.

Mr. Pepperman guaranteed that not more than two buses would be stationed at the corner at one time. Formerly there were as many as twelve parked near the intersection at one time. Double parking and backfiring will not be permitted.

The Howard association has been making a campaign to solve the traffic problem in the business district. The first step was the adoption of a 90 minute parking ordinance, which was recommended to Ald. E. I. Frankhauser [49th]. The business men also urge the removal of the taxicab stand on Howard street at the elevated railway terminal.

New Terminal Planned.

The motor coach company plans to obtain a vacant lot in the vicinity which it will use as a terminal hereafter. Mr. Ferguson says the corner of Howard and Paulina streets is the most congested intersection on the north side.

PLAN FALL DRIVE FOR EVANSTON NEGRO HOSPITAL

Leaders Release Report Showing Great Need.

Plans for a $250,000 hospital in Evanston for colored patients have received new impetus with the release by Clyde D. Foster, president of the Community Hospital association of Evanston, of a report prepared for the organization by Dr. William H. Walsh of Chicago setting forth the need for such an institution.

A campaign to raise the necessary money will be put under way next fall, Mr. Foster said. Meantime the preliminary program includes a drive to gain the approval of local civic, business and educational organizations as well as city officials of the project.

In his report Dr. Walsh stressed the lack of suitable hospitalization for Evanston's colored citizenry, which totals approxtmately 10,000 persons, and the need for a 50 bed hospital without patient clinic facilities.

Dependent on Charity Hospitals.

"The colored population of Evanston," Dr. Walsh pointed out, "is dependent for hospitalization upon the Cook county and Illinois Research hospitals, located in Chicago and intended solely for the indigent, Provident hospital, also in Chicago, and Butler sanitarium in Evanston, an unsuitable frame structure constituting a dangerous fire hazard, with practically no scientific equipment or facilities."

The Butler Hospital association has been merged with the Community hospital group which was organized three years ago through the Interracial Cooperative council and has already purchased a site at Foster street and Grey avenue on which the proposed hospital is to be built.

Dr. Walsh's prospectus for the hospital on the 50 bed plan admits two plans of operation, one on which the income would average $81,185 a year with an operating cost of $91,350, leaving a deficit of $10,065, and the other with a more liberal allowance for free beds and a general rate reduction which would leave a deficit of $33,000, the operating expenses remaining the same and the income averaging $58,190.

Holds 30 Beds Insufficient.

A thirty bed hospital has also been suggested, but Dr. Walsh believes that even the present population requires the larger hospital while in the future the colored population of Evanston will continue to grow because of the general belief that Evanston is a good place for the colored.

Under his plan the hospital would be operated by a board of trustees with a representation from civic leaders of the colored citizenry. Colored internes are suggested as well as physicians of the same race and a superintendent if possible.

Officers of the Community Hospital association include: President, Mr. Foster; vice presidents, Dr. William M. Noble and Adam P. Perry; treasurer, Mrs. Newell C. Knight; secretary, Peter N. Jans.

The board of directors is composed of the above officers and Mrs. J. A. James, Charles S. Wallace, William H. Dixon, John F. Hahn, Mrs. R. L. Hadley, D. W. Richardson, Sam J. Cannon, Mrs. W. H. Twiggs, Mrs. R. P. Downs and Russell Whitman.

Some of the members of the large advisory committee are: The Rev. Ernest Fremont Tittle, Meyer J. Strum, Rufus C. Dawes, Dean John H. Wigmore, John H. S. Lee, the Rev. Raymond Bragg, Charles N. Stevens, Mrs. Virgil Scott, Mrs. Arthur F. Towne, Mrs. Paul C. Milner, Dr. William C. Denforth, Mrs. E. J. Buffington, Mrs. Edwin S. Mills, Mrs. J. Scott Clark, Frank H. McCulloch, and Dr. William G. Alexander.

U. S. IS STUDYING PLAN TO LICENSE RADIO STATIONS

Recommendations Ready in December.

Washington, D. C.—"One million dollars a channel" was the arbitrary value fixed upon each radio wave length during the recent congressional deliberations on radio legislation. That this standard has no real economic basis was recognized by the members of congress, but they were sufficiently interested to order an inquiry into the possibility of levying license fees upon those granted the right to use the precious channels of the ether.

Such an investigation is now being conducted by the federal radio commission with a view to complying with the resolution introduced by Senator Dill of Washington, calling for the recommendation of a schedule of fees to be imposed upon the several classes of stations. It is Senator Dill's idea that the charges should be greater according to the power and the use made by those to whom licenses are granted.

At least one member of the commission, H. A. Lafount, representing the western zone, is already on record as being vigorously opposed to any plan of making broadcasting stations bear the burden of this license fee system. Mr. Lafount is, in fact, only luke warm toward the whole license fee project.

Want Public Hearings.

The National Association of Broadcasters is not opposed to the establishment of a system of federal license fees, provided that such license fees are required from all radio stations licensed to transmit radio communications, and provided that the term of any license for which a fee is paid is not less than one year. It recommends, however, that the congress shall by law establish the basis on which such fee is to be charged, and shall do so only after public hearings have been held for the purpose of determining such basis in an equitable manner.

While various foreign countries are known to levy fees where they do not own all radio facilities outright or exact flat sums or percentages of profit from concessionaires, the only data on license fees that the commission has at hand is that obtained from Canada. Under the radiotelegraph act of Canada, the department of marine at Ottawa charges its licensees the following per annum sums:

Limited commercial stations, $50; public commercial, $50; private commercial broadcasting, $50; private commercial, $10; experimental, $5; amateur broadcasting, $10; amateur experimental, $2.50; technical or training schools, $5, and ships, $10.

Suggest Leasing Channels.

It is regarded altogether unlikely that the United States fees will be as small in the recommendations that will be ready for congress by next December.

That coastal and commercial station engaged in point to point and ship code service should pay the government such small amounts for the right to use the ether, would provoke considerable antagonism when the subject is considered by congress. When the remark was made that each channel was worth $1,000,000, the reference was made to the transoceanic and transcontinental high frequencies, or short waves. At the present time, the government gets nothing directly in return for the licenses it grants to use those channels.

Neither does the government profit directly from broadcasting assignments to the 600 stations in the United States. Nothing is charged for the 17,000 or more amateur licenses either, although each amateur must pass a technical test before a federal radio supervisor to qualify for a license.

In favor of the imposition of nominal lincense fees, it will be argued that this is the only way the government can defray the constantly mounting expenses of radio administration. In favor of high license fees, especially for code communications services, it will be proposed that this is one way to eliminate "hay-wire" stations which barely creep in under the "public interest, convenience or necessity" standard set by the radio act. Some legislators have already suggested that it might be well to "lease" the channels to the highest bidder and the companies best qualified to maintain either wirless communications or broadcasting services, and perhaps later the regular television services.

Tax on Listeners.

Against the fees proposal, the theory is advanced that the extension of radio for domestic and international telegraph communications has put the United States in a preëminent strategic position for war or peacetime emergencies. Even more important in day by day life, it is pointed out that the radio communication channels are carrying nationwide and worldwide the messages of trade that mean so much to the country's economic prosperity.

The commission will probably fix the rates for short and long wave channels at relatively high levels, classifying them according to the importance of the use to which the channels are put. Broadcasting rates will probably be rather low with a graduated scale for stations given over to advertising wholly, advertising only partially, institutional services like those offered by churches and colleges, etc.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

Radio had its chance again the other evening to transmit the very feeling of fear over its electrical waves, in the "panic" during the boxing bout at the Coliseum. It so happened that when the hysterical rush of spectators moved out of the darkness toward the boxing ring we were sitting at the ringside and a sudden violent impact at our back knocked the microphone out of our hands and under the ring.

We had jumped up onto the ring, along with everybody who wasn't crushed against the platform, in order to see what was happening, while 9,000 men and women were fleeing headlong in one direction to avoid an unknown danger. And that little instrument which hears all with unfailing ears lay unmolested underneath the ring, transmitting to listeners hundreds of miles away the panicky sounds and yells and the very electric tenseness which hung over the crowd while they were waiting for the gunshots or lions' roars, or shouts of "fire!" which they anticipated out of the darkness.

On the air it was powerfully dramatic, because it was genuine. One listener, Raymond F. Smith, of Centralia, Ill., writes: "Here is how it was through my loud speaker. I had taken a cushion and was lying on the floor listening to one of the best fights I have heard for a long time, when I heard you shout, 'Hey, what's that?' Then an awful noise, which I found out later was the mike hitting the floor, then no more talking for some time except a few excited yells from men and commands mingled with a weird, low rumble which I was unable to explain, then cracking and pounding which I suppose was the knocking over of the chairs and the breaking of your shelf, as you later said. I rose up from my pillow in wonder as to the cause.

"I didn't have long to wait, when I heard your familiar voice say, 'Hey, is the mike still connected?' You then told us you were talking from the ring and you told us what was taking place, talking all the time, long before the trouble was quieted down. Maybe you think I didn't have some strange feelings come over me as you described something that wasn't on the program at all. The thought struck me that maybe some people were being trampled upon and injured and maybe some killed right then, and here we were listening to it over the radio, in the comfort of our homes, about 300 miles away. I see by this morning's paper that several were injured and two or three quite severely. Every time I think of it, I still have a strange feeling. That experience was the greatest thrill I ever got from a radio."

It reminds us of one evening over a year ago, when a fire broke out in the lakeside terrace of the hotel where we were picking up a dance orchestra. It was on the stroke of midnight and we announced a group of tunes that the orchestra would play for the midsummer dancers. The operator switched from us in the studio to the terrace and rang for the orchestra to start playing. Instead of music we heard a great rushing and crackling and shouts of people. There was actual FEAR in the air. It could be sensed by us in the studio through the radio horn. The whole place was swept by fire, which burned tables, chairs, decorations and melted a saxophone to a weird metal mass—we stretched lines to the roof and tried to describe the running patrons, the activities of the firemen and the playing of the hose from the street—and through it all that microphone hung there in the fire, picking up all the sounds of burning dining room.

SOMETIMES a word spoken by an announcer is heard incorrectly on the air and it causes a deal of consternation. Pat Barnes tells us of the time he was broadcasting Chicago's civic reception to Col. Lindbergh, a banquet at a downtown hotel. Pat was seated just behind Lindy, who was in the middle of the speakers' table. Many prominent citizens were eulogizing the flyer between courses of the dinner.

Pat was inserting little comments here and there, describing what a fine, bashful young fellow Lindy appeared to be. Suddenly the colonel dropped a fork and it lay on the floor behind the chair. Bother Pat, during a lull in the speeches, spoke: "And now, just to let you know how thoroughly human and like all of us Lindy is, he just dropped a fork on the floor behind his chair."

In the following few days about one hundred letters arrived on Pat's desk, expressing amazement—"Do you mean to say, Mr. Barnes, that Lindy dropped a quart on the floor behind him?"

SHOWING WHAT tell-tale busybodies microphones can be—a bald headed gent is dancing past the orchestra with his young partner in a night club, and she says, "Why is it you never speak above a whisper when you're dancing here?" And the fat gent replies: "Well, you know, they broadcast the band from here, and it's practically certain my wife's listening in."

WE NOTICE a station reviving the old "amateur nights" of early radio

days. Our experiences with amateur nights, or amateur periods, some years ago were very delightful. The only unhappy element in them was that most of the applicants were too good to be funny, and an amateur night isn't funny unless the performers are absolutely terrible.

An hour was devoted to the show, and there were many, many applicants. Instead of being as laughably impossible as the famous Cherry sisters of the vaudeville stage, they were mostly just mediocre singers. One of two, however, were unconsciously howling successes, singing hymns in duets and playing on queer instruments.

Because they were honest and sincere neophytes from distant parts seeking candid judgments on their talents, it was impossible for us to rate them as the theater attendants used to do the amateurs who lined up on the stage for the awarding of the prizes. It would be really insulting to shout "Get the hook," as the boys were wont to do in the theater. And the only good laughs were derived from the insertion of some of our regular performers in burlesque rôles.

CHOOSE MENUS, SUBMIT THEM TO TEACHERS

The National Kindergarten and Elementary college, Evanston, Ill., has instituted a course designed to teach the children attending the demonstration school there what to eat and why.

Children in the elementary grades of the demonstration school are required to select their own luncheon menus, choosing foods for their vitamine and mineral content, discriminating among proteins, fats, and carbohydrates and keeping within a certain cost. The menus the children make are presented to the class, the teacher supervising, where they are accepted, corrected, or rejected, according to whether they contain the correct food elements.

Scientifically stated, the idea is to develop "the ability to translate a menu into food values and select therefrom a properly balanced meal, according to Miss Clara Belle Baker, director of the demonstration school.

Pupils of Goudy School Give Safety Program

Each class at the Goudy school, 1101 Foster avenue, presented a tableau at the safety program given Wednesday afternoon in the assembly hall. Frank Singleton, director of safety of the board of education, talked to the pupils. An exhibition of drills was also given by the safety patrol.

JOAN LOWELL TO TELL STORY ON RADIO TUESDAY

Will Talk of Her Life at Sea.

As soon as she was able to walk her sunburned toes gripped the slanting deck of a ship. From then on life was about as vivid and fascinating an experience as was ever lived by a woman—or man, for that matter. Probably never before in the history of literature has such rip-roarin' adventure ever been recorded by a girl.

Joan Lowell, descendant on one side of Boston blue stockings and on the other of bewhiskered Levantine sea rovers, became nationally famous overnight through the publication recently of her adventures under the title, "The Cradle of the Deep."

The broadcasting of Joan Lowell's story by herself over a chain of stations will be a unique experience in radio. A total of 30 stations, including W-G-N, the CHICAGO TRIBUNE station, will be hooked up for the national broadcast Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock Chicago time.

Was Raised as Boy.

Joan Lowell's father carried her aboard his schooner, a copra trader in the South Pacific, when she was only seven months old. A she goat, purchased for a broken alarm clock from south sea natives, was her nurse. For seventeen years the only ground under her feet was about sixty fathoms of water.

Raised as a man by men as hard as nails, it is small wonder that Joan's early ambition was to be able to swear for three minutes without once repeating herself, and eventually she achieved this distinction.

With the head of an angel and a fist like a hammer, this little thug in overalls (for she never knew what dresses were) paraded the deck of her floating home looking for trouble. She found it—and how. Her father caught her just in time one day when she was going ashore to have nude ladies tattooed on her chest—just like the other sailors.

The Hangman's Noose.

To Joan women were soft, fluffy things that "smelled good." In her floating world of men her own sex was as inscrutable as the inhabitants of another planet, and her first real experience with them pretty nearly caused a riot.

She found navigating on shore so full of shoals that she fled back to sea, and there a member of the crew casually showed her one night how to make a hangman's noose. A sure and ghastly sense of drama impelled him to knot it under his own left ear and dance on the wind.

On one of her rare visits ashore a pedantic and pompous professor of economics once told her: "You are a very interesting study, little girl." The little girl's reply nearly made the professor faint.

Ghostly giant icebergs, waterspouts, wild dances on lovely south sea atolls, man-eating sharks that followed the ship like wraiths, and the fact that young ladies should not bathe in gentlemen's drinking water—all these Joan Lowell learned about and wove into her fantastic saga of the sea. Her broadcast is expected to be a radio event.

OFFER SPEAKERS TO EXPLAIN HOW CHICAGO TICKS

Many open dates are still available for the booking of speakers from the department of public works by north side civic and business groups, Commissioner Richard W. Wolfe announced yesterday.

More than 80 talks have been made by speakers on various subjects dealing with the work of the department since the speakers' bureau was founded by the commissioner last fall, and among them many north side groups, but none are thus far scheduled for April. An offer has been extended to all groups wishing to learn how Chicago is lubricated, watered, and kept in good physical condition, the commissioner said.

The speakers selected by Commissioner Wolfe are men who are acquainted with the major improvements of the city, building and operation of pumping stations, the maintenance of streets and alleys, and the construction and operation of garbage disposal plants.

A letter has been sent to more than 100 local organizations in all parts of the city extending the offer and listing talks from which the group might choose in engaging the speaker.

JOAN LOWELL.
Young authoress who is to tell of her life at sea Tuesday night over a network of stations, including W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station.

Drunk and Jailed Just After Being Released

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — [U. P.] — Fifteen minutes after being released from jail, Thomas MacGreagor, 65, was arrested on a drunkenness charge. "I got it before I left the jail," he explained in court. Investigation revealed that inmates had concocted potent highballs by mixing water with shellac used in the workshop.

LOUISE HOMER, MISS STEWART ON AIR TONIGHT

Will Give Program in Kent Series.

An artist who has trod the hard pathway from obscurity to the highest pinnacle of success — Louise Homer, Metropolitan opera and concert contralto—and a young artist who has gained national and international acclaim through radio performance, Kathleen Stewart, pianist, are to be the co-stars in the Atwater Kent radio hour tonight in a program boardcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, and a coast to coast network.

Both artists demonstrate the American spirit of womanhood applied to creative work in the arts. Each has attained the highest type of success without the sacrifice of a single iota of her feminine charm. Louise Homer represents as much to her public as a mother and a home maker as she does as one of the world's greatest contraltos.

Family Circle of Artists.

In fact one who thinks of her as a great singer thinks in terms also of her composer husband, her singing and playing daughters and their ideal family circle—yet a circle of artists of striking ability.

Kathleen Stewart came before the public as a pianist with the National Broadcasting company. She immediately centered attention on herself as an artist who paints pictures in tone, either of the most delicate shading or the most brilliant coloring, with the usually arbitrary black and white keys of the piano.

Versatile Artist.

In the playing of one of Grieg's concertos for the piano, which tells a story of intense drama, Miss Stewart has been rated supreme among women pianists. She started out in life to play the piano, then switched to painting and then to the violin. One day she wandered into the N. B. C. studios for an audition. She was engaged and has been a regular program artist and accompanist ever since. Last year she played more than fifty concerts, arranged through the concert bureau of the company, in addition to her radio work. This latter involved being solo pianist for orchestral broadcasts as well as playing innumerable special programs of her own and work in conjunction with other broadcast artists.

GEORGE OLSEN'S MUSICIANS STAR IN FAMILY PARTY

George Olsen, known first and foremost to Broadwayites for his merry-making in "Kid Boots," "Good News," "Whoopee," and other titillating extravaganzas will be the headliner tomorrow night in the family party program broadcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

Olsen started his career as an orchestral improvisor and director in Detroit. Eddie Cantor heard him and wired Ziegfeld that he had discovered a "find." Ziegfeld took Cantor at his word, and Olsen was signed to appear with the comedian in "Kid Boots." He was such a hit that while still appearing in "Kid Boots" Ziegfeld arranged for him to do double duty by also doing a turn in "The Follies."

Ravinia Woman's Club Plans Charity Concert

The art committee of the Ravinia Woman's club is planning a charity concert to be held in the Ravinia auditorium next Friday evening. Vittorio Trevisan and Hans Hess will be the artists. Mrs. James Cady Ewell heads the committee in charge. Miss Berenice Bentley is vice chairman and other members include Mrs. T. W. Allinson, Mrs. Robert Clark, Mrs. Louis Golden, Mrs. A. W. Jerrems, Miss Olga Trevisan, Mrs. A. K. Stern, Mrs. W. H. Mast, Mrs. R. P. Lavenant, and Mrs. A. M. Lowrie.

PAT BARNES 7:15

YOU should get to know Pat. When you do, you'll like him even more. Not only is Pat an announcer and a reader, but he's a playwright and a well trained actor. Tonight, for instance, you will probably hear him take the part of three or four characters in the sketch that he has written himself. Pat Barnes is a hit whether he be acting before blinding foot-lights, or whether he treads a silent carpet in a hushed radio studio. Every gesture—every smile is there, though his visible audience be only a cold and silent microphone. But you sense, somehow, the gestures and the smile of Pat just to listen. 7:15.

JOHN STAMFORD

VARIETY is the main ingredient in this early afternoon gambol of notes. John Stamford, our dignified announcer, turns tenor for this program, singing a few of your favorites plucked from his great big song book. Paul Mertz pushes his piano back into a corner where it can't get away, and—! Van (Four String) Fleming and his guitar will hold a sentimental but melodious conversation if they don't get hot. If you do—Wow! Harold Stokes, the midget sharp and flat man from Leningrad, will try to keep his accordeon from getting itself into a knot. That's about all we can get into one ordinary program. 2:00.

SOME CHANGES FOR OUTDOOR TWIN PUSHER

How to Add Elevator and Tail Service.

Outdoor events of the second model airplane tournament, sponsored by THE TRIBUNE, will be held May 19 at Washington park; indoor events, May 26, at the 132nd Infantry armory.

Forty-eight medals, two trophies, and two trips to the national championship meet and back will be awarded the winners.

All entries must be certified by an official of a playground or school.

BY MERRILL HAMBURG.
[Secretary Airplane Model League of America.]

Last week, in the columns of THE TRIBUNE, local sponsor of the Airplane Model League of America, you learned how to make an outdoor Twin Pusher, the king of outdoor ships. This week I'm going to tell you of some changes in the championship model that have interested a lot of experts.

These changes are suggested by Joseph Lucas, president of the Illinois Model Aero club—the oldest model club in America—and a builder of years of experience. Lucas says that they helped him to win the national outdoor trophy last year. His ship made a flight of four minutes twenty-four seconds at the first national A. M. L. A. contests.

As you'll see by the drawing of the ship, the differences consist in the addition of a built-up elevator and auxiliary rear surface. The championship model has only a single surface elevator. Consequently it is lighter. But Lucas believes that his additions give the model added lift to compensate for the additional weight.

How to Get Kit.

To make the new parts you'll need a sheet of Japanese tissue paper, 10½ x31 inches; a piece of 1-16 inch flat balsa, and some 1-32 inch flat balsa, both pieces 12 inches long. If you haven't these materials, send 15 cents to the supply department, A. M. L. A., American Boy building, Second and Lafayette boulevards, Detroit, Mich., asking for the elevator kit. It will come to you by return mail.

The wing section of both elevator and rear surface is the same as that of the main wing—you'll remember that the Clark-Y airfoil was the suggested section. Make five ribs of the same proportions — with the same curve, that is—for the rear surface, and five for the elevator; but reduce the size so that the rib length is no more than three inches.

Drawing Gives Details.

Now cut leading and trailing edge strips from your flat balsa. Make the elevator 12 inches long, with its dihedral angle such that the tips will be 1⅝ inches above the center. Cut all strips first, make each half of the elevator separately and join them. The work you did last week on the main wing will tell you all the details of this job. It will help you with covering the elevator, too.

Figure the length of the strips for the rear surface by measuring the distance between the exact points on the two fuselage sticks where you will attach it. This is a perfectly straight wing section—no dihedral to it—so it will be easy to build and to cover. Note that it fits in between the sticks, and takes the place of the two rear bamboo cross-braces. The drawing shows details.

Last Minute Touches.

The elevator is held to the sticks by a big rubber band; but the rear surface is ambroided permanently in position. The elevator should not be set at any angle of incidence, for its airfoil section furnishes enough lift.

Now a few hints on last minute touches to that Twin Pusher. Don't forget that extreme lightness is of prime importance in all championship models. Make each individual part just as light, sand it down as thin, as requisite strength will permit. One overheavy part won't make much difference, but a lot of them will!

Take extreme care with each bit of work, too. You can lessen wind resistance, increase lift and add to performance by seeking neatness and exactness. Remember, also, that the successful contest performer is the one who has plenty of spare parts—props, motors, even fuselages and wings.

Good Winder Needed.

Be sure that your rubber is in good shape—not too old nor too often used. You'll need a good eggbeater winder, too. The league can furnish plans for a winder.

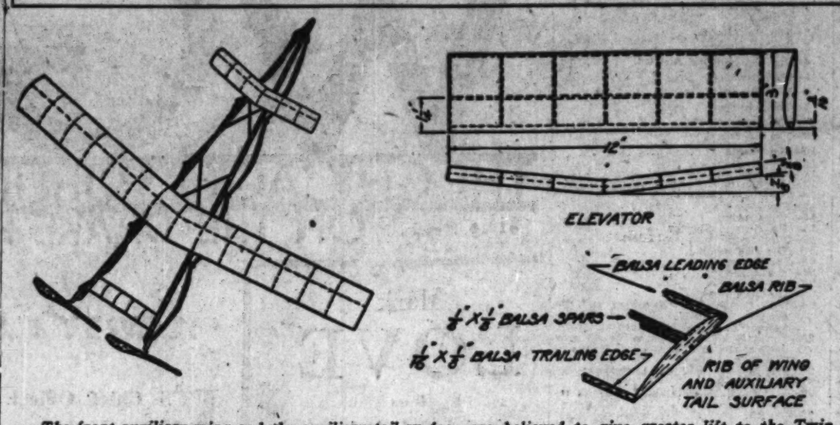
You'll find that you get best results when the two propellers turn up in the center and out toward the sides.

If you haven't plans for the plane, you can get them by sending a two cent stamp to the league with your request. They're included in the official league kit for the Outdoor Twin Pusher, obtainable for $3 at league headquarters.

Don't expect to build the Twin Pusher, or to add the Lucas parts to it, without spending a lot of time and patience on it. But, if you do the work carefully, look for a whale of a good flight with it. The official record is 10 minutes 14 2-5 seconds; unofficial records go above an hour!

And it's likely to be the ship that will win some boy—perhaps a Chicago model builder—that free trip to Europe. It's worth trying for!

VARIATIONS FOR OUTDOOR TWIN PUSHER



The front auxiliary wing and the auxiliary tail surface are believed to give greater lift to the Twin Pusher. They aren't hard to build. Read the directions while studying this diagram—then go ahead!

Rogers Park Sunday School Wins Attendance Banner

The Sunday school of the Rogers Park Baptist church, 1902 Greenleaf avenue, has been awarded a banner by the Chicago Baptist Sunday School union for having the largest increase in attendance since Jan. 1 of any Baptist Sunday school in the city. The banner was received by Joel Fitts, superintendent of the school, at a recent meeting of the union at the Englewood Baptist church. The Rogers Park school has made an increase of 30 per cent since the first of the year.

ORCHARD STREET WIDENING SOON TO BE STARTED

A petition will be presented at once to the Superior court asking the appointment of three commissioners to spread assessments for the opening and widening of Orchard street and Abbott court between Ogden avenue and Clark street. J. C. Hendricks, in charge of street openings and widenings of the board of local improvements, announced yesterday. The measure authorizing the improvement was passed by the city council at a recent meeting.

Business men and property owners of the Clark street-Diversey parkway district have promoted the project for several months.

The movement to extend Orchard street and Abbott court, joining the two into one continuous street with openings into Ogden avenue on the south and Clark street on the north, was supported principally by the Diversey Property Owners' Business association of which M. L. Quin is president. Members of the association declare the approval of the project is a victory for them as a city council sub-committee had suggested a $1,000,000 automobile subway at the intersection of Clark street and Diversey parkway.

CLOSING STREETS FOR PLAY PLACES IS BEING OPPOSED

A plan proposed by the Birchwood Improvement association to close Seeley avenue between Howard street and Birchwood avenue and Parkhurst avenue between Home and Rogers avenues from 3 to 6 o'clock each afternoon to provide a safe place for children to play is being given considerable opposition, William F. Lipps, president of the association, said yesterday. Residents on the streets are objecting. They complain that this measure would deprive them of a place to park their automobiles in the evening.

Lake View High Cadet Is Colonel on Brigade Staff

James Brooks a senior in Lake View High school, Ashland avenue and Irving Park boulevard, and a member of the school's R. O. T. C., has been appointed colonel of the brigade staff of the Chicago R. O. T. C. Brooks is also president of the senior class, a member of the basketball team, and was president of the student government body last semester.

Hayt Parent-Teacher Body to Hold Election Tuesday

Officers of the Hayt Parent-Teacher association will be elected at a meeting Tuesday in the assembly hall of the school, 1518 Granville avenue, Mrs. F. W. Eckert, president, announced yesterday. Preceding the election a luncheon will be held for the benefit of the radio fund of the association.

SPIRITED FIGHT IN NORTHBROOK IN TOWN VOTING

Entire Citizenry Expected at the Polls.

The comparatively new village of Northbrook, to the west of Winnetka, promises to be the scene of the closest battle in the coming north shore elections, Wilmette, Lake Forest, and Deerfield will go to the polls the same day, April 16, but in many cases candidates are unopposed.

Two years ago Northbrook turned out all but two of its possible voters and when a deciding vote was questioned in one race it needed only a two man canvass of the town to decide its legality. This year nearly 750 persons, the total balloting power of the village, are expected to vote.

There are two parties in the field. One is headed by President Arthur Pherrien, who is up for reelection. On his ticket for trustees are E. Mueller, A. Kiest and H. Meyer. The other ticket is headed by John Cooky as candidate for president with R. Lauer, H. Johnson and Otto Funke for trustees.

Four Run Independently.

For the offices of clerk and police magistrate there are two candidates, each running independently of the other tickets. They are A. Roehr and E. Wessling for clerk and H. Diehl and H. Sands for police magistrate.

In the city of Lake Forest Mayor A. B. Dick is running unopposed for reelection. Henry Rhode is the only candidate for city treasurer, and Roy S. Wells for city supervisor and A. Dusne Jackson for city marshal also are unopposed.

Francis E. Mannierre opposes W. T. Metzger for alderman of the First ward; Leslie Kelly has the Second to himself; Albert E. Farwell and John Doyle are fighting it out in the Third and Lawrence W. Vaugn has the field clear in the Fourth.

Two Tickets in Deerfield.

The village of Deerfield has two complete slates, the People's party and the People's Economy party. James J. Hood is seeking reelection on the People's ticket with Walter W. Geary as his opponent on the Economy ticket.

Other candidates of the People's ticket are: Village Clerk Alvin W. Knaak; trustees for the two-year term, Edmund H. Selig, Edward F. Segert and A. C. Timm; trustee for the one-year term, Harry Clavey.

Candidates on the People's Economy ticket are: Clerk, Clarence Huhn; trustees for the two-year term, Lincoln Pettis, Seth Gooder and Dr. Walter B. Metcalfe; one-year, Fred Labahn.

Quiet in Wilmette.

Election will be quiet in Wilmette. Most of the present officers are seeking reelection headed by Earl T. Orner, village president, and [illegible] cases opposed. FOREST GIANTS DICTATED NAME OF ELMHURST

Pioneer Paid $1.25 an Acre in 1842.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

A goodly number of passengers got off the suburban train when we reached Elmhurst. We had left the North Western station at 1:30 o'clock. All the way out I had listened to conversation which from its tone I realized must be among neighbors. It was Saturday afternoon and their work "in town" was over for the week.

We arrived at an Elmhurst that was basking in spring sunshine. While the group of youngsters playing marbles in the station park were of an age to have witnessed the erection of "the finest office building in Du Page county"—the Elmhurst State Bank building on the corner—still they would be inclined to take the suburb "as is" pretty much for granted.

Should Gerry Bates return to the suburb of today he would find 16,000 persons, according to estimate, living in the town of which he was the founder, and whose site, back in 1837, he purchased for $1.25 an acre.

Pottawatomie Hunting Ground.

Mr. Bates, we are told, was a "gentleman of the old school," who wore a long tailed coat and a stove pipe hat as he went about the duties of his numerous offices in the locality that, in an earlier day, had been controlled by the Pottawatomie Indians.

Mr. Bates' neighbors came largely from western New York, and it was in deference to them that the township, organized in 1850, was named York.

The name York has survived pioneer days, but, as in the case of more than one Chicago suburb, the town's original title failed to stick. The community was first christened Cottage Hill. Along in 1849 a change was decided and Thomas B. Bryan took it upon himself to pick something more appropriate. His inspiration came from the fact that so many of the townspeople had brought elm saplings from the Des Plaines river bottom to beautify their streets and lawns.

The town saw a spurt of activity when the Galena & Union railway arrived in 1846, but up until 1862 it was said to be just a one street country town, though one of importance, because it was the only place between Chicago and "The Junction"—now West Chicago—where wood and water were provided.

Glos First President.

Henry L. Glos is recalled as a citizen whose activities were of great value to Elmhurst. In 1891 he worked up a sentiment in favor of incorporating the village, became its first president and served in that capacity for more than twenty years.

It was in 1888 that the picture hanging on the wall of the office of Mayor Otto W. Balgemann was taken—a picture of the Elmhurst Harrison Marching club. The club was posed in front of the old Glos block. There were wooden sidewalks in front of the building and the street was unpaved.

"I was old enough at the time so that I vividly remember when the picture was taken," recalls the mayor, "but not quite big enough to wear one of the white beaver hats.

"Who were they? Well, there's Henry L. Glos, twenty years the village president; William Hammerschmidt, supervisor of York township for 20 years; William Ohlerich, tavern keeper; Rudolph Kramer, ran the first meat market; Louis Balgemann, my father, at whose blacksmith shop I burned my fingers on hot irons more than once; C. G. Kircher, connected with the college as houseman; Philip Hahn, old settler; Adam Glos, Henry's father; George F. Heidemann, with flag, now a manufacturer in South Bend; D. Ben Miche, who raised one of Elmhurst's largest families; L. A. Bonte, druggist; D. W. Thoma, on crutches; ran a grocery store; Julius Klein, still here. Then there's——"

Republican Town for 40 Years.

"It must have been a Republican town," I interrupted.

"Still is," assured the mayor.

"Looking at that picture," he went on, "makes me remember the apple orchard in what is now the center of town. We were just a village in the midst of a farming country in my boyhood. We walked on plank sidewalks and everybody kept his cow in the big pasture. The gate was what is now Cottage Hill and 1st street. We herded the cows back and forth along the streets. On the William H. Meyer farm horses worn out from service on the streets of Chicago were sent to get their feet rested."

C. S. Weller, 190 North York street, ranks as one who has lived in Elmhurst for twenty-six years.

"When I came here," said Mr. Weller, "the town had about 1,800 population. As station agent for the North Western I was selling about 100 monthly commutation tickets. The town's greatest growth has been in the last five years. Folks began to come in when we got new improvements—a new water works, lighting plant, and paving for territory that had previously been open space,

WE are very sorry that Mrs. E. W. Koeppel's letter about the bakery sale of the Parent-Teacher association of the Robert Emmet school did not reach us in time for last Sunday's issue. The sale was held Friday, April 5. Items for the Metropolitan section should be in this office not later than Tuesday to insure publication. Mrs. Koeppel stated in her letter that the proceeds of the sale would be used to buy much needed school equipment. We hope we'll be able to boost the association's next affair with a helpful item.

For any number of generations the downtrodden kid brothers and sisters have struggled along with the Big Sister problem, hoping and praying something would be done about it, but nothing ever was. Until today. Annabelle Houser of the 7-A grade of Oliver Wendell Holmes school, Oak Park, has landed on Big Sister with both dactyls and a strophe and the situation is well in hand. Hearken:

Friday night is big sister's delight,
Because this is her chance to go out at night;
My brother and I have to keep out of sight,
Because sister says we don't look just right.

She pins up her hair
And decides what to wear.
To the laundry she goes
To press her clothes;
Then slips them on
And powders her nose.
She puts on her coat,
And out she goes,
Escorted by one of her many beaus.

If you ask us, stranger, we'll say that when Annabelle says 'Giddap' to her pegasus we're a-goin' to step out of the way.

MADIGAN SEES CITY OF MANY TRADE CENTERS

Community Growth Just Started.

George P. Madigan, president of the Garfield Park club and well known west side merchant, has peered into the future of community development in Chicago and prepared for the Metropolitan section of The Tribune a picture of his idea of what is to be. It is his belief that the building up of neighborhood shopping centers has just started. He tells what he expects to see five years hence.

BY GEORGE P. MADIGAN.

A great deal has been written and much more spoken about the trend of the retail business in the city of Chicago.

Our well known statistician, Roger Babson, ten years ago said, "If I were a retail merchant in the loop of Chicago, I would open branches in the outlying areas." While Mr. Babson may have believed that all stores of any great significance would eventually do this very thing, he hesitated to be more detailed in his statement, feeling that his expression might be construed as merely visionary.

This message, or perhaps it might be called a cloaked prophecy, has now become a sound fact, for every day in this great city we find well known merchants and exclusive shop owners migrating to the outlying or suburban communities. Mr. Babson has once more scored by his keen foresight, which, I believe, has again given him claim to the high esteem in which he is held by the business men of the country.

Opportunity Overlooked.

If the business leaders of Chicago twenty to thirty years ago had used the same effort to enlarge the downtown shopping district which is being put into effect today, the business area would have naturally expanded after the manner of every other large city, a shift of the intensified area would have taken place and it would have resulted in a more comprehensive section extending a mile or two in each direction.

It was, however, considered good business prudence in those days for the property owners, business men and big loop interests to prevent the loop from spreading and they attempted to confine the area as much as possible, thereby insuring themselves against a decrease in property values.

Such improvements as the removal of the loop elevated structure, the opening of the north and south streets feeding into the loop, the completion of the outer link bridge, the improvement of South Water street and the sponsoring of a comprehensive subway system would, had they been accomplished in years gone by, have enabled Chicago to develop a downtown business district flexible to its needs.

Loop Now Overcrowded.

As a result of this apparent lack of forethought we now have a condition of an overly congested business and shopping area where the merchants are stepping on each other's toes and are unable to cope with the situation. Instead of a shift or change of a few blocks that probably would have taken place gradually as it did in New York, the business district has jumped about five miles in each direction, developing community shopping centers which have such a firm foothold in these many and various communities that subways, double deck sidewalks, superhighways leading to the loop, cannot and will not stop the momentum of these community developments.

There was a time when State street merchants said that Chicago people would always come to the loop because style was their stronghold and women would tolerate any inconvenience "to patronize this fashion center. The maxim "vanity knows no pain" was discarded with the long skirt and rigidly stayed figure, for the conveniences of modern living have prompted women to accomplish their shopping as well as their household duties in the most time saving and efficient manner.

This is confirmed by the fact that

Junior College Opens in Fall at Lyons High

A new junior college, the sixth in the state, will be opened in La Grange next fall. This was assured by the recent passage of a resolution calling for the founding of such an institution by the Lyons township board of education.

Necessity for a junior college close at hand is evidenced, according to Dr. G. W. Willett, principal of Lyons Township High school in La Grange, by the fact that students are being graduated from high school at such an early age. Seventeen per cent of this year's class will be less than 16 years old when they complete their courses, and 60 per cent less than 18. Parents, he said, are unwilling to send their children away to college at such an early age.

To Use Present Building.

Agitation for a college was begun four years ago, but lack of facilities forced adherents of the proposal to defer their plans. It was revived recently by Dr. Willett. Plans are now to establish the college in the present high school, as several rooms are available in the new addition which will accommodate 900 more students than attend now.

The college will be under the jurisdiction of the present administration, a dean being selected to serve under Dr. Willett.

All instructors will be holders of masters' degrees, and entrance requirements for students will be much the same as those in force at the University of Illinois.

Adopt Association Standard.

Dr. Willett has emphasized the fact that the standards of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools will be maintained, thus enabling students who finish the junior college course to enter the junior class of any college or university in the association.

It is expected that more than fifty students will enroll the first year. The junior college at La Grange will be the sixth in the state, the others being located in Joliet, Cicero, La Salle, Harvey, and Chicago.

Oak Park Pan-Hellenic to Give Banquet April 20

The Oak Park Pan-Hellenic will give its annual benefit bridge party at the Nineteenth Century Woman's club on April 20. Funds will be devoted to the $300 scholarship which the organization offers a girl graduate of the Oak Park and River Forest Township High school, selected for her scholarship, popularity and activities. Serving on the committee in charge are the following: Mrs. J. H. Heindel, chairman; Mrs. Joseph Godfrey Jr., Mrs. M. H. Kemp, Mrs. Lester Holt, Mrs. George Winterholter, Mrs. Walter Barrow, Mrs. William Savage, Mrs. E. M. Crandell, Mrs. M. L. Seder, and Mrs. Robert Preble.

SPEED REPORT ON ROUTE FOR SUPERHIGHWAY

Plan Board Is Fair, Manager Says.

The Chicago Plan commission will be prepared to make its report regarding the proposed superhighway from the loop to Austin boulevard within a few weeks, Eugene S. Taylor, manager of the commission, told members of the Garfield Park club Monday.

The commission is convinced that a superhighway is necessary, but has not yet decided what route it will recommend. It has limited its study to streets east and west between Roosevelt road and Illinois street, Mr. Taylor said.

EUGENE S. TAYLOR.

"Chicago has thirteen highways leading into the city," Mr. Taylor continued, "and 135,000 vehicles use these roads daily. The city needs such a highway for through bound vehicles both to free business streets of fast, through traffic and to allow such traffic to maintain a good speed. Merchants believe that fast traffic shooting past their stores is an impediment to business; if the highway is completed this fast traffic passing stores will be eliminated.

"The highway is essential and very desirable," he said, "but we must study the route with regard to feasibility, cost, and legal complications before coming to a final decision."

Discusses Other Projects.

Mr. Taylor spoke to the Garfield group as a result of an invitation suggested by the recent movement to organize a west side plan commission, according to George P. Madigan, president of the club.

In his talk Mr. Taylor pointed out the fact that the Chicago Plan commission's function is solely to study improvements and make recommendations. He expressed the belief that the west side has not been neglected, as some proponents of the west side commission have charged.

"Thirty-two of the 95 improvements recommended by the commission since its establishment 20 years ago have been on the west side," he pointed out, "and 34 per cent of members of the commission are west side men.

"I am sorry to see sectional prejudice arising," Mr. Taylor said. "What helps one section will help another. The Calumet harbor project, for example, is an improvement which would benefit the entire city, yet some west and north side residents object to paying a tax for what they call a south side improvement. The Chicago Plan is not sectional, and the commission is attempting to carry out the plan as a unit."

Madigan Lauds New Movement.

In answer to Mr. Taylor's statement that the commission is only an advisory body and may only make recommendations to the city council and other governing authorities, hence is not responsible for the carrying out of its projects, Mr. Madigan said that if such is the case, the forming of a west side plan commission is worthwhile and proper.

"In order for the city council to recognize the necessity for improvements and to provide for carrying them out, such improvements must have the support of local groups," he said. "In the past there has been no body to bring out forcibly the desirability of west side improvements. Such should be the work of the new commission. In time it will be recognized as a semi-official body by the council, and will work with the Chicago Plan commission as does the Chicago Regional Planning association."

The Garfield Park club has as yet taken no stand on the elevated highway proposition, Mr. Madigan said, but he ventured the personal belief that, although it is undoubtedly a good thing, such a highway is a state and county problem and not a problem and an expense for the west side alone.

Mr. Madigan opened the meeting by reading a letter from the club to the Chicago Plan commission which he signed and gave to Mr. Taylor. The letter, a result of a resolution adopted by the board of directors of the club, recommended the widening of Kostner avenue from Ogden avenue to Milwaukee avenue.

Cites Necessity for Project.

"Of vital necessity is a wide thoroughfare for automobile traffic from the northwest to the southwest side," the letter said. "It would be ideally situated at Kostner avenue, which is the half section line. This would, of course, be dependent upon the removal of the Chicago and North Western railroad yards north of Lake street.

"After a thorough investigation, we find that Kostner avenue is ideally situated for a boulevard artery, with perhaps the exception of the yards. It would extend from Ogden avenue to Milwaukee avenue, which is also the intersection of Addison street at this point, and would thus serve as an excellent traffic thoroughfare to the north side of the city.

"The present street could be widened by removing several feet of parkways on either side, leaving a reasonable width for sidewalks. So destitute and barren is the majority of the frontage of this street that we believe the advance in property values would make the consent and approval of property owners almost unanimous."

The membership committee of the club reported excellent progress in its drive, and the club voted to extend the time limit until May 1.

FOREST GIANTS DICTATED NAME OF ELMHURST

First Settler Paid $1.25 Acre for Land in 1842.

Mr. Bryan once told me about giving the town its present name and his reasons."

Planting More Elms.

I found that Elmhurst residents, desiring to keep the city outstanding in its growth of elms, are giving their support to a program of planting elm saplings on every lot. The American elm grows to a great height, sometimes to 120 feet, with a reach of 60 to 70 feet from the first branches. This makes the branches arch over the streets. Cottage Hill avenue has been termed by visitors, "the most beautiful street in America."

The Elmhurst Chamber of Commerce, by the way, has adopted a three year program of activities as follows:

The establishment of a white way, beginning with a section of York street; establishment and maintenance of a retail merchants' department to handle all trade activities; the widening of York street when found necessary; proper parking in the business district; beautification of the North Western station; a community chest; appointment of a tax commission to make a study of inequalities and assessment; modification of the zoning ordinance pertaining to apartment houses; the erection of a modern hotel; a "know Elmhurst" campaign; co-operation with college and schools; better express delivery service; maintenance of a traffic policeman at York and Lake streets; uniform closing days for business houses; improvements in conditions on vacant lots; the backing of a bond issue for a city incinerator, for a city hall and for fire apparatus for the southern district of Elmhurst.

Chamber of Commerce Officers.

The chairman of this program committee is William L. Reinhold, who is also first vice president of the chamber. Other officers are W. H. N. Shipman, president; Joseph Reilly, second vice president; A. N. Hammerschmidt, treasurer; J. E. Stubbe, secretary-manager; Harry Robillard, J. C. Licht, M. C. Lockwood, H. C. Hesse, E. J. Bunge, Charles Hubner, W. S. Weller, Ray Soukup, directors.

From its earliest days Elmhurst has taken pride in its churches, its college and schools. When the Hawthorne school burned in 1917 the citizens of Villa Park and Ardmore, as well as those of Elmhurst, saw the possibilities of a splendid community high school, and the York Community High school, erected the following year, is the result.

Members of the faculty are:

Lillian Marie Rhen, home economics; Lois Ashton, Latin; James E. Bennett, commercial; Charles A. Berry, mathematics; Miriam Bonfield, Spanish; Wade Broadhurst, English; Dorcas R. Brown, boys' physical education; Cuba Quincy Canan, Spanish; Ethyl Louise Carlson, student welfare; Stewart D. Cotter, mathematics; Roy De Shane, general science; Jane Dunkle, girls' physical education; Clarence D. East, coach, mathematics; Marie Gustafson, commercial; Helen M. Hatten, Latin; Herbert Hendricks, music; Margaret Holderman, English; Marian E. Johnson, art, modern history; A. Irwin Leishman, shop; Iva McAllister, librarian; Frank Richard Moore, English; Harry L. Olsson, chemistry, physics; W. Russell Palmer, bookkeeping, biology; Doris Petersen, French; Geraldine T. Schmitt, commercial; Ida Lane Settle, mathematics; Maynard Black, assistant physical education instructor; Bohuslav Rozendal, assistant music instructor; Beulah F. Shehan, English; George E. Simpson, general science; Ethel W. Wall, English; Vivian Louise Webster, public speaking; George Ehnebom, history.

Spring? Say It with Pictures and Win Prizes

In the spring a photographer's fancy turns to pictures of the first robin, early gardens, Mary and Jane skipping rope and evidences of spring fever.

The Metropolitan section of The Tribune now offers prizes weekly for spring pictures. The Tribune will pay $5 for the best photograph on this general subject taken by an amateur. It will pay $3 for the second best and $2 for the third best.

Address pictures to Photo contest, Metropolitan section of The Tribune. The name and address of the photographer should be written plainly on the back of the print as well as the names of all persons in the picture.

The contest is open only to amateurs and the editor will be final judge. Theme, treatment, and clearness of the print all will be taken into consideration. No pictures will be returned.

HO, HUM, IT'S LAWN MOWING TIME AGAIN

But Billy Lenoir, Lombard, goes at his spring task with a will and a smile. He was photographed by his aunt, Mrs. Dorothy V. Ballard, 4933 North Keeler avenue, to whom was awarded the first prize of $5 this week in The Tribune's spring picture contest for amateur photographers of the west side. "The Young Scrappers," showing Gus Wahowski (left) and Al Maziarka, and made by Mrs. Peggy Shoevlin 1232 South 50th court, Cicero, won the second prize of $3. The third prize of $2 was awarded to Mrs. V. S. Thorp, 146 Berteau avenue, Elmhurst, for "Lunch Time," showing Margaret Jane Thorp feeding a kid.

MADIGAN SEES CITY OF MANY TRADE CENTERS

Community Growth Just Started.

several large establishments are now locating stores in the outlying districts. The handwriting is on the wall and the loop of Chicago will witness a great many changes in the near future in regard to retailing.

We have heard it frequently said in the past by merchants and manufacturers in all lines of business that due to a certain change in public demand overnight their fortunes have been lost. It might be gathered from this that it was due to conditions beyond control, but upon closer analysis, it will be seen that they did not heed the change which was taking place all around them many months or years before it overtook them, and so did not adjust themselves accordingly."

Irene Castle bobbed her hair long before the war and gradually the American women followed suit; still, millions were lost by American importers of hair nets. Many of the bicycle factories of years ago thought the automobile was a passing fancy, that it would not work, and they continued to manufacture, and attempted to sell, bicycles on a large scale. Fortunes and their owners parted.

Some Examples of Success.

A great number of the tire manufacturers, foolish, began to make automobile tires, and today at least one or two of the outstanding automobile tire manufacturers of the country had their origins in bicycle tires. The first million dollar picture house in Chicago was proclaimed by motion picture men over the country as madness, and they predicted its failure within a year. Today none but the largest houses can satisfy the public, and the smaller houses are closing one by one with no new small ones opening.

The change which will take place eventually on State street will some day be referred to as a change that took place over night, but in reality it has been taking place over a good number of years.

The loop retail trade of the future will be made up of the loop workers and the transients who visit Chicago, which, of course, will in itself be a sizeable business, for Chicago as a convention center, business center and railroad center will surpass any other city in the world.

The people who live in Chicago and its suburbs will continue in an ever larger degree to patronize its newer shopping centers. The extent this will reach in about five years will surpass our wildest imaginations.

TEMPLE JUDEA PLAYERS STAGE COMEDY TONIGHT

"Kindling," by Charles Kenyon, a comedy in three acts, will be given by the Temple players of Temple Judea, 1227 Independence boulevard, at 8 o'clock tonight. This production is the first to be given by the group this spring. It is being staged and directed by Walter Lyons.

The cast includes Jule Rubin, Miss Sonia Hassen, Miss Regina Plaxinsky, Syd Simons, Lee Gorenstein, Samuel Adams, Shirley Brenner, Leo Karlin, Jerome J. Greenberg, and Bernard B. Becker.

The players describe "Kindling" as a "play about the poor and a sympathetic study of their emotions." It was produced at the Cort theater in 1912.

JUDGE FORESEES "LITTLE LOOPS" ALL OVER CITY

"We are coming to realize that everything must not be centered in the loop," Judge Francis B. Allegretti said at a dinner of the Northwest Lions Club Building corporation at the Midwest Athletic club Wednesday night.

"There will be little 'loops' soon to take care of all business in each respective district," the judge continued.

His talk was given as part of the program held to tell northwest side business men of the progress the club is making in the construction of the building now going up at 4300 West North avenue.

William J. Arnold, field manager, reported that the building would be ready for occupancy by Sept. 1 of this year. The judge commended the club on the carrying through of a project which, he said, is certain to be of great benefit to the district.

William J. Sievert, president of the building corporation, was toastmaster at the dinner, which was attended by more than 100 business men of the district who are financially interested in the building.

RAILROADING LIFE BEST, SAYS YOUNG GENT WHO KNOWS

Whether to be a policeman, a fireman, or a railway trainman is a question that has puzzled many a young fellow—young enough to rank the prospect for thrills first in considering the choice of a career.

LOUIS WISE.

On the northwest side is a young man who has settled that question. He picks railroading in preference to being a policeman or a fireman—or even an aviator. And he knows.

He is Louis Wise, 69 years old, 5115 Wilson avenue, pensioned after more than fifty years as a railroad man. If he had it to do again, he'd go in for railroading, Mr. Wise said.

He first felt the lure of railroading when he was 17 years old and living in Lake Forest. Most of his career was spent with the Chicago & North Western, and among his treasures is a letter of congratulation on his record from Fred W. Sargent, president of the lines.

"There have been changes in railroading—changes in everything—since I started to work," Mr. Wise reflected. "Advice? Well, looking back, I'd say the best thing any worker can do is to be honest and tell the truth. If he does that, he'll come out all right."

Answers

Following are the answers to quotations previously published:

Quotation.—When March comes in like a lamb it goes out like a lion.

Answer.—This proverb, in reverse order is found in "The Compleat Collection of English Proverbs" by the English naturalist, John Ray or Wray, who was born in 1628 and died in 1705. The first edition was published in 1670. Later editions appeared in 1742, 1767, and 1813. The proverb runs as follows:

March hack ham, comes in like a lion,
Goes out like a lamb.
March comes in like a lion,
Goes out like a lamb.

—Marguerite M. Nelson, 5129 Cullom avenue, Chicago.

NOTE—Maybe some one can tell the rest of us what "hack ham" means, if anything.

Quotation.—Educate 'em with a krag.

Answer.—This quotation, or rather, "Civilize 'em with a Krag," is from a song which was popular among the United States troops engaged in putting down the Philippine insurrection just after the Spanish-American war. The song, a parody on "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys are Marching," started with:

Damn, damn, damn the Filipinos—

And concluded:

Then beneath the starry flag,
Civilize 'em with a Krag,
And return us to our own beloved homes.

The "Krag" was the Krag-Jorgensen rifle, in general use in the United States army at that time.—Frank A. Post, 332 South Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park, Ill.

Quotation.—Good Americans, when they die, go to Paris.

Answer.—In the sixth chapter of "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," by Oliver Wendell Holmes, is this observation: "There is that glorious epicurean paradox uttered by my friend the historian [John Lothrop Motley], in one of his flashing moments, 'Give us the luxuries of life, and we will dispense with its necessaries.' To this must certainly be added that other saying of one of the wittiest of men, 'Good Americans, when they die, go to Paris.'"

The "one of the wittiest of men" to whom Dr. Holmes referred was Thomas Gold Appleton, born in Massachusetts in 1812.

Emerson says, "Next to the originator of a good sentence is the first quoter of it." Dr. Holmes should certainly be given credit for the life of this quip of Mr. Appleton's. Oliver Wendell Holmes—physician, poet, essayist, novelist—was born in Cambridge, Mass., on Aug. 29, 1809. He was the first real American humorist. He died in 1894.—Mabel Ruth Jackson, 7003 Normal boulevard, Chicago.
